Capital Mobilized to Fight Record Flood; Jap Artillery Shells Guadalcanal Base

Stiff Battle Is Raging, Knox Says, But Reports of Action Still Are Unclear; No U. S. Air Activity Is Revealed; Foe's Fleet Rules Seas

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Guadalcanal airdrome was under Japanese artillery barrage last night—apparently preventing air support to our hard-pressed forces—as strong concentrations of enemy land, sea and air power began heavy assaults on the island.

The Japs opened the fighting on land, the Navy announced, shelling our positions with field guns presumably brought ashore Wednesday morning.

The lone Navy communique of the day, issued at 2:30 p. m., told ominously that "large numbers of enemy troops with equipment" had been landed on Guadalcanal and that artillery fire had started.

It also made it plain that the Japanese still hold unquestioned command of the seas in the Solomons, declaring that "a large group" of enemy ships had been sighted in the northern part of the island in addition to the strong naval forces previously reported in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area.

There have been no reports of American air forces being in operation in the area for more than 48 hours.

The situation looked serious to military men here, although the lack of detailed reports from the beleaguered island made accurate estimates difficult.

Real Battle Under Way

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, asked about the battle at a press conference late yesterday, declared:

"There's a real fight on out there, that's all I can say. It's a stiff fight."

Asked if he thought the island could be held, Knox said:

"I certainly hope so. I expect so. I don't want to make any prediction, but every man out there, ashore and afloat, will give a good account of himself."

When a reporter, misunderstanding him, asked if he had said, "I bet so," Knox replied a bit sharply, "Oh, don't try to pin me down on a specific word."

"Of course, every American hopes we will win," he added. "But there's no concealing there's a good, stiff, tough fight on that has not been determined."

The Navy communique revealed for the first time that we have high-speed motor torpedo boats at Guadalcanal. The little craft attacked Japanese warships off the island Tuesday night and reported one probable torpedo hit on a cruiser.

They attacked the enemy ships while the latter were bombarding our positions on the island—the second shelling given our base in as many nights.

With control of the seas, the Jap men-o'-war can pound the American positions with relative impunity. United States Marine shore batteries—probably 5 and 6-inch guns—have not the range to compete with the long-range guns on enemy battleships and heavy cruisers.

U. S. Holds Only Small Area

One factor in the battle is the limited size of our lines on the island. The American-held area—some 10 miles of beach held to a depth of perhaps four miles—means that all of it can be placed under artillery fire. Japanese 105-millimeter and 155-millimeter guns are undoubtedly keeping the airfield under a barrage, military men said.

Yesterday's Navy communique also told of two minor earlier actions of American planes. On Tuesday afternoon (Washington date as in all days mentioned above) our search planes strafed and damaged nine Jap aircraft on the beach at Rekata Bay. The same afternoon, Navy and Marine Corps dive-bombers, with fighter escort, made two attacks on Jap transports approaching the island. Minor damage was reported and one of our fighters was lost.

The report of the United States motor torpedo boats attacking Jap vessels is the only one of American naval action in the area since a force of United States cruisers and destroyers blasted enemy cruisers, destroyers and transports last Saturday night. This Jap reinforcement fleet was forced to turn back with six to eight ships sunk.

The American cruisers and destroyers have withdrawn from the immediate vicinity of Guadalcanal, and it would be extremely risky for them to return without strong reinforcement.

It is apparent that the Japs have brought great naval strength into the Solomons, and unless Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, in command of United States sea forces in the Southwest Pacific, can muster something comparable, he would be courting disaster to send surface warships to the aid of Guadalcanal.

Loss of the island would be a blow, but the destruction of his fleet would be a stunner.

Enemy Base Much Nearer

Japan can concentrate naval power in the area much more readily than the United States can, for its main advance base is at Truk Island—the enemy counterpart to our base at Hawaii—is only 1200 miles from Guadalcanal. Pearl Harbor is over 3000 miles from Guadalcanal, and Ghormley's fleet base in New Zealand is close to 2000 miles from the embattled island.

Moreover, yesterday's communique said that "a large group of enemy ships" has been observed in the Buin-Faisi area near Shortland Island just south of Bougainville, at the other end of the Solomons, some 280 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

This could be enemy reinforcements en route to the latter island, or a Jap battle fleet waiting for American warships to challenge the Nipponese naval forces in the southeastern Solomons.

However, naturally, nothing is known of the disposition of the American Pacific Fleet. It is possible that our Naval High Command, anticipating Japan's move, has concentrated enough sea power in the Southwest Pacific to close with the enemy fleet in a showdown battle.

$100 Bond Winner To Be Announced In Tomorrow's Post

The Washington Post is awarding a $100 War Bond each month to the Federal employe who makes the most constructive suggestion for the improvement of the Federal service. The judges have selected a winner among the nominations made for this award in September, and tomorrow's Post will carry the announcement of the first award.

135 Lost as Sub Sinks Ferryboat Off Newfoundland

St. John's, Newfoundland, Oct. 16 (INS).—Destruction of the passenger-laden ferry ship Caribou in Cabot Strait between Newfoundland and Novia Scotia by "enemy action," presumably a submarine attack, was announced today in a statement revealing a heavy loss of life in the disaster.

Of the 235 persons aboard, including 191 passengers, 135 were lost, among whom were an undetermined number of Americans.

First American identified among the 36 dead recovered was John Sheppard of Auburn, N. Y.

Some United States soldiers were known to be aboard. Survivors landed at Sydney included 22 members of the Canadian Air Force, 22 Canadian navy personnel, 10 Canadian army personnel and 6 United States service personnel: Capt. E. D. Van Alstyne, K. W. Plitz, G. A. Smothers, F. Childers, M. J. Derwis and F. J. Scheller.

Stalingrad Battle Turns For Worse

Outnumbered Reds Again Fall Back After Fierce Fight In Northern Area

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Saturday), Oct. 17.—The Stalingrad garrison "withdrew from one of the city's settlements" yesterday under the pressure of thousands of "numerically superior" German shock troops who were supported by hundreds of tanks and planes in their furious new effort to split the Red army defenders.

A midnight communique, announcing the third Russian withdrawal in two days, emphasized the peril to the Volga River city now in its fifty-fourth day of siege, and the retreat apparently meant the Russians had abandoned the factory district of northern Stalingrad.

"In the Stalingrad area," the bulletin said, "our troops are repulsing furious attacks by numerically superior enemy forces. According to preliminary data during the day we destroyed 43 German tanks and annihilated about a regiment of enemy infantry.

"After stubborn fighting, our units withdrew from one of the city's settlements."

The Russians said there was only "fighting of local significance" northwest of the city where a Red army offensive against the Nazi flank has been under way for weeks in an effort to ease the pressure on Stalingrad.

Soviet Artillery Active

Two companies of Nazi infantry and 200 Rumanians were killed in that sector, and Red army artillery was reported to have destroyed five tanks, four mortars, 18 machine guns, 2 antitank guns and 28 enemy blockhouses.

Indecisive but heavy fighting continued also in the Mozdok sector of the Mid-Caucasus where the Russians said they killed approximately 400 Germans and destroyed five tanks and an ammunition dump.

On the only other fronts mentioned the communique said 600 enemy troops were slain on the front west of Moscow "by our artillery reconnaissance units and snipers," and the Germans also suffered "many dead" in an unsuccessful attack on the northwestern, or Leningrad Front.

Earlier, the Russians claimed

Battle Begun For Dakar, Germans Say

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 17.—The Vichy radio announced last night that a French naval air officer was killed in combat over West Africa last Sunday, and the Germans prefaced their broadcast of this news with a statement saying "fighting activities have started over Dakar."

Captain Dailliere, described as a flight officer stationed at the strategic base of Dakar, died in an aerial engagement, and while neither Vichy nor Berlin identified his opponent, their meaning was clear—that a member of the United Nations had shot down the Vichy airman.

Fighting French and British military sources here said "no comment" on the report.

For weeks now the Germans have been warning of an impending Allied attack on Dakar, possibly with the hope of gaining concessions for themselves in Africa, and no doubt through genuine fear of a possible Allied second front in that area.

Captain Dailliere "fell in African skies in defense of the French Empire and of French unity," the Vichy radio said in quoting Vice Admiral G. A. J. P. Auphand, secretary of State for the Navy in the Laval cabinet.

The captain commanded the submarine depot ship Jules Verne before transferring to the air force.

Axis broadcasts have said that both American and British troops were concentrated on the frontier of British Gambia, which is barely 100 miles south of Dakar.

American troops also were said by the Nazis to be disembarking in the Belgian Congo and British Nigeria.

House Slated To Cut Draft Age Today

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

House approval for calling 18 and 19-year-old boys into the Army is slated today, following final committee action on both sides of the Capitol yesterday to clear the way for passage of the lower draft age minimum.

Called to meet at 11 a. m., an hour earlier than usual, the House will take up the age-reduction bill under a partial "gag" rule, limiting general debate to two hours and restricting changes in the bill to amendments approved by the House Military Committee or to revision of the age limits.

This procedure was adopted by the House Rules Committee shortly after the Senate Military Affairs Committee approved unanimously legislation similar to that before the House and voted to report the bill to the Senate Monday.

With the draft legislation cleared, Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina announced that the Senate Military Committee will next turn to the general problem of manpower, and open hearings Wednesday on several bills calling for various forms of national service.

At the same time, a Senate Education and Labor Committee heard J. C. Capt director of the census, warn that mothers must join the Nation's labor force, even though they have young children, to help provide an additional four to seven million workers for industry.

Byrnes Puts All Salaries Under Control

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Using plain, direct language, Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes made it clear yesterday that he is the "czar" over the country's cost of living program and that he believes that "keeping prices down" must take precedence over "keeping profits up" at this time.

At the same time, he disclosed that he had arranged with the War Labor Board and the Treasury Department to plug a loophole in the original executive order creating the Office of Economic Stabilization by bringing all salaries under control, and that he was entrusting the task of regulating farm wages to the Department of Agriculture.

Byrnes disclosed his policies and disposition of the salary question at the first meeting of his 14-man Economic Stabilization Board, yesterday. Last night, he dispatched a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Claude A. Wickard informing him that it was "urgent that machinery be set up immediately" to control farm wages.

Control over salaries was split between WLB and Treasury with WLB getting jurisdiction over all salaries under $3000 a year and those salaries up to $5000 a year covered by wage agreements. All other salaries were placed in the hands of the Treasury Department. The original executive order made no mention of salaries under $5000, but gave Byrnes jurisdiction over

McKellar Asks Patronage Plan Extension

Extension of Senate job confirmation to all Government agency positions paying more than $4500 was proposed yesterday with a Manpower Commission deficiency outlay used as the entering wedge.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, author of a Senate confirmation rider on a pending Manpower Commission appropriation, said he thought the same rule should be applied to all upper-bracket Government jobs.

The rider faces a showdown test in the Senate on Monday, when the $15,821,000,000 war deficiency bill is called up for consideration.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who led a successful fight against Senate confirmation of OPA and OCD officials paid more than $4500, was out of town yesterday but is expected to take the floor against the Manpower Commission rider.

Barkley last July persuaded the

Jeffers Orders Rayon Output Expansion

In defiance of powerful Southern cotton interests, Rubber Director William M. Jeffers, it was learned authoritatively last night, has issued orders for launching a program for expansion of rayon facilities for the manufacture of an additional 50 million pounds of this "high tenacity" yarn for use in military tires.

Jeffers, it was learned, made the decision Wednesday, two days after he had been "called on the carpet" by the Senate Agriculture Committee where he was accused by members of the "cotton bloc" of trying to foster a postwar monopoly in rayon, as opposed to cotton, for use as "cord" in automobile tires.

Preliminary Instructions

Jeffers signed instructions that the expansion program should be set in motion a short time before he left Wednesday for a visit to Midwest rubber manufacturing centers. The next day newspapers carried full-page advertisements sponsored by the National Cotton Council of America and the Southern Governors' Conference, calling for a six-week delay in the conversion program during which tests were to determine whether rayon was superior to cotton yarn for use in tires.

Jeffer's instructions were preliminary, to get the program started as quickly as possible, but officials last night admitted that as soon as minor technical points have been cleared up, a formal order will be issued.

Actor 'Bewildered'

Errol Flynn Accused of Raping 17-Year-Old Girl at Party

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 16.—Errol Flynn, swashbuckling film star, surrendered today on a charge of raping a 17-year-old girl at a party and was released under $1,000 bail.

"I'm bewildered," he told reporters. "I can't understand it. I hardly touched the girl."

The complaint, issued by District Attorney John F. Dockweiler, after the county grand jury had failed to indict Flynn yesterday, charged him with raping Betty Hansen, 17, at the Bel Air mansion of Fred McEvoy, wealthy British sportsman, the night of September 27.

She had come here recently from Lincoln, Nebr., to live with a sister, Mrs. Jack Marsden.

"It is obvious," said Dockweiler, "that the grand jurors have not considered the evidence."

Similarly charged and also released on bail were three employes of the studio where Flynn is under contract, Armand Knapp, 16; Morrie Black, 22, and Joseph Geraldi, 20. Dockweiler said they had confessed attacking the Hansen girl after the night of the party.

In California the legally termed age of consent is 18 years. A sexual offense against a girl under that age, regardless of consent, becomes statutory rape, the district attorney's office explained.

3 Dead, Thousands Homeless, Heavy Property Toll Taken in 3 States; Full Fury Due to Hit Here at 8 A. M.; All Bridges Still Open Today

(Pictures, Other Stories on Pages 2, 10.)

By Thomas McBride
Post Staff Writer

Washington and the surrounding area stood mobilized early today to battle the worst flood ever to sweep down the Potomac, ready for a 28-foot crest—which, though identical with the 1936 torrent mark at Leiter Gauge, will be higher by a foot when it reaches downtown Washington.

Full fury of the roiling waters, which already have taken four lives and have done immense property damage in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, will be felt here at 8 a. m., the Weather Bureau and the Army Engineers said late last night.

The change in the crest, originally predicted at 29 feet, is due to the Shenandoah crest rolling into the Potomac ahead of the upper Potomac's crest. Wind and tide conditions at D. C. tidewater will make the difference in the high water mark shown in the downtown area.

Beginning shortly before dark, engineer and maintenance crews of the Federal Works Administration battled, always just a few inches ahead of the encroaching waters, to stem the steadily rising tide before a barricade of sandbags at Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

As the water crept up, inch by inch, bulldozers were thrown into the fight and the entire area around the Navy Building became a scene of fevered activity.

'Spare No Cost, Effort,' President Orders

The workers were spurred on at their seemingly endless task by the realization that President Roosevelt was standing firmly behind their efforts. Earlier in the day the President made a tour of the danger spots about the city and sent a recommendation to the District Commissioners, the Army and the Navy, in which he told them to "Spare no effort or expense to protect the Capital from possible flood damage."

Those known dead were:

An elderly man, identified as Albert Miller, 913 E Street Northwest, about 65 years old, who was seen struggling in the water off the wharf at Twelfth and Maine Avenue Southwest. A police boat was dispatched and the Fire Department rescue squad called, which worked for 20 minutes under Sergeant Baumbach with no results. Miller was admitted to Emergency Hospital and pronounced dead at 11:20 p. m. by Dr. John Horn.

John E. Buell, auto repair shop operator, 7810 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, swept to his death when a flash flood boiled over River Road, where he was attempting to hitch a stalled auto to his tow truck.

Joseph Lamp, lineman of the Northern Virginia Electric Co., electrocuted while doing repair work on a drowned-out high tension line near Winchester, Va.

Car Carrying Six Reported Swept Away

A late and unverified report from Fredericksburg told of two other instances of flood accidents. Three men, unidentified, were reported caught in a truck when flood waters swept through an underpass. Rescue workers there reported seeing five or six persons in a car bearing Florida license tags swept away in a road washout. No further details were available.

Nine families living in the canal and Foxhall Road section, on the river side of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, were evacuated from their homes by the Washington Red Cross chapter. Headquarters for the evacuees was established at the Palisades Park Recreation Center and a mobile kitchen was stationed there.

Fifteen additional families were evacuated from the river front section near Glen Echo. The Office of Civilian Defense at Silver Spring rushed cots and other supplies and the evacuees were comfortably housed for the night at the Glen Echo firehouse.

But there were some old Potomac die-hards on the flats there, too. Three families refused to leave their homes—come hell and high water. They'd gone through the '36 flood, they said, and they were ready to go through this one. Their only concession was in agreeing to remove part of their furniture, the Red Cross reported.

Meanwhile, the Red Cross was doing yoeman service in the vast inundated areas of the Shenandoah Valley, the Rappahannock Basin and at the headwaters of the Potomac. As the flood crest came down the river new towns were added to the roster of aided.

Fredericksburg Completely Isolated

Fredericksburg, Va., was still the hardest hit of any reported at a late hour last night, with the Rappahannock still rising and only a 20-hour supply of drinking water available in the completely isolated city of more than 10,000.

Across the river from Fredericksburg, at Falmouth, 450 persons were said to have been made homeless by a further rise of the Rappahannock. A school gymnasium was pressed into service by the Red Cross to care for 250 of them, with the other 200 taken into private homes.

Point of Rocks, Md., seemed to be the new danger focal point as the hours lengthened last night and the combined Potomac and Shenandoah crests bore down upon the town. Several feet more water than in the devastating 1936 flood was expected by experienced rivermen and the entire town was expected to be under water.

Livestock losses along this section were especially high, for farmers were unable to evacuate stock from the island farms in the river, which were swept clean of everything movable. The islands were entirely inundated, with only tree trunks protruding from the rushing waters.

Montgomery County Red Cross and Civilian Defense facilities joined the District in swinging into action to care for possible refugees along the Potomac. The Red Cross Motor Corps moved a family of seven from Seneca to Travilah. They had taken refuge at the home of a friend, only to find that flooded last night.

Transportation Disrupted Generally

Transportation was disrupted throughout the flood-affected area, but train traffic tie-ups reached an apex around Fredericksburg. This was eased somewhat at a late hour yesterday when the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac tracks, over which the major portion of north-south bound traffic flows, was opened after a 24-hour tie-up.

The Southern and Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads also began move-

Federal Paydays To Be Increased

A new schedule of 20 paydays a month to alleviate shopping, banking and check-cashing difficulties encountered by Government employes was announced yesterday by the Treasury.

The plan for staggering paydays of Federal workers in Washington and vicinity has been approved by President Roosevelt and will more evenly spread the work incident to payment of salaries. The new system will start November 16.

City Mobilized To Battle Record Flood

ment of trains through the valley section of Virginia after long delays caused by washouts and slides, according to the Associated Press.

U. S. Route 11, the most important in the Shenandoah Valley, remained completely blocked from early Thursday, while U. S. Route 1, which runs through Fredericksburg, was closed at that point. Richmond, inaccessible part of yesterday, now may be reached via the Morgantown bridge, where north-south motorists can pick up U. S. 1.

U. S. 40 in Maryland is open all the way, though short detours are necessary at Hancock; Harpers Ferry bridge is closed, probably under water, and U. S. 15 bridge is closed at Point of Rocks.

In Washington and vicinity the road situation was little better. Several roads in Rock Creek Park were closed from 8 p. m. all the way from Broad Branch Road to East-West Highway. The Memorial Highway from the Highway Bridge to Mount Vernon was closed late in the afternoon and the three principal roads of Prince Georges County were blocked by flooded tributaries of the Anacostia and Patuxent Rivers. Traffic to Frederick, Md., over Route 28 was halted at Furnace Forge by flood waters, and several other roads in the county were under water.

All of Washington's bridges, Highway, Memorial, Key and Chain over the Potomac and the Anacostia and Sousa and Benning Road over the Eastern Branch, still were open at midnight.

It had been forecast by District engineers, however, that the Highway Bridge would be closed before the crest of the flood reached here today.

While the structure itself was in no immediate danger, the engineers said there was a possibility that the approach on the Washington side might be washed out.

Ten planes of the Civil Air Patrol, Washington squadron, were ready for any emergency from an early hour last night. Spotted on high ground along the raging Potomac, they were ready to be manned at a moment's notice by 70 CAP pilots.

Located at Frederick, Panneytown and Hagerstown, Md.; Warrenton and Winchester, Va.; Martinsburg, W. Va., and Waynesboro, Pa., they were ready to take the air to assist in locating flood victims or carry serum or important dispatches to isolated communities.

The early morning hours brought a new worry to harried District officials as sanitary engineers declared that the gravest danger to the District, aside from the actual flood waters, was the possibility of water backing up in the city sewer system.

To forestall this eventuality, the usual sanitary sewage was diverted into the fast-moving streams, leaving the main sewer and pumping station free to carry off the storm waters. High dikes were erected around the pumping station, lest the water back into the electrically operated plant and cut off the power.

Engineer department officials patrolled the sewer outlets all night to see that all were kept under control.

In Virginia's inundated areas the health standpoint was of prime consideration, too, as the State Health Department moved swiftly to prevent disease.

Dr. H. H. Henderson, deputy epidemologist of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases in Virginia, made his way to flood-bound Fredericksburg, looked over the situation there and ordered vaccine for more than 10,000 inoculations against typhoid.

Richard Masser, director of the State Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, reported that he had sent engineers into the Luray-Culpeper-Warrenton area and upper Valley of Virginia areas and to Fredericksburg, where no widespread pollution of water supplies was reported.

A Washington chlorinating firm also dispatched representatives to the Fredericksburg area to see whether there was any possible way of protecting the water supplies. Less than a day's supply of water remained there.

Government employes in several buildings were released from work at 3:45 p. m. yesterday, following an erroneous report that bridges across the Potomac would be closed to public traffic at 4:30. Most of the employes at the National Airport also were released early when officials learned that the Mount Vernon Highway would be closed to traffic.

The weary workers at Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue were granted a brief respite for refreshments—in shifts—at midnight, when a Red Cross mobile canteen put in a welcome appearance with hot coffee and soup.

The War Department announced early today that a force of about 800 soldiers and 300 civilian workers have built within six hours on the north bank of the Potomac River a half-mile levee, 6 feet high, on either side of Seventeenth Street to restrain the flooding waters.

General Somervell Acts

The troops had been called out by Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service of Supply, who, with Maj. Gen. W. M. Styer, chief of staff, Service of Supply, inspected the job which began at 4 p. m. Construction was under the supervision of Maj. Donald A. Phelan, District engineer.

Troops came from Fort Belvoir, Fort Myer, the Military District of Washington and the office of the Provost Marshal General. Some of the workers were from the Public Buildings Administration.

Workers labored on the dike under the floodlights of 20 portable light plants and 130 trucks brought fill for the sand bags used. Other equipment included eight fire pumps, four large steam shovels, five cranes and six bulldozers.

Not of Local Origin

Meanwhile, half a block away on Constitution Avenue, a stream of traffic flowed, either unconscious of or unconcerned with the struggle of man against nature going on so near them.

Emphasis on the fact that the flood at Washington was not of local orgiin was highlighted by a late report from the Weather Bureau last night. The 77½ hours of rain up to 1:30 p. m. yesterday, the Bureau said, had registered only 5.4 inches of rainfall—a mere sprinkle compared with the 12 inches which fell in the Shenandoah Valley in 26 hours Wednesday and Thursday.

Harbor Police Kept Busy By Flood

There were two ways for the police of the Harbor Precinct to reach their heavy launch and go into the Washington Channel to work yesterday.

They could wade the length of their wharf in hip-high boots or they could take a rowboat from the station's back door and ride to the bouncing launch.

They remarked that ordinarily everything is so quiet this time of year, October being a generally bright dry month and with the season behind when people get drowned and cause a commotion on the river. When they waded out to the launch yesterday the gray water of the normally well-behaved channel seemed trying to wash the city.

Scores of suave rivercraft had run like ducks from a brood for the middle of the channel and huddled there, in safety from the docks the channel overflowed. The heavy piles at the municipal fish wharf that stand 5 or 6 feet above normal water showed only a few a few inches.

The channel was heavily populated. The growth of the flood brought, it seemed, practically everybody who owned a boat. Many of them stayed, to spend a night in seeing to the safety of their craft.

Proprietors of seafood stores fronting on the channel saw the water cross the wide wharves and, by 7 p. m. reach within 12 feet, in instances, of their back doors. They didn't believe that much damage would result since the channel carries no heavy current.

Its decks high out of the water, the river boat hotel seemed in for no bother. The debris, in the main, went down the river.

Flood Victims Are Sheltered In Fieldhouse

Gus Follis said he managed to get all the furniture out of his house, even though he lost the source of his livelihood—all his boats, his floating pier and the other apparatus used by those who sell live bait to fishermen. It was tough, he said, awfully tough, and then his wife nudged him and asked him if he had told the reporter about "our children."

The "children," he explained in the brightly lighted Palisades Park field house where he and 15 others, mostly women and youngsters, found refuge after their homes were flooded, are the offspring of Daisy, who is part chow and part bird dog.

"Right at the height of everything," Follis smiled, "Daisy had to go and have pups. Eight of 'em. We got them all out, O. K., too, and they're all down there"—he motioned toward the old C. & O. canal—"under canvas with our furniture."

Follis, for instance, who resides at 4100 R Street Northwest in the same section with the other evacuees, is about 50 years old and got out of bed only three weeks ago after a siege of illness. When he left his home in the late afternoon, water from the flood-swollen canal stood 5 feet deep in it.

September and October, he said, are his best months in the live bait business. Now with all his equipment gone and ill health to contend with, he couldn't be very cheerful about the approaching winter.

The evacuees found lodging for the night in the field house on army cots supplied through the Red Cross home service. Also on hand were members of the emergency food and housing committee of the MacArthur Boulevard area, headed by Mrs. F. Gloyd Awalt.

For most of those driven from their homes yesterday's evacuation was an old story. They had the same experiences in the floods of 1936 and 1937.

J. T. Combs, a guard employed by the Veterans' Administration Group, told one and all that, "I'm pretty sick of it. I think I'll get out of there." He was referring to his houseboat at 4126 K Street from which he was driven Thursday night for the third time.

If flood conditions prevent return of the evacuees to their homes tonight—about 16 families are involved—Mrs. Awalt said her committee likely would find them accommodations in neighborhood homes.

Meantime, Mrs. Kathryn T. Mitchell, executive secretary of home service for the District Red Cross chapter, was leading a corps of workers in rehabilitation work.

Post Switchboard Swamped by Calls

The public really wanted to know about this flood.

The greatest deluge of calls to The Post switchboard in recent years came yesterday when word of the impending flood was spread.

Chiefly, it appeared, the inquirers were Government employes, anxious to learn whether the flood would prevent their getting back to their homes on the Virginia side. Equally, from the other side of the river, came calls from those anxious to know how long it would be before the flood barred the road into Washington.

The Weather Bureau, with an unprecedented number of inquiries all day long, kept its switchboard open all night. It also was compelled to install additional phone lines.

Japs Shelling U. S. Airdrome

There is nothing as yet to indicate such a massing of American strength, however.

The matter of air control over the Solomons will be of the greatest importance, of course, in setting the issue. Whether either side can gain superiority is not yet clear.

Apparently, aerial operations from Guadalcanal airfield have been greatly limited if not blocked during the past two days, for there have been no reports of our planes being in combat. This, it would seem, is the result of the bombardment and bombings given it by the Japs.

Such shelling as it must be receiving now from enemy field artillery will make it difficult to keep in operation, particularly for bombers.

American land-based air support, therefore, probably will have to come largely from our base at Espiritu Santo in the New Hebrides, about 500 miles away, and New Caledonia, nearly twice as far. Army Flying Fortresses can negotiate these distances without difficulty.

Japanese air power is coming from bases in Bougainville and Buka, 300 to 400 miles away. Enemy fighters have been making the trip with "belly" gas tanks, but can stay only a short time over the island.

No aircraft carriers, either American or Japanese, have been reported in the area in some time, though they may appear at any time.

The Japanese attack on the Solomon Island, military men here note, has followed their usual pattern of concentrating great strength on a single objective. Apparently, they have pulled most of their air force out of New Guinea and elsewhere in the Southwest Pacific for this operation.

The situation on Guadalcanal itself is further complicated by the difficulties in supplying our Marines and troops there. Aviation gasoline, fighter planes, ammunition and food must be brought in convoys, which may be difficult.

Devotion to Duty Costs Life Of Bethesda Fire Chief in Flood

Devotion to duty cost John E. Buell, 31, Bethesda garageman and chief of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department, his life early yesterday in flood waters on River Road near Cabin John Run, in nearby Maryland.

Chief Buell had been responding to calls from stranded motorists all night, and his wife remonstrated when he started on his last run.

"You had better stay home," she said.

"I can't. There's too many depending on me," he replied.

With a helper, Hammond Tressler, he went to the River Road location where an automobile was nearly covered by water. He attached a tow line and told the helper to start the winch on the tow truck. As the line tightened, the car and Buell rolled into the waters from the flood-swollen Cabin John Run.

Bethesda volunteer firemen and county police searched for several hours before his body was found lodged against a rock about 200 yards away. A certificate of accidental death was issued by Dr. C. E. Hawks, county medical examiner.

County police of the Bethesda substation said that Buell had been of great help to police. "No matter what time it was, he was ready to turn out," they said.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Pauline Lee Buell; two children, John Lee, 10, and Nancy Buell, 5, whose birthday party planned for yesterday was canceled by her father's death; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Buell of East Falls Church, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. Myra Harrison and Mrs. Esther Harding of East Falls Church and a brother, Alden Buell of Washington. A second brother, Whitney, was drowned several years ago at Three Sisters Island in the Potomac.

Buell was a native of Takoma Park, Md., but had lived most of his life in East Falls Church. He moved to Bethesda about 11 years ago when he married, and several years ago started his own garage.

He was one of the first firemen to arrive at the scene of the Dickerson train wreck and worked all day rescuing victims and wetting down debris.

Potomac's Rampage Recalls Another Deluge Here—in 1936

"It'll be worse than the '36 flood."

"Worse than the '36 flood!"

"Gosh, remember the '36 flood?"

These were the statements, the ejaculations and the questions most heard by residents of Washington yesterday. Talk of the flood has replaced the war in general, the second front in particular and (My gawsh, look how prices are risin!) . . . as the principal topics of conversation about the Capital City.

For residents of Washington who experienced the flood of '36 won't forget it in a hurry. It was the biggest news story of the day, and though comparatively few in Washington were affected by it directly, it loomed as large as a topic of conversation as the approaching flood does today.

Prelude to the flood of '36, as dubbed by Edward T. Folliard in a Washington Post story, and immediately accepted as the phrases of the day, came about much as today's flood did. For four days there were lowering skies, sudden downpours that lasted for an hour or two, then a subsidence to a drizzle and hard rain again.

First Reports on March 18

It was on March 18 that first reports of rain falling on melting snow at the headwaters of the Potomac began dribbling in. The forecasters for Washington, however, reported that only a "reasonably high flood stake could be expected."

On March 19 stories of devastation were flashed over the wires from many points in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. They told tales of destruction as did the bulletins reaching The Washington Post wire room last night.

Crowds jammed Key Bridge that afternoon, peering over the rails at the remnants of houses, furniture, outbuildings and dead livestock that rode the churning current far in the van of the actual flood crest.

At 7 p. m. the crest was reached. Old Chain Bridge, closed since early that afternoon, trembled and shook as the waves and currents slapped at its sides, lapped through the floorboards, and streamed wide over the flats on the Washington side, to merge with the ordinarily placid waters of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

It was a field day for the curious. They climbed to the top of the Washington Monument, after jamming its elevators, to get a bird's-eye view of the havoc. They flocked to the bridges and waded in the submerged roadways of Potomac Park to view the torrent.

Federal Triangle was protected by dikes. The Navy Yard was inundated, and the old Washington Airport, site of the new War Department building, submerged. The waters of Tidal Basin rose and lapped about the branches of the Japanese cherry trees.

120 Were Homeless Here

March 20 found 120 persons homeless here, Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station still under water, boys netting small fish on the golf course at Hains Point.

Then the flood became more than a local headline story.

New England and the Ohio Valley suffered the aftermath of the storm which had lashed the Middle Atlantic Coast and the flood refugees toll mounted to 270,000 and damage of 300 million dollars.

Such was the flood of '36.

Levee Road Keeps Water Off Airport

Air travel into and out of Washington was the only form of transportation not affected yesterday by the rain-swollen waters of the Potomac River and its tributaries.

However, weather conditions generally held up a number of incoming and outgoing flights although at 7 p. m. Assistant Manager D. S. Loughborough said "there is now nothing on the ground that should have gone out." The scheduled flights, he said, were not canceled; merely delayed pending a break in the weather.

A levee road encircling the airports acts more or less as a dike against the Potomac, he said, being erected 16 feet above the river's mean low water. Early last night, the Potomac still lacked 6 feet of topping the road, and Loughborough said the possibility of damage to airport runways was extremely slight.

Public Asked To Curb Phone Use

Due to emergency conditions caused by the flood, officials of the telephone company last night requested the public to use their phones only when absolutely necessary.

"We realize some lines are out of order due to flooded basements and resultant damage to inside and outside lines," an official said, "but the telephone company has instruments which instantly locate any non-working phones. Every available emergency crew is on duty in order to keep vital lines open, and all damage is being repaired as fast as humanly possible."

Disorder Reported Sweeping France

Army Flier Wins Silver Star Award

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LIEUT. THEODORE E. BURDA of West Dickerson, N. Dak., was among 11 officers and men awarded Silver Stars yesterday at General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia for their part in the devastating Army Air Force attack on Rabaul in which four Jap ships were sunk or damaged

Frenchmen Challenge Efforts to Drive Them Into Labor for Nazis

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 16.—A wave of disorder and bloodshed was reported in unoccupied France tonight as Frenchmen, goaded into revolt by Pierre Laval's efforts to drive them into labor for Germany, challenged the measures of the government by strikes and violence.

Indicating a suspicion of Allied aid to the dissidents, the government broadcast a warning against retaining and using arms or munitions dropped by parachute.

Such persons would be tried by the special state tribunal created to deal out summary punishment in cases of sabotage and subversive activity, the broadcast said.

Paris and Vichy reports told of Frenchmen, hunger-driven as they are, setting fire to crops and burning wheat warehouses in order to express their desperate disagreement with the government. One warehouse burned was at Perpignan.

Cabinet Change Forecast

One indication that Laval might be slipping was seen in a report from Axis circles at Vichy that Pierre Cathala was considered a likely prospect to head the Interior Ministry—one of the posts Laval now handles.

(A Vichy broadcast, heard in London, said Laval had declared he would not tolerate "any attempt to interfere with public order.")

The most detailed stories of disorder were received in dispatches to the Swiss press.

One account reported that bombs had been thrown and that armed forces called out by the Vichy regime had intervened with guns and grenades to quell some of the more serious outbreaks. Railway stations and other strategic points were said to have been occupied by troops.

Rail traffic was said to have been tied up at Chambery when workers refused to move trains and trouble was reported also in rail yards at Lyon, At Annecy, women paraded with placards reading: "We will not let our husbands go to Germany."

A reliable informant said there were disorders in both occupied and unoccupied France. At St. Etienne, women and children reportedly lay upon tracks, blocking a train bearing their husbands and fathers to Germany.

U-boat Base Reported Destroyed

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Violent disorders against Nazi repressive measures and brutal reprisals were reported today from many parts of oppressed Europe.

Norway—The German submarine building base at Trondheim, site of 34 recent executions, was reported by the Moscow radio to have been burned out of commission for a long time.

Another report said the Germans had ordered radio sets confiscated from members of Quisling's Party in border districts because some Norwegians could not be trusted to tune out "enemy broadcasts." The Quisling government confined 1100 clergymen and replaced them with Quislingists. The Norwegians reported 70 Germans killed at the recent R. A. F. bombing in Oslo.

Yugoslavia—Balkan sources said the Germans executed 500 Serbs, charged with insurrection. Occupation forces were increased. More than 800 were arrested last night in Belgrade and reported implicated in a widespread revolutionary plot.

Turkish reports told of prolonged pitched battles near Sarajevo, birthplace of the last World War, between Axis forces and patriots under Gen. Draja Mihailovic. The nearby mining towns of Kupres and Forcha on the south bank of the Drina River were reported practically destroyed with their important installations in artillery and tank battles between the patriots and Axis troops. The battles in the towns of 25,000 population were reported to have see-sawed 15 days in July.

Rumania—The Swiss Telegraph Agency reported that the mayor of Bucharest, General Foresco, killed himself last night for undisclosed reasons.

Mass Killing of Russians

Occupied Russia—stories of Nazi savagery dwarfed the punitive measures in western Europe.

Russian reports said conditions imposed in German prison camps amounted to mass killings. The Moscow radio quoted excerpts from German newspapers which reported that Latvian and Estonian peasants were forced to surrender their entire crops of grain and potatoes to the occupation army.

Croatia — German occupation troops were increased because of the failure of the puppet chief of state, Dr. Ante Pavelic, to enforce order. Dr. Vladimir Macek, the Peasant Party leaders, was again reported arrested after several thousand of his followers revolted against Pavelic.

Greece—Turkish reports said some French naval technicians and dockworkers had been sent from France via Germany to Greece to restore docks near Athens, destroyed during the invasion. Greek labor was conscripted to work beside the French under supervision of German specialists.

War Sidelights

Leftists' Past Acts Rankle Labor Head

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin declared today that he would never forgive Leftists who, when Britain stood alone, called the war an imperialist struggle. Bevin is a Laborite.

"Left-wing men in the factories were saying it was an imperialist war and were undermining our effort," he said. "I shall never forgive them for that to the day of my death, whatever they have done since or whatever they will do."

Communists retaliated by demanding a reorganization of the Churchill government.

Greeks Battle in Egypt

Somewhere on the El Alamein Front, Egypt, Oct. 16 (INS).—Specially trained Greek desert fighters, eager to avenge the Axis invasion of their homeland, now are in action along the El Alamein battle front, it can be revealed today.

Already they have been in action against German and Italian units and have fought several successful, furious night patrol actions.

Battle in Madegascar

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—British troops, continuing their occupation of Madagascar, yesterday captured Ambositra, 142 miles south of Tananarive, the island capital, an army communique announced today.

"This advance," the bulletin said, "met with the usual number of road blocks and demolitions, but little opposition was offered by French forces until our column was nearing Ambositra." Stiff fighting then developed, the bulletin said.

Attempt at Amity

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 16 (AP).—Several American republics are attempting to adjust misunderstandings between Chile and the United States which grew out of charges of Undersecretary of State Welles that two South American states were permitting Axis agents to spy on Allied shipping, it was stated in informed quarters today.

Cuba, Brazil, Mexico and Ecuador have interceded in an effort to settle the incident, it was reported. actions by Columbia and Venezuela already have been reported.

Smuts May Visit U. S.

London, Oct. 16.—Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, may visit the United States at a later date, it was learned here today. Although Smuts hopes to do so to confer with American war leaders, he admitted that "developments" may make the trip impossible.

Army Approves Toll-Free Bridge On C. & D. Canal

By the Associated Press

A toll-free vehicular ferry service across the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal at Chesapeake City, Md., has been authorized by the Army Engineers, representative Ward (Democrat) of Maryland announced last night.

Ward said the service would be started "in a short time." He said he was notified of the service by the chief of Army Engineers who gave the final approval to a plan discussed at numerous hearings on difficulties of Chesapeake City residents in getting to and from their work.

The service, he said, would be for vehicular and pedestrian traffic and would provide a ready means of traveling about the town, which spreads out on each side of the canal.

Difficulties in travel have existed since last July when a bridge connecting the banks of the canal was knocked down by a large vessel which collided with a pier.

R.A.F. Fliers Attack Axis Supply Train

BURNS IN DESERT—An Axis supply train blazes in the North African desert after an attack by R. A. F. fighters and bombers. New Bomb Used by Nazis Raiding Britain

By John E. Lee
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Oct. 16.—German planes, apparently out to retaliate for the heavy R. A. F. attack on Cologne 24 hours ago, attacked a northeast coastal district tonight, using a new type of explosive in addition to a number of incendiaries.

One town and a nearby village were selected by the Nazi raiders as testing grounds for their new explosive. There was slight damage to some houses.

Heavy explosives were also dropped on another coastal town and incendiaries fell on an inland town, but no casualties were immediately reported. One of the night raiders was shot down.

Following up the R. A. F. night attack against Cologne, the R. A. F., using Mustang planes, this afternoon attacked railroad engines in Holland and bombers attacked a factory at Henglo, in the German-occupied country. All planes returned safely.

Cologne, scene of the first R. A. F. 1000-plane attack of the war, was heavily raided Thursday night by a "strong force" of planes, an earlier announcement said.

The Air Ministry announced that 18 bombers failed to return from the night R. A. F. operations, which included attacks against other Rhineland objectives, indicating that the British striking force numbered in the neighborhood of 400 planes.

Draft Objectors Of Md. Can't Use Absentee Ballots

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—Attorney General William C. Walsh today ruled that a conscientious objector absent from the State by order of his draft board was not entitled to vote in the November election by absentee ballot.

Walsh said the question had never been raised in the State before and, so far as he knew, never in the Nation.

The opinion was contained in a letter to John J. Nowakowski, chief clerk of the Baltimore Board of Supervisors, who had inquired the correct procedure in dealing with a request for an absentee ballot from Arthur K. Taylor, former Baltimorean now stationed at a civilian public service camp at Marion, N. C.

Walsh said he had consulted officials of the Third Service Command, and had received from the commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, a letter stating that conscientious objectors were sent to camps by their draft boards to perform "some work of national importance not directly connected with the mission of the armed forces, which appears to be the status of your correspondent."

Axis Fears New Offensive In Desert

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 16.—Axis radios reported uneasily today that a new Allied offensive was being prepared in Egypt in which United States troops would play a big role, explaining in part the furious air assaults on Malta which have cost the Axis 100 planes this week.

Malta's swarm of Spitfires downed 14 more Axis attackers Thursday.

Two submarines of the Mediterranean fleet sank three enemy supply ships and damaged four others.

R. A. F. fighters and bombers attacked enemy supply columns moving to the Alamein front 80 miles from Alexandria and the bases at Tobruk, Salum and Sidi Haneish.

The intensive assaults on Malta started Sunday with all the appearance of a defensive screen for German sea trains carrying reinforcements and supplies to Marshal Erwin Rommel. The successful submarine attacks seemed to bear out this view.

The uneasy lull in Egypt continued, but there were indications that Rommel still was receiving reinforcements by air. A British communique today reported a Junkers-52 troop carrier was destroyed south of Crete.

Merchant Marine Enlistments in Md. Pick Up Sharply

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—More than 300 Maryland men are reporting to officials of the Maritime Service here each week to enlist in the merchant marine.

Lieut. Jack Kaufman, recruiting director for the Maryland area, said today, "Our young men realize that our merchant fleet is vital to the winning of the war and want to see the job done.

"Recently, we have had a very great increase in the number of applicants coming to our office. This is due partly to the recent speech of President Roosevelt in which he called attention to the work being done by the merchant marine, and partly to the impending draft of 18 and 19 year olds."

Maritime Service officials here said there had been a great number of applicants from among shipyard workers.

"These men say they have been building the ships," one recruiting officer added, "and now they want to sail them."

Six Drowned As Two Tanks Go Off Bridge

By the Associated Press

With the Second Army, Somewhere in Tennessee, Oct. 16.—Six men drowned in the Cumberland River last night when two 28-ton tanks rolled off a pontoon bridge during a blackout movement.

The column of medium tanks was crossing the river on steel tracks floated by rubber pontoons when the tracks of one tank rolled off the bridge treadway.

The resulting shift of weight tipped the bridge and the tank slid into the river. The tank immediately ahead rolled backward into the hole left by the first and also went overboard.

The driver of the tank in the rear quickly threw his machine into reverse and succeeded in saving himself and his crew. Rubber reconnaissance boats were immediately launched from the bank, and five men were saved in this manner. Several soldiers tore off their clothes and dived into the icy waters, but there was no hope of saving the men trapped in the tanks on the river bottom.

Efforts were being made to raise the tanks today. Pending recovery of the bodies, names of those drowned were withheld.

Kiska Again Feels Fury of U. S. Bombings

American forces in the Aleutians are continuing their mericless pounding of Jap-held Kiska—an offensive which observers predicted eventually will drive the enemy completely out of the North Pacific islands—the Navy reported today.

A communique said that in two raids, American Army bombers rained six tons of demolition bombs on the Kiska camp area and strewed incendiary bombs over the island, starting many large fires, while accompanying fighter planes strafed enemy positions, destroying three Jap seaplanes.

One American fighter plane was lost, presumably from antiaircraft fire, for the communique said that no enemy aircraft opposition was encountered.

Another Island Occupied

Meanwhile, a report from headquarters of the Alaska defense command said the Americans have further strengthened their positions by occupying another of the Andreanof islands in the Aleutians.

The island was not named, but the Andreanofs lie within 120 miles of Kiska and when the American forces occupied some of them several weeks ago it is known they established an airfield only 300 miles away from the last remaining Japanese holding in that North Pacific theater.

The Alaskan report said that the new occupation was accomplished virtually without opposition and that one enemy seaplane, which harmlessly dropped two bombs, was forced to flee from American antiaircraft fire.

The Navy's communique in Washington said that the first raid on Kiska was carried out Sunday and that 6 tons of demolition bombs were dropped with unobserved results.

5 Ships Out of Action

The second raid came on Wednesday in which, besides dropping incendiaries and destroying three seaplanes, American fliers observed three beached and two sunken ships in Kiska Harbor, the result of previous American raids.

Weather, presumably, was bad between Sunday and Wednesday, for the Americans, since seizing the Andreanofs, have announced that they are bombing Kiska on every clear day.

Allied Moves Hint of Drive To Oust Japanese From Burma

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Delhi, Oct. 16.—Extensive reconnaissance into Burma and the strengthening of Allied forces trained in "traveling light and living on the country," heightened speculation here tonight on the prospects of a United Nations offensive to drive the Japanese out of Burma, and open the Burma road to China.

The belief that some major operation is pending was heightened by the return of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander in chief of India, from a tour of inspection which took him across the Burma frontier.

The general appeared satisfied with what he had seen, and a spokesman said his journey "was a practical illustration of his recent statement that the reoccupation of Burma is now foremost in his mind."

The Monsoon rains are ending and the season best suited to campaigning is at hand.

United Nations forces have made good use of the Monsoon period. They have gone through rigorous training with light, highly mobile equipment.

The air force cooperating with Gen. Wavell's army is far greater than it was last spring and includes many Flying Fortresses.

In addition, there have been indicatons that heavy losses have been inflicted by United States submarines on Japanese shipping lanes to Burma greatly increasing the enemy's difficulties in moving supplies.

McKellar Urges Senate Grip On U. S. Jobs Be Extended

Senate not to impose the confirmation rule on the price control and civilian defense agencies, with the warning:

"We cannot afford to create the impression that we are more interested in jobs than anything else."

Top War Manpower Commission officials have protested that their projected establishment of 12 regional offices and 125 rural and industrial offices throughout the country to control war manpower would be seriously hampered by the job confirmation requirement. Men sought for their qualifications to head up the offices, slated to draw between $4600 and $8000, could not take office unless the Senate voted "yes" and a single senatorial objection might block an appointment.

Senator McKellar, who voted with the full Senate Appropriations Committee to require confirmation of those heading up the manpower offices, said "it's just poppycock to say patronage is involved."

"Of course, if we require confirmation in one agency, we ought to require it in all," said McKellar. "I'm in favor of that. * * * The Constitution provides for it. * * * Most Senators are far better acquainted with qualified men in their own States than are officials here in Washington."

House Opposition Seen

If the Manpower Commission rider is approved by the Senate, it will meet solid House opposition in conference, it was reliably indicated yesterday.

Opposing the unsuccessful effort to force Senate approval of OPA appointments, Barkley last July told the Senate:

"If we have to confirm every appointee who is paid more than $4500 it means that the Senator from each State must be consulted about the appointments made in his State, otherwise he might have the right to rise and express his objection to the nomination on the grounds that it was personally offensive to him, or for some other reason, which would, of course, be made in good faith."

He said he knew exactly what the country is going to say—"it is going to think that we are primarily interested in jobs."

Willkie Returns To Indiana Home

Richmond, Ind., Oct. 16 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie came back home to Indiana today after a trip around the world and it took a search through his train to find him for a reunion with his wife and son, Ensign Phillip Willkie.

He had planned to leave the train at Dunreith, 28 miles west of here, but Mrs. Willkie and their son were waiting at Richmond.

Not knowing they were here, Willkie remained on the train and there was a hurried search to notify him his family was here.

House Due to Cut Draft Age Today

Hauser, assistant director, urging that funds be made available for an annual sample census, declared that "nobody knows today what the facts are about the labor market in any large industrial center."

Basic Facts Not Known

On this point, Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, chairman of the subcommittee, remarked that it would be "interesting for the country to know that while we're preparing to coerce people into national service, we don't even know the basic facts on which a sound manpower policy should be based."

While the House was expected to complete action on its draft bill, sponsored by Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York, by tonight, the Senate faced the possibility of delaying its final vote on the bill authored by Senator Gurney (Republican) of South Dakota.

Many Lawmakers Away

Minority Leader McNary (Republican) of Oregon pointed out that a number of members had gone home after hearing assurance from the majority leadership that no major legislation was likely to be taken up for several weeks. In this situation, Senator McNary said that while he is heartily in favor of the bill he would feel obliged to see that absentees were given a reasonable time to return for a vote on the draft measure.

Two controversies over provisions of the bill were in sight. One centered on whether there should be mandatory deferment of a student until the close of the school term.

Another threatened over proposals to forbid sending the teenage troops into combat without at least a year of training.

9 Army Men Die In Plane Crash

Warrensburg, Mo., Oct. 16 (AP).—The public relations office at this Army air base today made public the following list of dead in the crash of a two-motored transport plane yesterday afternoon near Chicago:

FBI Hunts Deserter Accused Of Rape, Robbery and Kidnaping

Called One of Most Dangerous, Ruthless Criminals at Large

By International News Service

A nation-wide hunt was ordered yesterday by J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, for Irwin Kadens, 32-year-old Army deserter who was best described as a one-man crime factory dealing in kidnaping, rape and robbery.

KADENS

Hoover, declaring Kadens is "one of the most dangerous and ruthless criminals at large," warned law enforcement officers throughout the Nation to be continually on the alert to apprehend the fugitive.

Among other things, Hoover stated Kadens was responsible for a personally conducted crime wave extending over three States during which he committed kidnaping, criminally attacked four girls, carried out 17 armed robberies and stole 16 automobiles.

According to reports, Kadens began operations on August 16 when he entered the home of a Detroit policeman and stole the officer's gun, complete uniform, badge and handcuffs.

The next day he held up and robbed a Detroit cab driver and stole the cab. Three days later he robbed another Detroit taxi driver of his automobile, only to abandon it later.

His next victims were a couple in a Detroit parking lot on August 21. Binding and gagging them, he took them to Chicago in the stolen car, but criminally attacked the girl twice before they were released.

On August 21 he robbed a Chicago citizen and stole his car, and two days later, still wearing the policeman's uniform, robbed a Chicago mail truck and got away with about $14,000.

Kadens was next seen in Bucyrus, Ohio, on September 15, when he was forced to abandon a stolen car after a gun battle with a deputy sheriff.

On September 23 he robbed another Chicago couple, bound them and drove them to near Winnetka, Ill., where they escaped. Two days later he was blamed with having robbed a Cleveland taxi driver.

Back in Chicago he robbed another couple on September 26 and criminally attacked the girl. He shot a policeman the following day while getting away with another automobile. Then, in quick succession, he robbed another Chicago man, criminally assaulted a girl in Detroit and stole a car in Flanagan, Ill., and used it in making his escape after robbing a Chicago service station.

A third Chicago couple was then robbed and the girl criminally assaulted on October 6 and the following day at gun point he relieved another Chicagoan of his car and $120.

Kadens, a native of Cleveland, who is married and has two children, has boasted that he will not be alive on his next birthday, on October 22. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs about 150 pounds and has brown hair and black eyes. On his right upper lip is a mole the size of a pencil eraser.

Illegal Tires May Be Costly

Motorists with tires not "legally acquired" will lose their gasoline ration books, the Office of Price Administration disclosed yesterday in announcing details of a Nation-wide program for periodic inspection of tires.

The five tires listed by the motorist by serial number in connection with rationing, plus tires acquired through rationing certificates, will be the only "legal" tires.

OPA said the periodic inspection program was designed as a check against illegal use or sales of casings, as well as to keep tires in good repair.

First inspection for all passenger car tires must be made between December 1 and January 31, 1943, with commercial vehicle inspection starting November 15.

After the initial inspection, passenger car owners with the basic "A" ration book will be required to have their tires inspected every four months at official OPA inspection stations.

Passenger car owners with books above the basic "A" must have their tires inspected every two months. Commercial vehicle tires must be inspected every two months or every 5000 miles, whichever comes first.

OPA said official inspectors would be allowed to charge a maximum fee of 25 cents per vehicle in inspections where no tires were removed from wheel or rim. The maximum fee for demounting tires for purposes of a thorough inspection is 50 cents per passenger car tire. Inspectors will be allowed larger fees for demounting truck tires. These fees range to $1 for large truck tires.

OPA said neither private passenger automobiles nor commercial vehicles would be certified for continued operation when tires needed repairs or when mechanical faults caused unnecessary tire wear.

The inspector will note the serial number of tires and compare them with the numbers entered in the owner's records.

"Discrepancies will be reported to the local board," OPA said, "and if the board's records do not show the owner has been issued a rationing certificate for tires since the original registration numbers were set down an explanation will be called for. Unless the owner can show the tires were legally acquired since he registered, his gasoline ration book will be revoked."

Tires worn to the recapping point must be removed for a complete inspection. If a tire is found to be suitable for recapping, the inspector will fill out a form enabling the owner to apply immediately to his rationing board. The inspector must indicate in his report when tires are worn beyond recapping.

When a tire has become unfit for recapping "through no fault of the owner," the inspector may recommend a replacement.

As a guard against "possible dishonest recommendation motorists who get replacements must turn in the old tires to the dealer from whom they were purchased. Turnins found to be sound will be traced back to the inspector and after two warnings for "careless or dishonest inspection," the authority of the inspector will be withdrawn.

More Than 1700 Cots Ready for Service Men Who Will Visit City Over the Weekend

More than 1700 cots will be available for servicemen here this weekend and will be filled to a great extent through the aid of the switchboard of the Servicemen's Lodging Committee with headquarters at 306 Ninth Street Northwest, it was announced yesterday at a meeting of members of Recreation Services, Inc., operating the lodging information unit.

From 6 o'clock tonight through midnight volunteer operators will keep tabs on the absorption of the cots, which will be put up in 13 churches and other meeting houses. Every hour the various groups will call the information clearing unit and report on the number of cots still free. Each bed can be obtained through a 50-cent service charge.

Floyd D. Akers, chairman of the War Hospitality Committee, which is working closely with Recreation Services, Inc., said that a goal of 3000 cots had been set and would more than likely be reached within the next two months. From the Federal Works Agency, he pointed out 600 cots will be obtained, while 500 cots will be purchased from funds allocated by the Community War Fund.

Kahn Is Fined $400,000 on Treasury Charge

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Ellis Kahn, Russian-born former peddler who made a fortune in furniture, lost £100,000 ($400,000) of it yesterday as a fine for failure to offer for sale to the Treasury $135,593 in United States currency.

The prosecution said that Kahn, States concerning accounts was being read by the censor, informed authorities that he had undeclared deposits there.

Besides the fine, he was assessed $200 in costs and sentenced to one month's imprisonment. He was given no time to pay the fine. The alternative to payment is 10 months' imprisonment.

Nonwar Costs Fall, President Tells Congress

By the Associated Press

A Presidential report to Congress yesterday disclosed that 92.4 cents out of every dollar the Government spends in the present fiscal year will go into the war effort.

Nonwar activities will get only 5.2 cents and interest on the debt will require 2.4 cents.

The report was prepared for the Chief Executive by Budget Director Harold D. Smith to show the trend in nonwar expenditures from 1932 through the 1943 fiscal year ending next June 30. The 1943 total of $4,194,000,000 is nearly one billion dollars under the preceding fiscal year and more than a third less than the $6,516,000,000 high mark in 1939.

Mr. Roosevelt had asked that the report be prepared to "provide factual background for an informed public opinion" on the question of expenditures for nonmilitary purposes. Many individuals and two special congressional committees have urged a reduction in these expenditures in recent months.

"The material presented," the report said, "should demonstrate to all persons that the Federal Government began to adjust to new conditions long before Pearl Harbor, whatever they may feel about the size of the reductions."

Of the $80,044,000,000 which it was estimated the Government would pay out in cash in the current fiscal year, 74 billion dollars will be funneled into war channels and $1,850,000,000 will be used to pay interest on Governmental debt.

At the low point in 1934, war expenditures were only 578 million dollars, and it was not until four years later that they climbed to the one billion dollar mark. They reached $6,301,000,000 in the 1941 fiscal year and $26,011,000,000 last year.

The 74 billion dollar total for the present year, the President told a press conference, is 15 billion dollars to 20 billion dollars over the estimate he gave Congress in his budget message last January.

The report, the Chief executive said in a message, should be useful in considering future legislation.

Undoubtedly, reports by special congressional committees interested in reducing nonwar expenditures, Mr. Roosevelt told Congress, helped stimulate a large volume of letters on the subject which he had received from the people.

He said he had asked the budget director to prepare a report on "just what has happened in the field of nonwar expenditures since I assumed the Presidency."

New Propellers Increase Speed Of Army Planes

New York, Oct. 16 (AP). — Six-bladed, dual rotation propellers designed to increase the speed and maneuverability of America's high-altitude fighters, are now being delivered to the Army Air Forces, Robert L. Earle, vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, announced yesterday.

Earle explained the propeller was really two three-bladed propellers mounted one behind the other on coaxial shafts so that three blades rotate in one direction and the other three in the opposite direction.

This, he said, would eliminate the torque, or twist, of single rotation propellers, improving control, particularly for single engine types. The pitch of the new propeller's hollow steel blades is electrically controlled.

Canadian, 20, Bags 29 Planes Over Malta

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Oct. 16.—An easy-going young Canadian with tousled hair officially became top man in the air defenses of Malta today, receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross for shooting down 29 planes.

He is 20-year-old George Buerling of Verdun, Quebec.

Already his name is mentioned with those of Douglas Bader, the legless Canadian pilot now imprisoned in Germany, and the famous Paddy Finucane, the Irish ace who became a legend in Britain before a chance shot downed him off the coast of France.

Buerling shot down three Axis planes Wednesday over Malta before he bailed out of his riddled plane, duplicating the toll he took Monday. All but two of his victories have been scored over Malta where he has been fighting since June.

The British for some unexplained reason nicknamed him "Screwball" and the stories about his methods, philosophy and fighting fame are springing up on all sides.

He never finished high school and thus was ineligible for a commission in the Canadian Air Force. He worked his way to England on a cattle boat and entered the R. A. F.

Last month when his group captain told Buerling he was to receive a commission, the ace replied:

"I'm not material for a commission, sir."

"You're going to get it all the same," was the reply.

He became a pilot officer soon afterward.

A Canadian pilot who has fought beside Buerling ever since he went to Malta described him thus:

"George is the most untidy R. A. F. pilot I have even seen. His hair looks as if it was never brushed and he is careless about his clothes. In fact he is careless about everything but flying. But gee, what a flier!"

The Gallup Poll

British Public Found More Critical Of War Conduct in Recent Months

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 16.—While Americans are not entirely satisfied with all parts of our war efforts, in England public dissatisfaction with the British government's conduct of the war is far more widespread.

Except for one or two brief periods, in the last 16 months the majority of British voters have never expressed themselves satisfied with the way the Churchill government was waging war.

The highest point in the public's approval came in early June of this year, when R. A. F. raids over Germany were being intensified. The low point was in March, just after the fall of Singapore. Today the number approving the government's conduct of the war constitutes only about two-fifths of the total population.

That fact helps to explain the continued public clamor in Britain for a second front—a clamor which Prime Minister Churchill and other British leaders have attempted to quiet.

The majority of Britons have for some time felt that the Allies should try to invade Europe this year. In August, for example, the British Institute of Public Opinion found 60 per cent expressing that belief in a public opinion survey.

However, in spite of the demand for a second front and in spite of the dissatisfaction over the war effort, there is no widespread public demand in England for a new government. Churchill's popularity continues to be overwhelming.

The latest British Institute sounding shows 82 per cent of British voters approving him as prime minister. The percentage has remained unchanged since August.

The British Institute's measurement of attitudes toward the general conduct of the war have been made on the following question:

"Are you satisfied or dissatisfied with the Government's conduct of the war?"

The trend for the last few months is shown below:

	Satisfied	Dissatisfied	Undecided
June, 1942	57%	26%	17%
July	41	42	17
August	45	38	17
Today	41	37	22

Prime Minister Churchill's popularity showed a decline immediately after the fall of Tobruk, but since that dark period, the surveys have found him gaining. The recent trend follows:

"In general do you approve or disapprove of Churchill as Prime Minister?"

	Approve	Disapprove	Undecided
June	86%	9%	5%
July (after Tobruk)	78	15	7
August	82	11	7
Today	82	11	7

Morgenthau, In England, Sees Newsmen

By International News Service

London, Oct. 16.—Henry Morgenthau, jr., United States Secretary of the Treasury, said tonight in a press conference at the Ministry of Information that he came to Britain "on Treasury business" and expects to remain here from 10 days to two weeks.

He made this statement to British and American newspapermen a few hours after his presence in Britain was revealed.

"I came here without a briefcase and on no particular mission," he declared. "I'm just on Treasury business . . . I'll probably stay 10 days or two weeks."

Morgenthau praised the reaction of the American people to the new wartime taxes.

"They've taken the new taxation in very good spirit," he said. "There has been only a minimum number of complaints. Our people have been surprisingly good about it."

Taxes in Britain and Canada, he added, are almost double those of the United States. In response to queries, he declared the Treasury has no direct interest in shutting down gold mines in the United States and added he had "no thought of changing the Treasury's policy of buying all the gold offered at $35 an ounce."

Morgenthau's transatlantic trip was kept a closely-guarded secret. He traveled by plane, arriving in London Thursday when he went into immediate lengthy conferences with American Ambassador John G. Winant. Dr. Harry D. White, an assistant, accompanied him.

He spent several hours today conferring with high British treasury officials after being introduced to them last night at a small dinner given in his honor by Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Beryl Markham Gets Divorce and Marries Writer

Laramie, Wyo., Oct. 16 (INS).—Less than 24 hours after she obtained a Wyoming divorce, Beryl Markham, noted British aviatrix who was the first woman to fly from England to America, today was married in Laramie to Reaoul Schumacher, New York writer and book editor.

The aviatrix won her divorce yesterday from Mansfield Markham, whom she had married in Nairobi, Kenya Colony, in 1927. She charged him with intolerable indignities. The Markhams separated in London in 1929. Markham still resides in London with the pair's young son.

Schumacher, author of the "Design for a Living Universe," had edited the aviatrix's book "West of the Night."

Nazis Again Forge Ahead In Stalingrad Offensive

the recapture of a hill southeast of Novorossisk. There the Germans have been trying to drive along a mountain road toward Tuapse on the Black Sea.

At the northern end of the front, Red Star said the Russians occupied two hills in Karelia, inflicting 300 casualties.

(Reuters reported from Zurich, Switzerland, that the Finnish commander, Baron Mannerheim, had sent a letter to Pope Pius XII broaching the possibility of a separate peace and suggesting that the Pope use his influence with the United States and Britain to obtain favorable terms. The letter was said to have stated that Finland "would soon be unable to continue its superhuman efforts." The report was wholly unconfirmed.)

The critical situation at Stalingrad was stressed in dispatches which said the Germans were driving close to the Volga River on the eastern side of the ruined city.

With their backs to the river, the Russians fought resolutely to check the Nazi spearheads after an early morning Red retreat through several streets of a workers' settlement.

The critical turn in the siege left the defenders with little room to maneuver in the skeleton ruins of the north part of the city.

(The German communique said an armored division had pushed through to the Volga, taking the northern part of a factory suburb containing the large Dzerzhinsky tractor works. Military spokesmen, however, were quoted by Transocean as saying the Red army "is continuing to fight as if nothing had happened." The same spokesmen said two other great factories nearby, the Red October and Red Barricade, were cut off, and that the Russians had made relief attacks to ease pressure on them.)

Northwest of Stalingrad the Russian relief offensive dug deeper into the German left flank "occupying more advantageous positions" and repulsing German counterattacks, the midday Soviet communique said.

The army newspaper Red Star, which never gave credence to the German suggestions that the siege of Stalingrad was about to be lifted, declared:

"The vile enemy aims to capture the city at any cost. The decisive battle for Stalingrad is going on."

Red Star has reported during the lull of several days that the Germans were concentrating new forces for a final bid for victory before the swiftly approaching winter.

Lutherans Honor Mission Founder

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 16 (AP).—Following a day taken up with reports on missions, delegates to the thirteenth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America tonight held a service honoring the memory of Father Heyer, who established a mission in India 100 years ago. The mission is now the largest Lutheran mission in India.

Delegates today heard reports of the board of American and foreign missions, which stated that the war had hampered the missionary work of the church but that nevertheless progress was being made.

"Told Me to Take a Drink"

"'With 'Chichi,' Knapp and I went to the McEvoy estate. We were not invited, but they seemed glad to see us. 'Bus' Wiles, Flynn's friend and stunt man, asked us to stay for dinner.

"Knapp went away and came back with a Miss Boyer. We had dinner. Knapp had told me to take a drink, and I did. After dinner, we went into the living room. Flynn began showing me attention. He told me he was very fond of me and would get me a job.

"He asked me to go upstairs with him.

"Flynn disrobed and then assisted me in taking off my clothes.

"I protested against what he did to me then, but I did not struggle very hard. Later we went back downstairs, and he told me he would call me the next night. I waited for three nights, but he never called."

HELL LOCATED!

Can It Be Seen Through a Telescope?
Where Is It?
How Long Will the Wicked Burn?
Is HELL Jammed Full Now?

Thrilling Lecture

Sunday Night at 7:45

Preachers have spoken a great deal about HELL, but they have never told us where HELL is. Sunday night you will know. Evangelist Boothby will tell you just where HELL is, how many are in HELL now, whether the Devil is in charge, whether HELL will ever burn out, whether the fire burns the meanness out of people, or if they go on burning forever.

Victory Tax Is Approved By Conferees

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House and Senate tax conferees last night approved a 40 per cent combined normal and surtax rate on corporations earning over $50,000, after voting to subject individuals to a 5 per cent gross income levy.

Acceptance of the two key provisions of the Senate's eight billion dollar tax bill cleared the way for final conference approval of the measure this weekend and passage through both Houses next week.

The 40 per cent combined corporate rate displaced earlier House provision for a 45 per cent tax. The Treasury had unsuccessfully sought a 55 per cent combined corporate levy.

Senate Agrees to Swap

In a two-house conference "trade" the Senate's lower rate was accepted, but Senate conferees agreed in exchange to continue the existing capital stock tax and the declared value excess profits tax. The Senate had asked repeal of the latter.

Approval of the existing 24 per cent normal tax on corporations plus a 16 per cent surtax followed adoption without major change of the largest tax increase ever imposed at one time on individuals—the Senate's so-called "victory" levy.

This 5 per cent flat tax on all individual income over $12 a week was approved as a temporary substitute for a sales tax, with which opponents compared it. The gross tax would be in addition to sharply increased individual surtaxes, ranging from 13 per cent on the first taxable dollar to 82 per cent on income over $200,000 and an increase in the normal tax from 4 to 6 per cent.

Conferees estimate the "victory" tax will yield $3,650,000,000 a year, with more than a billion of that amount rebated to individuals after the war or absorbed in current tax credits.

Individual income tax exemptions were lowered in both bills to $500 for single persons and $1200 for married, but the two Houses disagreed on credits for dependents, the House allowing $400 for each dependent and the Senate slashing this to $300. Conferees decided to split the difference and approved a $350 allowance for each dependent.

The higher allowances for dependents will cut the revenue yield of the bill about 110 million dollars, but committeemen said this would be largely offset by continuing the capital stock tax.

The new 5 per cent victory levy would go into operation on January 1, when employers would start making the payday deductions from all salaries and wages in excess of $12 a week, $52 a month or $624 a year. Only minor amendments were added.

Serious Shortage of Many Necessities Can Be Expected Within Next Year, House Agriculture Committee Warns

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Bitterly condemning the attitude of the Administration toward the American farmer, the House Committee on Agriculture yesterday issued a report warning that a serious shortage in many necessities can be expected within 12 months.

Although the farmer is expected to feed the armed forces, the civilian population and many of our Allies, the report said, he finds his labor lured away by high wages in war plants, and his machinery rationed to the point where he can replace nothing.

"Before long, a few million hungry stomachs are going to awaken the people and the programmers to a better understanding and appreciation of those who till the soil," the committee statement declared.

Roosevelt Gets Report

The report, released by Representative Hampton P. Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the committee, was forwarded to President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard; Donald M. Nelson; Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt; Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of the Selective Service System, and to the Congress.

The Nation has ample food and fiber supplies at the moment, the committee found, due to accumulation of surpluses during the last several years, and an exceptionally favorable growing and harvesting season.

But the warning was given:

"The present supplies will be rapidly consumed by our armed forces, by our civilian population, and by the enormous requirements of our Allies. Few people have any comprehension of the magnitude of shipments of foods to our Allies, or the shipments which will be required in the future."

Forced to Sell Farms, Livestock

"Instead of the ample help needed, the farmers are finding it necessary, on account of shortage of labor, to sell their farms, their livestock and their dairy herds.

"Instead of ample tools to work with, the farmers are told that farm implements and machinery will be rationed. Very little has been made available and it now appears that limited repair parts is all they can hope for."

The lack of labor is due in large measure, it was pointed out, to the increasing adjustment upward of industrial wages.

When farmers have asked for machinery, the reply has been that materials are needed for war production. The committee made the strong comment:

"The time has come when these agencies should recognize that necessary food and fiber is war production."

Recommendations were made by the committee that:

1. Directives be issued to local draft boards to place in deferred classification men engaged in the production of vital food and fiber supplies.

2. Farm prices should be raised so that farmers can compete in the labor market, or industrial wages must be brought to the same comparative level of farm wages.

3. United States employment offices throughout the country should cease acting as labor recruiting offices for industrial plants and luring workers away from farms.

State Chiefs Of OPA Fight Reorganization

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

State directors of the Office of Price Administration last night were reported to have mapped out a campaign, calling for support from members of Congress, to induce OPA officials to revise their pending field force reorganization which, as now projected, would strip the State officers of a large measure of their administrative authority.

The campaign, worked out on the basis of advance knowledge of OPA's reorganization plans, was launched by the directors at the opening session yesterday of a two-day meeting of State, regional and district OPA executives. They were summoned to Washington to hear at first hand how OPA intends to exercise its enormously expanded responsibility for rationing and cost-of-living control at "the grass roots."

To bring administration "close to the people," OPA decided to eliminate one of its three "tiers" of administration, leaving 95 per cent of supervision of rationing and price ceilings up to district offices, which are to be greatly increased, with regional directors on the top layer of responsibility outside of Washington.

OPA officials stated that State directors will be retained with more, rather than less, responsibility, being charged, for example, with determination of State quotas under certain rationing programs. But many of the directors take another view of the change. They believe they have suffered a major loss of prestige which they do not expect to give up within a fight.

"In my State, I am just as much a symbol of OPA as Leon Henderson here in Washington is the OPA symbol for the Nation," said one director.

"They have whittled us down so that now we are only a shadow of our former selves," said another.

Many of the directors are politically potent in their home States. All of them were chosen originally from panels submitted to OPA by State Governors, a technique that made trouble for Henderson in Congress inasmuch as a number of Governors belong to the opposite political party of their Senators.

What effect the directors may have on Congress which shortly is expected to be asked for large new appropriations for OPA, remained an open question last night. The office of one New England Senator where the opposition to the reorganization plan is said to be especially strong, warned that any move to eliminate the State director would bring "a declaration of war."

Grim Outlook

On Tuesday of this week Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, told newspapermen at Pearl Harbor that American forces would consolidate their holdings in the Solomons and continue the Pacific offensive. "I have always been optimistic as to the eventual result of this war," he said, "and after actually seeing the people on the spot and talking to them, I have every reason to continue optimistic. I do not mean that we have the Japanese on the run or that we have the upper hand, but I have the utmost confidence that the men there (in the Solomons) will consolidate the holdings that they have got and continue on."

The admiral's statement, despite the admission that our forces did not have the upper hand in the Solomons, was encouraging news. That optimism was fortified on the very same day by Rear Admiral John S. McCain, speaking at a press conference called by Secretary Knox here in Washington. Admiral McCain said that the United States apparently held sufficient superiority in the Solomons "to hold the place." Yesterday Secretary Knox admitted that stiff fighting on Guadalcanal was in progress, but he still clung to the optimistic tone of the admirals.

We can only hope and pray that Admirals Nimitz and McCain were not speaking out of turn, and that the optimism they voiced will ultimately be justified by events. The fact remains that the latest news from the Solomons is far from hopeful. On the contrary, it is ominous. The possibility cannot now be ignored that our forces may be dislodged from the precarious foothold they obtained on Guadalcanal Island at no small cost last August.

It is a military axiom that any objective can be attained if there is a readiness to pay the price that may be necessary. The Japanese know that, even if we don't. Into the renewed Battle of the Solomons the Japanese have thrown everything they have. They have been prodigal of manpower and materiel. We have inflicted heavy losses on them, though not without suffering grave losses ourselves. Nevertheless, they are continuing to pour in reinforcements. We may, therefore, be in for some very bad news from Guadalcanal, news for which the American public is wholly unprepared, since the immediate prelude to the latest events was a flood of optimistic statements that could not but throw the Nation off its guard.

Willkie—Critic

There was an authentic American assenting in the preliminary report that Wendell L. Willkie gave on his return from his singularly successful mission abroad. Doubtless he had heard on his travels of the criticism which attended his advocacy of "prodding" of the military mind. He does not seem to have been fazed by it. Indeed, he justified his remarks by saying, "I have had considerable experience in measuring the responsible judgment of technical men." Then he went on to say, "I think the thing that makes democracy effective is the application of public opinion upon its leaders. I do not think military men are any more sacrosanct than any other leaders."

With that statement there can be only agreement in our free society. The hush-hush attitude which was so commended upon the American people when Mr. Willkie began his prodding is the enemy of democracy. It is likewise the enemy of efficiency. Suppose that that great "typewriter strategist," Lord Northcliffe, had been muzzled either by himself or others in the last war. Mr. Lloyd George probably would never have come to power, and World War I, which till then had been fought traditionally by the British, might have been lost before America came in. Or suppose the civilian strategists in Congress had been awed at appropriation time by the traditionalism of the services to the point of deferring to their expertness. We should today have had fewer modern planes and more outmoded battleships. The civilian as critic, as experience has shown, serves the dual purpose of demonstrating our democracy and keeping the military mind, as Mr. Willkie puts it, "stretched."

What we have suffered from, as Mr. Lippmann said recently, is not enough criticism. Illustrations leap to mind of the troubles we have piled up as the result of this lack of criticism. The application of the Selective Service law is a case in point. There has been an unwillingness to criticize the administration of the law because somehow such criticism sounded unpatriotic. It remained for General Marshall himself to supply the criticism in his testimony on the need for drafting the 'teen agers. Evidently we have been inducting men that on account of their age or ailments are a liability instead of an asset. Why has the country had to wait so long to know these things? Surely because the administration of Selective Service has not been subjected to the exposure which comes from the investigating committees of Congress—those very committees which the President slurred, along with the typewriter strategists. Mr. Willkie's reassertion of the right to criticize has been most salutary.

Young Men

The habit of tardiness in recognizing necessities and then of rushing them onto the statute book when those necessities have become immediate as well as inexorable is illustrated in the current effort to draft the 'teen agers. It would be an act of folly to leave the draft boards to induct the 'teen agers just on the basis of physical fitness. There are other considerations which must be borne in mind. Here is a pool of some 2,500,000 youths upon which this Nation must rely for future leadership. Many of them are in the process of finishing professional training in our colleges. They are our potential doctors, chemists, physicists and technicians generally. If they are inducted, their half-training would be made useless. It thus requires no effort of the imagination to realize that the future progress of the country may depend upon the wisdom and the prudence with which we nurse these fledglings to professional maturity.

General Hershey, head of Selective Service, told the House Military Affairs Committee that there could be no economic discrimination in drafting the 'teen agers. He is, of course, right. And it is true that the waiving of college students would be discriminatory. Not in order to avoid that charge, but as a matter of national interest, however, a youth program—either as an amendment to the Selective Service law or as part of a National Service Act—is urgently needed which will be aimed at the conservation of our embryonic professional talent, wherever it might be. Such a program is required by the exigencies of this war. In addition to the need flowing from the danger of haphazard induction of college youths, there is the need which has been pointed up by the stoppage in the flow of impecunious but worthy high school boys to college.

From time to time this situation has been called to the Government's attention. Boys are being kept away from the colleges by forces operating both inside and outside the campus. Most of the colleges are now accelerating their courses by leaving out the summer vacation. Graduation is therefore possible within three years. But this acceleration, while invaluable in getting young men ready for war tasks ahead, actually means that many a poor but deserving boy is deprived of a college education. For the boy who has to work his way through college usually makes the wherewithal during the summer vacation. If, however, he has no leisure in the summer, he cannot work, and if he cannot work, he cannot go to college. Moreover, work is available to any high school boy nowadays in the factories, and at wages, also, which heretofore would have been regarded as fabulous. Thus, there is a dual reason back of the falling off in college enrollments.

Our educators for some time have been pointing with alarm to this situation. And with every reason. The situation is likely further to deteriorate unless action is forthcoming. It represents a waste of manpower even without thinking of its consequences to peacetime America. It needs no argument to show that a college training is necessary to provide the engineers and managers and specialists and technicians in our war industry. A college training likewise is invaluable training for officers in the new type of warfare. This is shown in the composition of our new Army. Twelve per cent of the selectees are college men, yet of the men chosen from the ranks to go to officers' training schools 80 per cent are college men. In these circumstances it behooves the Government merely as a war measure to maintain and, indeed, to expand the flow of youth to our colleges.

Yet, if the 'teen agers are taken without any safeguards, a hemorrhage from the colleges will be added to the falling off in enrollments. The whole problem is too important to leave to either the draft boards or any directive from Selective Service The unevenness of both policy and administration in connection with the draft does not yield any confidence that in this matter the draft authorities would be either wise or prudent. Congress in this instance should act as the custodian of our potential leadership in war and peace. As it happens, a plan has been knocking around for months upon which statesmanship should seize. It is being pushed by Dr. Edward Elliott, former president of Purdue University, who is now in charge of professional supply and training for the Manpower Commission. Under this plan the Government would subsidize the bright but poor boys who in normal circumstances would try to work their way through college. This would remove any charge of economic discrimination which might be raised by the waiving of capable college boys from the incidence of the draft till their education has been completed.

Hell And High Water

As this is written, all bridges between Washington and Virginia are being watched with the greatest care. Some of them may have to be closed as the police and various rescue and relief agencies prepare to cope with what is probably the worst flood in our history. At any rate, the Weather Bureau estimates that it will be worse than the well-remembered Potomac flood of 1936. The present flood, of course, is the same that struck Cumberland, Md., and other places upstream last Thursday, but since then, of course, the floodwaters have been augmented by the heavy downpour of the past 24 hours. There is, then, little or no chance of quick recession.

The inundation within the city will provide a test for the various flood precautions undertaken in the Potomac area in the past eight years. Up to the moment of writing, the loss of life from the flood appears to be negligible as compared with 1936. That indicates that some valuable lessons at least have been learned. Nevertheless, the damage and delays already occasioned testify that the problem has by no means been mastered.

It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that this flood has wrought more interruption and damage to the war effort in this part of the country than a group of saboteurs could have caused in a comparable period of time. Doubtless, there is a direct connection between the present flood and the excessive precipitation of the past few months. But it has often been shown that in the United States, as in China, floods are far more frequent and disastrous than in many countries with a much higher annual rate of rainfall. Perhaps the reason lies in the deforestation and consequent erosion in both countries.

Why Not Others, Too?

The action of Attorney General Biddle in exempting Italians from the status of enemy aliens appears to have had a useful effect both here and in Italy. In this country the individuals so benefited have been given an added incentive to demonstrate their loyalty to the United States and its institutions. In Italy the point has now been demonstrated that we do not regard ourselves as being at war with the Italian people, but only with the regime they are unfortunate to live under—a regime which has sold out Italy's great birthright for a mess of Nazi pottage.

The consternation which this order has produced in Fascist circles is indicated by the fact that it has been vigorously denounced by the Rome radio as a "buffoon maneuver." It is said to be entirely without meaning since, the Italians are told, only a military order could countermand the restrictions placed on enemy nationals in the United States. This, of course, is nonsense. It proves that Mussolini's henchmen are worried by the move. The Biddle order, together with his Columbus Day speech—a speech which has been translated into Italian and dropped on Italian soil—will help widen the cleavage between the Italian people and the Axis stooges who govern them.

Attorney General Biddle said that the Italians in this country earned this concession by bond purchases and their record under surveillance. He added that he wasn't prepared "to say the same about German aliens in this country." However that may be with respect to German aliens as a whole, there must be many individual Germans—refugees from the Nazi terror—as well as Austrians and others who do not deserve the brand of enemy aliens. They are fully as deserving, it seems to us, of being exempted from that status as are the Italians. Many of these so-called enemy aliens have been among the earliest and most vigorous opponents of the Nazis, and have made real sacrifices to make their hostility felt. Moreover, their countries of origin may conceivably be way stations to Germany when the second front has been established.

OVERTAKE

They have shunted an old slow freight onto track two
For no other reason than to let us bellow by
Because we are the fast transcontinental
And no fit company for tomorrow-will-do stuff.
It does a man good who never was waited for,
Held long in awe, or in a worth way looked up to,
To be suddenly parcel of a thundering thing of steel
That waits for none, that has to have a way cleared.
I think I will shout to the little straggling line
As we whisk them by, from caboose to the smutty engine,
I think I will shout to the red rickety box cars
That we have a haste to make, one hour to their five.
But unexpectedly they are an ill-mannered lot;
Much of this kind of waiting has taught them insolence;
So that before I get a word in they mouth at me
All along the line, and the chorus they throw in my face is
What of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it, what of it—psh!

College Three Times

Thrilled and filled with sympathetic joy by Betty Woodall Bilsemeier's story of her college course, I found myself in the atmosphere of long ago. My own college course was finished at 20, but school and study have always been my dominant obsession and, practically, I have gone over the road three times; the first, of course, for myself, then as the years passed my son received the degree of structural engineer from the University of Illinois at the age of 20. My most precious memories are of his pre-college four years during which we spent the evenings in his little room preparing his next day's high school assignment.

Because it would be necessary for him to support himself at the university he must, beforehand, earn enough for his living expenses. The trite saying that "God helps those who help themselves" was almost marvelously fulfilled as, quite unexpectedly, he was given a free scholarship by a resident Congressman who had it at his disposal and so, very fortunately, he had only his personal expenses to provide for which he did working before and after school.

Then again after many years I found myself once more going through a high school and college course, this time with my grandson who, more than a year ago entered the military service and is now on the Pacific Coast. The memories of my first, second and third trips through school are still very clear and very precious.

I think that other reminiscences from older people would find many interested readers.

Advice To The D. A. R.

If there ever was a time when the Daughters of the American Revolution were in position to prove its patriotism it is now. To accept Marian Anderson's challenge is simply to reaffirm the principle upon which the society was founded.

In 1787, Gen. George Washington in addressing the Continental Congress said, "Let us set standards to which the wise and honest can repair; the event is in the hands of God." This motto of the society is inscribed in marble over the doorway of Continental Hall in Washington. A few years ago, in the face of standards of a discriminating and prejudiced community, the Daughters of the American Revolution refused to follow Washington's advice and surrendered to the traditions of the community. Now they have the chance to set a standard that in some measure would improve the morale of 10,000,000 loyal American citizens and help to confound the enemy aliens in Asia who say democracy is a mockery as far as Negro Americans are concerned.

There is only one answer to Miss Anderson's conditions of acceptance. The Nation and the Daughters of the American Revolution will be the losers, not the artist.

WPA Music Unit

As a lifelong reader and subscriber to The Washington Post, I congratulate you on your article "WPA Music Unit" on your editorial page of October 12. It hits the nail on the head.

The WPA Music Unit has done an excellent job at very little expense but as you and everyone else know the Government has spent no funds for music for any war activities.

All music for war-bond drives and rallies, music for camps and all hospitals has been donated by various musicians' unions headed by that "bad" man Petrillo. Hundreds of thousands of dollars of free services have been rendered through the generous cooperation of the individual union members. There is prevalent a mistaken idea that theaters, hotels and night clubs donate their bands and orchestras leaving the general public under the impression these men are being paid when playing these various benefits.

As a concrete example, members of Local 161, American Federation of Musicians, playing at the Stage Door Canteen, do this on their rest periods, pay their own transportation and have to buy their own dinner if they have time to eat dinner in order to entertain the soldiers.

Now it seems that all this effort upon the part of our musicians is not viewed as necessary to morale building and as long as the Government has abolished the WPA Music Unit it seems it is definite proof that music is not necessary for any of the purposes to which we as members of Musicians Union Local 161, have given our all. As soon as possible I am going to call together our entire thousand members and at that meeting I will read your excellent article and the musicians themselves can be the judges as to just how unimportant their musical contributions have been in the eyes of all concerned.

President, Musicians' Protective Union.

Brutality at Home

It was with great satisfaction and agreement that a countless audience heard our President declare that the brutal enemy ringleaders and their brutal henchmen must be named and apprehended and tried in accordance with the judicial processes of criminal law.

Almost while these words were being uttered a lawless mob of fiendish adult Americans of Clark County, Miss., disregarded the judicial process of criminal law, broke into the local jail, seized and dragged two 14-year-old children through the streets and lynched them by hanging on a limb of a convenient tree.

One can easily imagine the Nazi fiends laughing at our civilization and demanding that we first remove the beam from our eyes so that we might see the inhuman killing of 14-year-old children in America before looking thousands of miles away in foreign lands to find inhuman brutes.

Every effort should be made by Federal and State authorities to bring to justice the leaders of the lynching mob of saboteurs whose act has furnished the enemy with such damaging propaganda.

Prepare For Peace As Well As War

Today our country is in the grip of the hysteria of war; it is difficult therefore for most of us to see things from the vantage of perspective. Only thinkers in righteous detachment can do that.

I have in mind the highly specialized program which institutions of learning are requested to adhere to for the duration of the war. Under the circumstances such requests or suggestions from those in high places are usually demands which cannot be ignored, if the institutions concerned are to escape the stigma of subverter.

During such times it is fashionable to ridicule and to discard certain so-called unimportant cultural expressions in favor of technical pursuits which will insure victory. Studies like history, religion, philosophy and the fine arts—unless they can be distorted—are called "frills" and are placed on the shelf until the more serious task of winning the war is completed.

Shall we ever learn? It is folly for a people at war to repudiate not only the things it needs most but also the things it is fighting to preserve. A memorable instance of this folly is the moral and spiritual collapse of the French Republic which won the First World War, but bled itself white and lost its integrity in so doing. Such reaction is very like that of a man who leaves his only child in a burning house while he goes out to sound the alarm. Of course, if our culture is extrinsic—if it is only skin-deep, we can very easily shed it.

No doubt instruments and technical skill will go far in the winning of battles, but these things cannot win the peace. A victorious war apart from a victorious peace has never been achieved and cannot be achieved. The assets of the one are always counterbalanced by the assets of the other. Only sincere, dispassionate thinkers are capable of taking a long view of the complex, bewildering problems that face us.

War is scarcely waged as an end in itself; not even stark, inveterate militarists are actuated entirely by such a motive. It is therefore a grave error for a people to bend all its energies toward the winning of a war and to neglect the shape and security of the peace which must follow—in other words, to forgo not only the pursuits of peace but to postpone the deliberation of peace under the mistaken notion that peace and war are separate conditions, and that a consideration of the former will interfere with the successful prosecution of the latter. All this is to think amiss. The winning of a war, however costly the venture in materials and however great the sacrifice in blood, is simply a task half done.

In this connection we might take a cue from Plato, who gave philosophers the supreme position of authority in his ideal state. Anyway, the achievements of the thinker could scarcely be worse than those of the technician and the politician, who are largely responsible for our present world order. M. FRANKLIN PETERS,

The Post Impressionist

Alaskan Gardens

As the war road thrusts its rapid way toward Alaska, due to arrive with the winds of winter, contrasting impressions of the far northland crowd to the point of my pen. For gardens intense in color and prodigal in bloom astonish the summer visitors. Once a notorious bad-man town, as the coast landing place for the first route overland to the Klondike, Skagway is today as proud of Mrs. Blanchard's garden as of Soapy Smith's monument to the lurid gold-rush era. Anyone can direct you to it on a quiet street near the edge of town.

Stepping stones lead through the vivid green grass from the gate to to porch where nasturtiums, trained to the roof, form a veil of crimson, orange, rust, amber, lemon and gold. To the left the brilliant abundance of flower and color is intensified by the background of forested mountains crowned with radiant snow against a clear blue sky A dream picture has come true.

The garden is laid out on the usual plans as to grass plot and gradations in height and color. Unique effects are not here attempted, but nature, as it is in Alaska, rewards Mrs. Blanchard's experienced enthusiasm with a swift and ardent hand.

In the early August season the delphiniums in every shade of blue are 8 feet high. The wing-like sweetpea blossoms of crimson, pink and purple hover above our eyes. Next are the spires of many-tinted gladioli and the huge dahlia blooms—pink, red, bronze and cream. Below are flowers of other color ranges from faintly delicate to deep and rich.

Purple aubrietia, deep and brilliant in this climate, thick-growing violas in yellow, purple and lavender varieties, and swaying Iceland poppies of orange, white and yellow, are probably the only unusual plants. Their blooms begin to reach full beauty in the celebrated gardens of Victoria.

In a corner of the garden a hothouse collection of scarlet begonias takes our breath away. Vivid in color and odd and exotic in shape, the flowers may be as large as two widespread hands. They are like scarlet ibis in flight. When Mrs. Blanchard with her blond hair and sky-blue smock flits like a bluebird down the aisles of these intensely scarlet blossoms it is a dazzling sight.

A begonia collection in England has been compared with this one but it is said not to be so rare in color or size of flower, for summer days here are nearly 20 hours long, summer sun is strong and penetrating, and there is at least tentative scientific evidence that snow-water has properties of its own. These conditions combine to make plants fairly spring from the ground, they make for almost tropical growth, and they give intensity in color and fragrance.

In a case of trophies behind the vines of the veranda are awards not only from organizations in Alaska but from distant horticultural associations. Among the many are an award for achievement in dahlia culture from the Dahlia Society of California and another from California for the largest gladioli. Skagway, meaning the Home of the North Wind, is now called the Flower City because of this recognition and because the citizens are clearing away the tumble-down shacks remaining from the gold-rush and are turning the old sites into flower plots that blossom heavily throughout the summer.

Farther north another famous flower garden is held as a memorial to the frail English lady who carved it out of the wildness of the Yukon. Our little mountain-goat of a train climbs the spectacular White Pass over the ruins of the Dead Horse Trail of the Klondikers and gains the icy peaks and upland meadows surrounding Lake Bennett. We go on to Carcross, and board the diminutive steamer plying Lake Tagish and its scenic West Taku Arm which lie between mountains that are carpeted near the foot with unbroken acres of magents firewood, are clothed with dense green forests, and are capped with ermine snows.

In the depths of solitude at the remote end of the lake, a few miles back and north of the freezing blue-greens of Taku Glacier, we go ashore. Here in a narrow ravine, with an August snowstorm falling on the crest of an overhanging mountain, with a veil of waterfall marking the steep mountainside between, with a beaver dam near the rear gate, and shut close in by native growth, is the bewildering Yukon garden. It was literally dug out of this bit of soil by Mrs. Otto Partridge and her husband after a landslide swept away the expensive equipment of their gold mine on the crags above. After their years of travel over the world they had resolved to identify themselves permanently with the Far North. They wished the garden to exemplify the hospitality of the North and to be an element in the fusion of English-speaking peoples. Authors' books and artists' pictures, and signatures in the great registers show that among the hundreds who have shared their garden are members of the English royal family, English and American statesmen, artists of all kinds, and world-famous explorers—especially those who have made explorations in the Arctic lands.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Manpower: Who And How?

THE FIRST question, which will have to be answered correctly before any other question can be answered at all, is: who is to ration manpower? The President has said that "We are learning to ration materials; we must now learn to ration manpower." But who, in fact, is "we"? The clearer we are at the outset on this crucial point, the less we shall have to repeat the fumbling and stumbling by which we have been learning in the hardest and most costly way to ration materials, to deal with rubber, to get ready to begin to control inflation. We can be quite sure that we shall never ration manpower effectively, that we shall not "have the right numbers of the right people in the right places at the right time" unless we start by finding the right men with the right authority right away.

LIPPMANN

For the question is not whether Congress and the country will approve the basic principle that every man and woman is just as liable to national service as the men who are inducted into the Army. On that principle there will not now be a debate like that which preceded conscription more than two years ago. But it is clear from the many bills already introduced in Congress that putting this principle into effect depends upon knowing who is to make the actual policies and who is to administer them.

THE COMMON characteristic of all these bills is that they show no confidence whatever in the ability of Mr. McNutt's Manpower Commission to do the job. Senator Austin pointedly ignores Mr. McNutt and turns to General Hershey and the Selective Service machinery. Senator Taft proposes to abolish the McNutt commission. Even Senator Hill of Alabama, who is the Democratic whip, has a short bill which bypasses Mr. McNutt and vests the whole power in the President. These Senators are expressing the virtually uncontested judgment of informed opinion in Washington. The Manpower Commission today is as little capable of dealing with its task as was the old OPM or the many agencies that once dallied with rubber.

The radical trouble with the Manpower Commission is that it is a collection of pressure groups presided over by a politician who would like to please everyone at once. That is why in the six months of its existence it has been unable to clarify the problem of manpower, much less to take decisions and put them into effect.

LOOK AT the composition of the Manpower Commission: it consists of "a representative of each" of the War, Navy, Agriculture and Labor Departments, of the War Production Board, Selective Service, and the Civil Service Commission. Each of these agencies is a claimant for manpower. Each is asking for men to do its work. Yet the essential function of a manpower commission is to pass judgment upon conflicting claims for manpower. It is impossible to suppose that the representative each of the Army, of the Navy or of Agriculture or of the war industries can be both advocates and judges. Each representative must inevitably argue his cause, and someone else must judge his claim as against that of all the other claimants.

Who is this judge? Theoretically, it is Mr. McNutt, the chairman. But in fact Mr. McNutt is not equal to this responsibility. His record after six months shows that he has been unable to evolve a policy because he has not been able to master the differences of opinion among the claimants. He has sat on all the fences because the business of deciding on which side to come down calls for a coldly scientific and judicial detachment, and a clear conception of the war as a whole, and a capacity for impersonal decision which are rarely found in men who have spent their lives as politicians thinking about how to win and how to hold majorities.

THEREFORE, assuming that Congress and the country are ready to adopt the principle of universal service, the first thing needed is concentrated attention upon the kind of agency which is to be charged with putting it into effect. Without the right kind of agency nothing can be made to work. Only with the right kind of agency will the people, whose lives are going to be affected so intimately, have the confidence which is necessary to insure their support.

The question, then, is how best to go about settling the question of how the agency is to be set up. I submit that this question cannot be answered by the present Manpower Commission, and that it cannot be answered by Congress, and that what is needed as a foundation is the kind of prompt, searching, and dependable inquiry with which the Baruch-Conant-Compton committee cleared up the rubber muddle.

IF WE consider the problem of manpower, we can see, I submit, why the Administration is not now equipped to deal with it. The McNutt Commission consists, as we have seen, of the claimants for manpower. They are also in possession of the chief supplies of manpower, because apart from unemployed women, the older men and the youths, the great bulk of the best manpower of the country is already at work. If it were not, there would be no manpower problem. The real job, therefore, of mobilizing effectively is to decide which of the claimants shall give up manpower to other claimants—agriculture to industry, the civilian service to war work, all of them to the armed services, the services to one another.

Now though all the claimants must be heard and fully consulted, these decisions cannot be made by a majority vote of a board consisting of the claimants. That must mean logrolling and meaningless compromises. The decision has to be made above the claimants: the man or the men who make these decisions have to be carrying out the grand war plan of this country and its allies, and not merely be trying to make working compromises among the claimants. The director of national mobilization, like the director of war production, must be able to judge the conflicting claims in the light of full knowledge of the war program. Therefore, he must not be a mere political mediator among pressure groups.

THE KIND of man needed for this work can best be described if we remember that he is going to have to have the power to draft civilians from one civilian occupation to another. Is it not clear then that he must not be a soldier: that the Army which is only one among several claimants for manpower cannot be given control of the Nation's manpower? Is it not clear that for the same reason he cannot be an employer or a labor leader or a representative of the farmers? Is it not clear also then that among public men he should not be primarily a man who has been concerned with elections and elective office?

Where does that leave us? It leaves us looking for a man, seasoned by public life but with a mind which is primarily scientific in its power of analysis, and a temperament which is judicial in the sense of being able fearlessly to judge and then to decide and to be always concerned with the substance and not with the votes and the headlines.

WE ARE not without such men if we decide to look for them.

China's New Sovereignty

By Selden Menefee

War Aim Realized

LAST WEEK may well go down in the history of World War II as the week when America and Britain opened a full-fledged psychological offensive against the Axis in Europe and Asia.

Heretofore we have contented ourselves with propaganda exposing the Nazis and Japanese, describing our own strength, and making general statements of our intentions such as the Atlantic Charter and the United Nations pact. Now we have committed ourselves to at least two specific and constructive post-war policies: the punishment of Axis criminals but not whole populations, which knocks some of the props out from under Goebbels' back-to-the-wall propaganda, and the abandonment of extraterritorial rights in China, which refutes Japan's claim that our only aim in the Far East is to maintain Western imperialistic privileges.

Of these two, the second is perhaps the more important. It means that we are at last recognizing China as a full ally, with sovereign rights equal to our own. The exemption of American and British citizens from Chinese law on China's own soil has long been a source of irritation to the Chinese, implying as it does racial or national superiority for ourselves. On October 9, only a few hours before the announcement was made, Chungking radio had quoted the newspaper Ta Kung Pao, which outlined editorially a dozen harmful effects of extraterritoriality and asked that such privileges be done away with immediately.

Coming as it did on the eve of "10-10" (October 10, the anniversary of the Chinese revolution of 1911), the new statement of policy had an especially fine effect. It gave tangible evidence that we are ready to recognize the claims of all Asiatic peoples to greater freedom and equality after the war.

This move, combined with Wendell Willkie's visit, provided a badly needed shot in the arm for China's confidence in her Western Allies. Chungking radio, in broadcasts monitored by the Federal Communications Commission and made available through the Office of War Information, was filled with praise for Willkie whose enthusiasm for China's heroic five-year struggle endeared him to all classes of the Chinese people.

Chiang Kai-shek said of Willkie, "He has a sympathetic understanding of our ideals . . . He has brought the Chinese and American people closer together." A Chungking newspaper editorial is quoted to indicate the hopes he has aroused: "Willkie has said the color line should not be the basis for deciding who is one's enemy and who is one's friend. Nondiscrimination is one of the bases of a peaceful world."

EARLIER, the Chinese radio had frequently expressed apprehension as to the Allied war effort. A wave of optimism spread through Free China when we entered the war; but Allied defeats in Hong Kong, Malaya, Burma, the Philippines and the Indies soon dampened enthusiasm for us as allies. The British policy in India, which Chungking has openly criticized, dealt another blow to United Nations prestige. Our failure to hold the Burma Road, and to get war supplies in quantity into China, also provided ammunition for the appeasers still to be found in Chiang's high councils.

The work of the American Volunteer Group and now the Army Air Corps in China, Gen. Stillwell's command of Chinese troops in the Burma campaign, and the American offensive in the Solomons have all helped to offset the bad news in Southeast Asia. But the move to end extraterritoriality is of greater psychological importance than anything we could do just now—short of sending fleets of planes and huge quantities of military supplies, which seems impossible at the moment.

Besides the abolition of extraterritorial privileges, the Chinese government has on record a number of other war aims which it will expect us to support. These include: (1) The ending of all territorial concessions in China, such as Hong Kong and the Shanghai international settlement; (2) independence for Korea and autonomy for the Netherlands Indies; (3) the return of Formosa and Manchuria to China; and (4) an international government with a strong police force to prevent all future aggression.

"Contemporary China," Chungking's official publication in America, has recently displayed some uneasiness regarding our attitude on the Manchurian question. The Japanese device of using the name "Manchukuo," the Chinese paper points out, has been eminently successful as propaganda. People who never think of calling Korea "Chosen" or Formosa "Taiwan" refer quite casually to "Manchukuo"; even the President once made this slip.

IN A SUBTLE way, the very use of the term "Manchukuo" has influenced us to wonder whether or not it really belongs in China. According to Chungking radio, Manchuria occupies a position in China similar to that of New England in the United States. In 1931 at least 93 per cent of the people in Manchuria were Chinese. The Manchus had been completely absorbed by the Chinese settlers, and the only sizeable minorities are the Mongols, Koreans and Japanese. There are still thousands of guerilla fighters in Manchuria, where the Chinese and Koreans are fanatical in their hatred of Japanese imperialism.

When this war is over, the democratic China that is in the making will be the dominant power in Asia. If we are realistic, we will recognize this fact now, and take further steps in support of her eminently reasonable post-war aims. By so doing we will tighten the bonds of Chinese-American friendship. We will also further prove that the third objective of the Atlantic Charter—the restoration of sovereign rights to all who have been deprived of them—applies to them as well as to the people of occupied Europe.

Canada's War Wheels

Travel May Be Rationed

TRAVEL rationing in Canada will be a certainty before long, according to government spokesmen. Like the United States, Canada knows that gasoline and rubber shortages will soon have the effect of placing an unprecedented strain on her train, bus and other public transit facilities.

KEITH

Transportation, important to any civilized nation in either peace or war, is particularly vital to Canada because she is a huge country with a small population strung out in a chain from Atlantic to Pacific. The great majority of Canadians live within a few hundred miles of the American boundary, in a narrow strip of territory that is thousands of miles long. Canada could not survive as a nation without strong arteries of east-west traffic.

The most important units in Canada's transportation system are her two great transcontinental railways—the Canadian Pacific and the government-owned Canadian National. Conceived originally as a short route to the Orient and financed largely by British capital, Canada's railways have played a most important role in shaping the nation's destiny. It was the promise of a railway that induced certain provinces to become part of the Dominion of Canada. It was the railway that made the rapid development of the western prairies. And now it is the railways that must carry a tremendous burden in Canada's war effort.

A MILLION military men a month are now being moved by Canadian railways. It is estimated that altogether nearly 50 million passengers will be carried this year. (This works out to an average of four moves a year for every man, woman and child in Canada.) Passenger traffic has increased 50 per cent over 1941 and 125 per cent over 1939. In May of this year 80 per cent more passengers were carried than in May of last year.

All this peak load has been handled with no disruption of regular service. But it is obvious that facilities are strained to the breaking point. So far only two restrictive measures have been taken. On September 14 reduced railway fares, including special convention rates, were eliminated. Under the terms of the new budget the tax on travel was increased from 10 to 15 per cent. But it is doubtful whether these measures will have much effect on the traveling habits of a Nation with lots of money in its pockets.

It is possible, as the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway told shareholders at their annual meeting, that standards of comfort and convenience will have to be lowered. Britain has found the elimination of sleepers and diners an effective deterrent to unnecessary travel. Or it may be necessary to "ration" long trips, selling tickets only to those who can demonstrate that their journey is essential to the war effort or to vital civilian activity. A plan of this sort is now in opearation in Australia and is being considered by the United States.

THE USE of buses for sightseeing tours was prohibited early last spring. Since it is now virtually impossible for Canada to purchase new buses from the United States, where all her larger buses were made, she must use carefully the ones she already has. This summer the transit controller has rerouted and rescheduled many bus services, abolished duplicating runs, and discontinued some routes altogether. All luxury trips and weekend excursions have been eliminated.

The operation of taxis and drive-yourself cars has also been rigidly controlled. Taxis are prohibited from cruising to solicit fares, from operating more than 15 miles from their home town, from taking sightseeing trips. Owners of drive-yourself cars must retain at all times the gasoline coupon book issued for the car, and they are forbidden from renting cars to any person who owns a car for which a gasoline license has been issued.

The trend away from streetcars has been put into reverse. In every city old streetcars are being resurrected, repainted and put back into service. Rails long in disuse are being put back into operation. Even so, appeals are being made to shoppers and others not on a time schedule to refrain from riding streetcars at rush hours.

Canadians may soon face new restrictions in the use of their passenger cars. Those who ride to business may be forced to share their cars with other workers; those who use cars for pleasure may be taken off the road. The controller of supplies has predicted that at least 150,000 passenger automobiles will be out of circulation by next spring and that tire repairs may be placed on a priority basis. (Universal gasoline rationing has been in force in Canada since April of this year, and the value of the coupon unit has been cut several times.)

ANTICIPATING critical loading on urban transit facilities this winter, the transit controller recently outlined an eight-point program in an open letter to municipal authorities, local transit controllers, and the public. His suggestions were staggered hours for workers in industrial centers and a change in school opening hours, improved regulation of street traffic, reduction in the number of stops made by streetcars and buses, the fullest use of streetcar lines and the minimum use of bus equipment, extension of facilities to be made only to war industries and establishments of the armed forces, improved efficiency in repair shops, parking buses between rush hours instead of returning them to main storage points, appointment of local transit committees. This program has already been adopted in whole or in part by most larger municipalities.

Wickard Asks Pig Crop Rise

By Ovid A. Martin

Associated Press Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard asked farmers yesterday to increase next spring's pig crop 10 per cent above this year's record production and feed it to a heavier weight, but he offered civilians little hope for increased rations of meat.

If the livestock farmers reach the hog goal, it may be possible, the Secretary said, to make more pork available to civilians, but such increases probably would be offset, he said, by reduced supplies of beef and dairy products.

Supplies of meat being released now for civilian consumption were equivalent to 2½ pounds a week per person. Consumer rationing, which is to be instituted about the first of the year, is expected to provide the same quantity.

Emphasizing that war needs of America's armed forces and the United Nations were growing larger and larger, Wickard said civilians would buy much more pork than they are getting now if it were available.

"We civilians may have to depend more on pork as a source of protein and fat," he said, "so it just doesn't seem that we will be able to fill the demands for pork and lard for a long time."

The 1943 spring pig production goal was set at about 68,200,000 head compared with this year's peak crop of 62 million. The Secretary said that a crop of the size asked for and fed to an average of 10 pounds heavier than this year would make possible the slaughter in 1943 of pork amounting to 13,400,000,000 pounds compared with 11 billion.

The Once Over

Imaginary Conversations The President and Mr. Willkie

President—Welcome home at last!

Mr. Willkie—What do you mean 'at last'? You were away from Washington a long time, too.

President—You must be all in from going all out; won't you sit down?

Mr. Willkie—I don't mind standing.

President—Don't make me prod you!

* * * *

Mr. Willkie (sitting down)—Thanks.

President—Well, did you enjoy your trip or were those pictures of you deceptive?

Mr. Willkie—One doesn't enjoy trips like that; they are an ordeal, a sacrifice, a fulfillment of a duty, a great . . .

President—Come, come, Wendell, you and I can be franker with each other than that on reaction to applause.

Mr. Willkie—Oh, well, I suppose I did get a kick out of it. How did things go in America in my absence?

President—I'm not reporting to you; you're reporting to me. Proceed!

Mr. Willkie—I found every country inspiringly united and fully determined to fight to victory. Everywhere I went the people cheered me—beg pardon—cheered you wildly. They found Roosevelt a name to conjure with.

President—They did a little conjuring with the name of Willkie also, I observed.

Mr. Willkie—I never forgot I was merely your agent.

The President—What, never!

Mr. Willkie—Well, hardly ever.

* * * *

The President—How did you find Stalin?

Mr. Willkie—I am confident he is going to stick to me, I mean to us—or rather to you.

The President—And China?

Mr. Willkie—The Chinese are wonderful. They gave me tremendous ovations . . . crowds cheered me at all points . . . it was terrific . . . I was banqueted again and again.

The President—Was there any mention of me?

Mr. Willkie—Mr. President, it was all really for you. They were lauding you, not Wendell Willkie. You know that.

The President—I know it; I was wondering if you knew it!

Mr. Willkie—I was merely your envoy, was I not?

The President—There were times when I wasn't sure. That second front speech bothered me.

Mr. Willkie—I thought everybody agreed on the importance of a second front.

The President—Yes, but that prodding crack?

Mr. Willkie—That was just a figure of speech. Why I've often needed it.

The President—I hadn't noticed it.

Mr. Willkie—Haven't you ever needed to be prodded?

The News Is Grim

The Fight In The Solomons

IN COMMENTING at the time on the tremendous armada they had employed in the attempt to seize Midway last June, Admiral King pointed out that the Japanese never send a boy to do a man's job. What was true then remains true today.

NOVER

At Midway they sought to overwhelm the defending forces by sheer weight of numbers. Such tactics had proved singularly successful on past occasions. Fortunately for us, they did not prove successful this time. In the Battle of Midway the Japanese fleet was repulsed with heavy losses, particularly to its air arm. But bad weather and lack of sufficient striking power made it impossible for our naval and air forces to follow up the victory we had won by giving chase to the beaten enemy.

Midway, therefore, was only a great defensive victory for our side. It was not a decisive victory. The power of the enemy to inflict injury on us had been impaired. It had not been destroyed. Far from it.

WE HAVE a grim reminder of this fact in the events that have been taking place at Guadalcanal.

Last August our forces succeeded in effecting a landing on that island. The operation proved costly. It was nonetheless a welcome development since it represented the first successful offensive operation carried out against the Japanese since the war in the Pacific began. But, as at Midway, we were not able to follow up our victory.

We lacked the striking power to prevent the Japanese from accumulating men and planes and ships in the western Solomons, at Rabaul and elsewhere in the South Pacific within range of Guadalcanal. We found it impossible to prevent the enemy from landing troops on that island at night. We were not strong enough to wipe out the pockets of Japanese who, after the first stage of the battle for Guadalcanal, had taken refuge in the jungles of that island.

THE RESULT was that what had begun as an offensive operation on our part soon became transformed into a defensive action. During the past two months our forces at Guadalcanal were not able to extend their holdings except in minor degree. We had our hands full preventing the Japanese from regaining what had been taken from them.

During that same period and up until the second week in October, the Japanese were also on the defensive almost everywhere in the far-flung Pacific theater.

They had abandoned much of what they had won in their campaign in east central China. They had made no move to extend their holdings in the Aleutians—indeed, had given up two of the three islands they had previously occupied in that archipelago. They had made no move to invade India and Siberia.

THIS activity on the part of an enemy that had previously moved fast and furiously left the impression that the Japanese had become winded by their successes; that they had to a greater or lesser measure overextended themselves; that they were beginning to feel the effects of the war of attrition carried out by our submarines and air power.

All this was no doubt largely true. But the tragic fact remains that the Allies were unable to take advantage of this lull to carry the war to the enemy at more than one or two points. No large-scale offensive was carried out by our side in China, in New Guinea, against Rabaul or the western Solomons.

THE SITUATION at Guadalcanal would be far different than it is had it been possible for us to compel the Japanese to divide their forces, to go on the defensive not merely by their own volition and in order to concentrate their strength against our positions in the Solomons but out of sheer necessity.

As it happened, we were unable to stop the Japanese from using their island bases in the southwestern Pacific as stepping stones for an assault on Guadalcanal, an assault in which, once again, their tactics have been to carry the day, if possible, by overwhelming force plus a readiness to pay any price for victory.

GIVEN the weakening of the Japanese as a result of what had happened at Coral Sea, Midway and elsewhere, they could evidently not afford to undertake large-scale operations against India or Siberia unless and until the menace to their flank represented by the American occupation of Guadalcanal Airport had been removed. They are no longer strong enough, as they were in the period immediately following Pearl Harbor, to undertake offensive operations at several points simultaneously. Thus, instead of the anticipated Japanese offensive to the west or the north, we have had a Japanese counteroffensive against the United States forces in the western Solomons.

In this particular the Solomons action of last August by our Navy represents a long-range gain for our side, since it forced the Japanese to alter their plans. But if we lose Guadalcanal, and that is a real possibility now, this will give us little immediate comfort.

Flood-Harassed Auburn Battles G. U.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

POVICH

The football game of the day would seem to be the affair at South Bend, Ind., where the fighting-mad Irish of Notre Dame will entertain, very roughly, they hope, the Iowa Naval Cadets. A victory over the Navy team today would remove much of the sting from Notre Dame's defeat by Georgia Tech and its tie by Wisconsin.

Notre Dame would be the first team, and perhaps the only team, to defeat Bernie Bierman's admixture of college and pro stars now operating out of the Iowa Pre-flight School. It should be very interesting. Bierman's team slapped down Minnesota and Michigan on successive Saturdays, beating power football of the very strongest kind. At South Bend, they'll be tangling for the first time with the T-formation.

The Irish had little success in their first two tests with their new T-attack, but last week they raced to an easy victory over Stanford and faith in the T was restored. Bierman, top college coach in the country during his long regime at Minnesota, was never asked to beat a T-formation. On the theory that he'll beat Notre Dame's T-attack today, observers will be watching for Bierman's answer to the newest fad of football.

The game with a peculiar appeal in the East today seems to be the one scheduled at Boston, where Boston College takes on one of the new forces of college football—the North Carolina Pre-flight School. Jim Crowley, the former Fordham coach, has the incipient Navy aviators in charge and it will be a clash of unbeaten teams.

On only one basis can the North Carolina cadets be judged, and that is their victory over Harvard for what it may be worth. It's difficult to draw any line on Crowley's team from its tie with the Georgia Pre-flight School. The latter are another Navy cadet team which may be one of the great teams of the country. Not until the season is much older can any accurate line be drawn on these service teams, but the suspicion is that all of them are slightly terrific. At Boston today, Crowley, like Bierman at South Bend, will be up against the T-formation.

Navy, slightly humiliated last week by a Princeton team they were supposed to beat, should be one of today's winners. The Midshipmen take on Yale at Baltimore and Yale was dealt an awful beating last week by the Penn team. At Yale, new Coach Odell apparently has little to operate with except the ivy that climb old Eli's hallowed walls.

It shapes up as a completely triumphant day for Uncle Sam's service academies what with West Point taking on Columbia and a 2-to-1 favorite to defeat same. This may be the best Army team in years despite early graduations, and at Columbia Lou Little has little to offers execpt a passing attack led by the talented Paul Governali, who isn't geeting much protection this year.

Out in the Midwest, where Wisconsin is shooting for a Big Ten title, Harry Stuhldreher may encounter his first defeat of the season. The Badgers take on the Great Lakes Naval Club, which is another of these service teams that are likely to improve tremendously from week to week. Even from this distance it is clear that Wisconsin will take the field as the underdog.

Michigan's defeat by Bierman's Iowa Cadets last week was not the sort of a beating to cause Michigan friends to lose faith and today the Wolverines will be the favorites to beat Northwestern and stay high in the running for the Big Ten title. Minnesota will be a heavy favorite to beat a Nebraska club that is somewhat below the caliber of a long run of good Nebraska teams.

Down South, it will be Alabama vs. Tennessee in the game of the day, with the winner almost certain to get one of the bids for a post-season bowl game of some sort. Alabama will be the favorite to win that one. Vying for Dixie football interest, however, will be the Georgia-Tulane affair. Frankie Sinkwich and his cohorts will be the favorites to beat an in-and-out Tulane team.

Undefeated Colgate doesn't anticipate any sullying of its record at the hands of a Duke team that is below par for Duke teams, but Harvard vs. Darthmouth is rated as a toss-up. A pretty good Pitt team may upset Indiana, but the pregame odds don't say so. Harvard and Dartmouth meet today and whatever happens in that one will occasion no great surprise.

At Griffith Stadium, Georgetown betakes itself on another great adventure. The Hoyas, still unbeaten, but as unpredictable as the Japs' next move, meets up with probably its toughest foe thus far in Auburn. Coach Jack Hagerty says his club has not yet played good football. It will take that to beat Auburn.

On the Pacific Coast, Washington State's undefeated team is racing toward a Rose Bowl game that may never be approved by the military authorities on the coast. Today they take on Southern California, no great hurdle. The team that may be the coast's best is the non-conference member, Santa Clara, which is good enough to be rated the favorite today over Oregon State, who when last seen in the East, were Rose Bowl champions. Stanford, thrice licked, will probably stop its losing streak against Idaho. If Stanford doesn't, that school will probably contribute the T-formation to the scrap drive.

Game Delay Until Sunday Is Possibility

Alabama Team Gets In 8 Hours Late; Originally Scheduled Date Is Probable

Georgetown's unbeaten eleven will play Auburn at Griffith Stadium either tonight or tomorrow afternoon—probably tonight.

Doubt shrouds the specific kick-off time following the Auburn squad's tussle with flood waters at Danville, Va., 275 miles south of the Capital. The Auburn team arrived in Washington late last night, eight hours overdue.

Georgetown authorities broached the possibility of playing the game tomorrow afternoon instead of tonight and expressed the hope that Auburn would agree. Auburn Coach Jack Meagher, however, stated he had no authority to schedule Auburn for a Sunday game.

Meagher, told of the continued rains and the muddy condition of the Griffith Stadium gridiron, agreed to ask Auburn University officials for permission to play tomorrow. He will seek that authority by telephone this morning.

During several anxious hours yesterday, Georgetown almost abandoned hope that it would have an opponent tonight. First reports from the flood-stranded Auburn team were that the railroads could not assure delivery of the Auburn squad in Washington in time for a game tonight, due to inundated trackage south of Washington.

Georgetown will be meeting tonight not only a club that defeated Tulane, 27-13, two weeks ago, but a team that must be the most travel-tossed squad in the Nation. Auburn underwent an all-night day-coach ride for its game with Georgia Tech. Trusting no trains last week for its game with Florida, the Plainsmen set out for the 780-mile trip to Gainesville in rented autos.

Players Delayed

A planned stop at Valdosta, Ga., for practice went awry. The team's equipment, sent by train, arrived at Valdosta on schedule, but the auto caravan containing the players was delayed by various troubles until too late for a workout.

Georgetown coaches are not comforted by the fact that Auburn was beaten by Florida last week. What does disturb them is the fact that Auburn piled up 264 yards despite its failure to score. The Hoyas anticipate an Auburn team packed with power.

Georgetown will be meeting up with an Auburn line which numbers only one regular under 6 feet, and the exception is Capt. Vic Costellos, a guard, who is the top performer in the Plainsmen line.

It will be a battle of the T-formations, with Georgetown and Auburn both committed to the style of play. Auburn has constructed its attack around 170-pounder Monk Gafford, who kicks, runs and passes and is labeled as one of the most dangerous tail-backs in Dixie football. His companions in Auburn's starting backfield are 190-pounder Aubrey Clayton at quarterback, Charlie Finley at halfback, and lanky Jim Reynolds at fullback.

Georgetown Coach Hagerty has been expressing dissatisfaction with the Hoya's play despite their three victories in three games and during this week of practice has attempted to impress upon his squad the high possibility of a beating today.

"It'll take better football than we've shown thus far to beat Auburn," Hagerty told his players yesterday.

There are no last-minute changes in the Georgetown line-up and Hagerty is apparently stringing along with the same line that was given a shoving-around by Manhattan last week. Jack Dornfeld, Bob Barrett, Ed Agnew and McLaughlin continue as Hagerty's starting backfield.

S.M.U. Holds Temple to 6-6 Deadlock

Slim Crowd Sees Mustangs Score In First; Owls Tally in Third

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Oct. 16.—Southern Methodist's Mustangs held Temple University from Philadelphia to a 6-6 tie in the Cotton Bowl tonight. The visiting Owls, getting hot in the second half, easily scored their touchdown and came within an ace of getting another. A slim crowd of only 2,000 watched.

In the first period, after recovering Hubka's fumble on the Owl 19, Collings, S. M. U. sophomore sparkler, ran and pushed to the 5, but the drive fizzled. Later, after a punt exchange, Collings powered to a first down then passed to Simpson who smashed to the 1. Maley drove over. Wright missed the kick.

Temple, aided by two penalties and on a few skittering runs, advanced to the S. M. U. 47, but there the Methodists held. A penalty and a fumble showed S. M. U. back to its own 10, but Miller kicked to midfield. Polidor of Temple ran beautifully for 18 yards, but S. M. U. braced and the half ended, Temple, 0; Southern Methodist, 6.

Temple Scores

After two punt exchanges in the third period, Temple started maneuvering from its own 40. Sutch made 23, then Polidor dashed around left end to the S. M. U. 10. Sutch bucked to the 1, then went over. Beshunsky missed the extra point. Temple was driving hard toward another score as the period ended with the score: Temple, 6; Southern Methodist, 6.

Temple, showing lots of drive, drove from the S. M. U. 48 to the 4, but there the Owls fumbled and the Metohdists took over. After an exchange of kicks, Sutch intercepted Collings' pass on the Temple 30 and ran it back to midfield. A quick kick went out and Sutch intercepted another Mustang aerial. The game ended shortly thereafter with the score tied: Temple, 6; Southern Methodist, 6.

69-Yard Run By Proctor Brings Score

Hurricane Back Gets Away in Third Period For Lone Touchdown In Dreary Game Here

By Bill Burnett

Post Staff Writer

Reserve strength and pleasant weather are not requisites of a winning football combination, it was demonstrated last night by Furman University as it handed George Washington its second beating in a row.

The Hurricanes, with a 22-man squad, ground out a 6-0 victory at Griffith Stadium where the mud was ankle deep and getting deeper by the minute. Less than 1000 hardy fans watched the dreary affair, in which nobody, fortunately, was drowned.

In a contest of line bucks and punting, it was a 69-yard run which eventually settled matters. That was splashed out by Dewy Proctor, the Hurricane's only senior, in the third period. Taking the ball on his own 31, the 195-pound speed merchant waited as though for a reverse.

Proctor Heads Goalward

Either somebody missed his signal or it was an intentional fake. Anyway, Proctor set out through the center of the Colonial line, went down the middle of the field to score. His speed despite the slush was indicated by the fact he was gaining on G. W.'s Jimmy Graham, who gave chase for the last 30 yards. Leon Johnson's extra point placement was wide, but it didn't matter.

A favorite in the light of Furman's slim squad and the fact it was the road team, G. W. took a beating in first downs and yards rushing. Furman's backs forgot about the weather and ran up a 5-3 margin in first downs and were out front by 141 to 92 in total yards gained.

Only three passes were thrown. G. W. tried two, completing one for a gain of 1 yard. The Hurricane's only toss, an ill-advised second-period thing, was snatched out of the air by Don Siebert of George Washington.

Each Offers One Threat

Graham and the Hurricane's Paul Sizemore just managed to keep the customers awake throughout the first half. Despite their excellent punting duel, there were still a few heads nodding in the stands when the whistle sent 22 unidentifiable clods of humanity to the dressing room for intermission.

Each club made one threat in the first half, Furman's being the first, most serious and least assisted by breaks. It came as the first quarter was unwinding after a Graham kick was downed on the Furman 31.

Proctor took his first crack at the Colonial line, slithered off left tackle and was just getting up steam when Chronis brought him down on the 49. It was an 18-yard gain. On the next play Schuyler took a reverse from Barnett and almost doubled Proctor's distance with a 34-yard dash to the G. W. 17. This time it was Hapenowicz who finally ended the run.

Nine more yards were reeled off by Halfback Hamer before the threat dissolved. Then it was Proctor, crossing the hosts' 5, who saw the ball slip from his fingers and disappear under the Colonials' Ed Czekaj.

G. W. Misses Chance

Late in the second stanza, G. W. got a scoring chance, too, but it owed everything to Barnett's fumble of a punt on his own 15. Such a mass of Colonials landed on the ball that no single player was distinguishable. Three tries at the line moved the ball to the 10, but on offside set the hosts back to the 15.

Walter Hareskyo went into the game to try a field goal, but was far short on the first attempt. Furman's ball.

Six College Elevens Are Delayed by Flood

Duke, Florida, Maryland, Auburn, Duquesne And N. C. Pre-Flights Temporarily Stranded

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16.—The travel of a half dozen football teams across Virginia was interrupted today by floods which broke rail transportation in the northern part of the State, but it appeared tonight that all of them would get through in time for Saturday engagements.

Delay here of the Florida squad, which left Jacksonville Thursday to meet Villanova in Philadelphia, forced postponement of that game from tonight until Saturday night. The team spent the day in railway coaches and a hotel here before Coach Tom Lieb obtained Office of Defense Transportation release of a bus to carry the 'Gators through eastern Virginia around the flooded area to Washington.

The Duke team, confronted with a long jaunt to Buffalo, where it is to meet Colgate Saturday afternoon, pulled out in private automobiles about 1:15 p. m. to make the same detour via Tappahannock, Va.

The University of Maryland squad waited the afternoon in Washington before finding place on a train leaving that city at 5 p. m. Team members were to be met by automobiles at Amherst and carried to Lexington for the Saturday game with V. M. I. The Terps were threatened with loss of some sleep tonight in making the connection.

Duquesne, en route to North Carolina, and Auburn, headed for Georgetown, also were held up in Virginia, but reopening of rail traffic indicated they would make their Saturday appointments.

The Carolina Pre-Flight Cadets required 13 hours to get to Charlottesville, Va., but the squad went on through to reach New York tonight.

Mrs. Weible Renominated Golf President

At a meeting of the nominating committee of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Edward Widmayer, chairman of the committee, Mrs. Walter L. Weible of Kenwood was renominated president for the third straight year.

Mrs. J. H. Bullock of Kenwood was also named as first vice president for the third straight year. Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts of Chevy Chase was named second vice president and Mr. G. W. Heiss of Army Navy was nominated secretary. Mrs. E. A. Swingle of Congressional was named treasurer.

All nominations are tantamount to election.

Mrs. Bullock succeeds Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, who resigned. Mrs. Heiss succeeds Mrs. Graham Freer.

Two Interhigh Games Reset For Monday

Because of the weather, the Central-Roosevelt rivalry which was to have headlined a 10-game scholastic football schedule yesterday, was postponed along with a second clash in the interhigh series—Coolidge versus Western. Both games were rescheduled for Monday, if it is a better day, at the Roosevelt and Western stadiums, respectively.

St. John's meeting with Eastern also was put off until Monday. The Gonzaga-Devitt scrap listed for today at Central stadium was postponed until Tuesday, at a field yet to be announced. Tech's trip to Norfolk to meet Maury was postponed indefinitely.

Georgetown Prep and Woodrow Wilson were scheduled for a meeting this afternoon but will delay action until Monday afternoon at 3:45 p. m. on the Little Hoyas' field.

Bierman Attempts to Defeat Irish With His Preflights

Former Gopher Coach Unable to Win Over Foe in Five Tries

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 16.—Bernie Bierman, unable to beat Notre Dame in five tries as coach of the Minnesota Gophers, may have better luck tomorrow with his great array of former collegians and professionals who wear the uniforms of the Iowa Pre-Flight Naval School.

Before 35,000 spectators Bierman will direct his Seahawks against a once-tied, once-beaten Notre Dame team whose coach, Frank Leahy, lies ill in a Rochester, Minn., clinic.

The keys to Notre Dame's return to form last Saturday when it swamped weakened Stanford, 27 to 0, were the inspiration of the enforced absence of Leahy, plus the freeing of Angelo Bertelli from the signal calling duties.

Other than that triumph, Notre Dame's men haven't shown any real reason why they should expect to beat the battering Seahawks—but on pure hunch guessing they've been listed in many circles for an upset victory.

Fred (Dippy) Evans, their leading scorer last year and the kind of player who could spell the difference between defeat and victory in a close match, has been disabled most of the time and at best will see action tomorrow only in a relief capacity. The burden thus rests again on the passing arm of the Italian wizard, Bertelli.

On the other hand Bierman has every conceivable kind of power ready. His Seahawks are perhaps the greatest collection of players ever assembled outside of the pure professional ranks.

Leahy Remains In Hospital; To Hear Game

By the Associated Press

Rochester, Minn., Oct. 16.—Frank Leahy will have to twist the dials of his hospital radio again this Saturday to follow progress of his Fighting Irish of Notre Dame against Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman's Seahawks at South Bend.

Coach Leahy was anxious to return to South Bend for the game but Mayo Clinic physicians issued a statement today on his condition and insisted that he remain here to continue treatment for a neck and back ailment. Doctors said Leahy is showing improvement.

The statement said, "Mr. Leahy was found to have some arthritis of the spine in his neck and thorax. There is some evidence that an old swimming injury had some relationship to the arthritis of his back. In addition, there is much spasticity and tenderness of the neck and back muscles. . . . An unusual amount of fatigue has resulted from his efforts to carry on with his work under the strain of the distress caused by these conditions."

40,000 Expected To See Navy-Yale Play at Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Oct. 16.—Navy and Yale will renew their gridiron rivalry tomorrow on the heavy sod of Baltimore Stadium before an expected crowd of 40,000 fans. The kick-off is set for 2:30 p. m.

The annual battle will follow a parade of some 2000 midshipmen who will dock with the team at Recreational Pier, arriving on the Chesapeake steamer Bay Belle from Annapolis. Navy decided to make the trip by water after a travel curtailment by ODT.

Miami U. Runs Wild Over St. Louis, 31-6

Two Unbeaten Pre-Flight Elevens Face Tough Foes

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 16.—The unbeaten records of two of the Navy's preflight elevens will be in jeopardy tomorrow when Lieut. Comdr. James Crowley leads his North Carolina Cloudbusters against undefeated Boston College, and Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman's Iowa Seahawks go up against Notre Dame's once-beaten, one-tied but dangerous outfit at South Bend.

These two games figure to be among the best, if not the best, of a Nation-wide football schedule that is none too long on quantity in regard to major conflicts but one that is packed with bitter conference and intersectional rivalries. The Cloudbusters have only a 14-14 tie with Georgia Pre-flight to mar their record, while Boston College has bowled over West Virginia and Clemson.

Bierman's power-laden Seahawks carry one of the country's most impressive records into their Notre Dame game, having whipped Kansas, Northwestern, Minnesota and Michigan on successive Saturdays. Notre Dame bounded back last week to smother Stanford after tieing Wisconsin and losing to Georgia Tech.

Illinois puts its new-found three-game victory streak, including a win over Minnesota, on the line at Iowa City against Iowa while Ohio State, the Nation's topranking college team, risks its standing against up-and-down Purdue. With the fray between Northwestern and Michigan at Ann Arbor, they furnish the complete all-Western Conference schedule. Minnesota goes out of the league to meet its traditional rival, Nebraska; Indiana takes on Pittsburgh and unbeaten Wisconsin tangles with Great Lakes, downed only by Michigan.

The highlight games of the South are in the Southeastern Conference where Alabama clashes with Tennessee and hot-and-cold Tulane attempts to smash the four-game winning streak of Georgia's Crackers, named the Nation's No. 2 team this week.

A game scheduled only this week finds Duquesne, with a 16-game winning streak and 26 victories out of the last 28 games, meeting North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Other Southern games include, Davidson-

Iowa pre-flight over Notre Dame—Notre dame has Angelo Bertelli, but Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman has Al Couppee, George Benson, Bill Schartzer and Dick Fisher. It will be Bierman's first coaching victory over Notre Dame.

Boston College over North Carolina Preflight—After a game-like scrimmage with the Eagles, members of Col. Robert Neyland's Eastern Army All-Stars rated the Boston College line on a par with any of the pro forwards they met except the Chicago Bears.

Auburn over Georgetown—Auburn wins every other week and lost last Saturday.

V. M. I. over Maryland—It is too much to expect Clark Shaughnessy to pull another all-winning first year as he did at Stanford two seasons ago.

Texas over Arkansas—Jackie Fields to help the Longhorns to a Southwest Conference verdict, but it won't be as easy as the 48-to-14 walkaway of last season.

California over U. C. L. A.—Certainly the preseason hubbub about California's prospects could not have been all wrong. The Golden Bears to get going despite the strong U. C. L. A. line.

Georgia over Tulane—This is the week for Tulane's up-and-down team to be down—and that's fatal when Frankie Sinkwich is part of the opposition.

Army over Columbia—Two heads are better than one, so it's Mazur and Hill of the Cadets over Governali of the Lions.

Longshots Still Prevail at Laurel Track as Castleman Scores

2-Year-Old Colt Returns $17.10 Price

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 16.—The longshot parade here that began with the coming of the rainy season this week, kept passing by here this afternoon as a new crop of telephone numbers were harvested by the chosen few. As was the case yesterday, the big pay-offs extended right into the feature race with Max Marmorstein's Castleman upsetting a field of 2-year-olds to bring his scattered backers a $17.10 mutuel. The Chance Sun colt came through with a stretch drive that carried him to a length and a half victory over the Bomar Stable's Little Wizard which held a like advantage over A. C. Ernst's Alcyon. The favorite was Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Halberd and he finished an up-the-track fourth after setting the early pace. The winner was clocked in 1:14-2-5 and was ridden by Jockey Sterling Young, who had received word from Florida this morning that his wife had presented him with a baby girl.

As if getting to the races was not being made hard enough, the track was hampered by flood waters from the nearby Patuxtent River. Low areas at two entrances to the track were inundated. The crowd was the smallest of the meeting, some 4000 turning out for the program.

Halberd, the fourteenth straight losing favorite here, gave his backers some hope when he went to the top soon after the start of the 6-furlong feature, named the Plains Purse. He held sway to the stretch turn where Little Wizard sneaked through on the inside to take command. It looked as if the Bomar colt would take it all for a few moments. However, Castleman skimmed along the rail, answered Jockey Young's whip and disposed of his rival to win going away.

After losing favorites had set up a string of 16, a public choice finally made good by a head margin in the seventh race and defeated a 14-1 shot. Conquer, owned by Mrs. Louise Viau and winner of his previous start, just lasted under strong handling by Jockey Young to stave off the closing bid of Garland Gray's Justice Nap. Third money went to C. E. Nelson's Nosy. Conquer took command in the opening jumps and was not threatened until the final 70 yards. The 9-year-old son of the mud-loving Victorian paid $6.40.

Laurel Race Charts

By Walter Haight.
TRACK MUDDY.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1100; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:04. Off at 2:04½. Winner, Briar Knoll Farm's ch. f. (2) by Challenger II—Parabola. Trained by N. Ray. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:16⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIARCHAL, $25.30, $9.70, $6.20; ROMNEY REX, $3.50, $3.70; GO WES, $4.40.

BRIARCHAL, off slowly, went to outside to improve position, collided with ROMNEY REX at sixteenth pole and then went to front to win going away. ROMNEY REX, sluggish early, went between horses to gain contention and appeared to have been bothered by winner. GO WES had keen speed to dispose of BOWSPRIT but weakened in final test. JUNE QUEST was away slowly and closed full of run.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:34½. Winner, J. N. Kelly's b. g. (3) by Brevity—Pantica. Trained by G. Kelly. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15.

CONDUCT	(Pator)	111	4	5	10⁴	10½	11	11	45.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABRUPT, $12.10, $5.50, $3.40; LITTLE BOLO, $3.60, $2.70; LA REINETTE, $4.10.

ABRUPT, well placed from start, responded when put to pressure and wore down leaders to win going away. LITTLE BOLO was off slowly, came between horses while improving position but could not seriously menace winner. LA REINETTE was rushed to contention, shook off ALL WHIMS to take command, but faltered in closing stages. THE THANE raced in first flight from start, moved up boldly and then faltered.

Daily Double—BRIARCHAL and ABRUPT Paid $119.00.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:00⅘. Winner, J. S. Bosley, Jr.'s br. g. (7) by Exeter—Tantara. Trained by J. Bosley, Jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:26⅘.

†A. J. Grabosky-Mrs. F. M. Gould entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGEMONT, $16.50, $6.20, $5.60; GREENWICH TIME (entry), $4.50, $4.00; BARIS, $6.80.

ROUGEMONT, first away, took good lead, drew out gradually, was not threatened at any stage, made bad landing at thirteenth fence and was in hand at end. GREENWICH TIME improved position gradually and closed gamely. BARIS gained ground after mile and then faltered. STAR BRAMBLE came gamely at end. AFRICAN BOY made up some ground.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1200; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:31½. Off at 3:32. Winner, M. Marmorstein's ch. c. (2) by Chance Sun—Hildrum. Trained by J. McGee. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

JAMESBOROUGH	(Mann)	113	5	2	2¹	3hd	7	7	3.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASTLEMAN, $17.10, $6.80, $4.50; LITTLE WIZARD, $7.00, $4.60; ALACYON, $4.90.

CASTLEMAN, allowed to settle into best stride, rallied when shaken up, came to inside entering stretch and wore down LITTLE WIZARD inside sixteenth pole. LITTLE WIZARD was well placed from start on inside, took command entering stretch but could not resist winner while under punishment. ALACYON, sluggish early, closed a gap. HALBERD set early pace and stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:58. Winner, G. R. Watkins' ch. c. (2) by American Flag—Traumerette. Trained by M. Nixon. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49⅘.

PRINCE GOVANS	(Breen)	110	2	5	5	5	5	5	5	11.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG TRUMPETER, $22.10, $5.10, $3.00; GET OFF, $3.40, $2.60; CELAENO, $3.10.

FLAG TRUMPETER moved around while closest to pace of GET OFF, came to inside to improve position entering stretch and wore down pacemaker to be opening a gap at end. GET OFF raced wide while setting pace and could not resist winner while under punishment. CELAENO was in first flight from start and was tiring at close. RODIN failed to rally.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:24½. Off at 4:24⅘. Winner, A. C. Bostwick's br. g. (7) by Mad Hatter—Brown Elf. Trained by M. M. Dupuy. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CACODEMON, $17.20, $7.60, $5.90; GINOCA, $6.40, $4.10; WOODVALE LASS, $3.60.

CACODEMON, showing improvement in the going, sprinted into long lead in opening quarter, was vigorously handled and was tiring at close. GINOCA was in first flight from start and closed with good energy. WOODVALE LASS rallied mildly in last stages. HASTE BACK was not a serious factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:51½. Off at 4:51⅘. Winner, Mrs. L. Viau's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONQUER, $6.40, $4.20, $3.10; JUSTICE NAP, $11.00, $5.90; NOSY, $4.50.

CONQUER went to front at once, opened wide lead and held on under strong handling to withstand closing bid of JUSTICE NAP. The latter went to inside to improve position leaving backstretch, lost ground entering stretch and was wearing down winner at end. WIRE ME was off poorly, gained gradually and closed with good energy. WIRE ME closed gamely.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1100; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:20½. Winner, L. B. Deming's b. c. (3) by Stimulus—Blanditia. Trained by E. Fred. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:58.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BASTINADO, $10.80, $6.30, $4.40; IMPREGNABLE, $9.30, $4.80; GOOD NEIGHBOR, $4.70.

BASTINADO lacked early speed, worked way to contention on outside and closed willingly to hold IMPREGNABLE safe. The latter was bumped and forced wide at first turn, moved to leaders boldly to take brief lead, but could not resist winner. GOOD NEIGHBOR, off slowly, improved position sharply, got to front in midstretch and then weakened. TOWN HALL was not a serious factor at any stage.

Two Cue Exhibitions Scheduled by Ponzi

Two pocket billiard exhibitions by Andrew Ponzi, many times world's champion, are scheduled for the Arcadia Hall, Fourteenth and Park Road Northwest Monday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

A local player will be matched against Ponzi at both times. There is no admission charge.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

The height of something or another was reached here yesterday when a sailor sat down and ordered pork and beans at the lunch counter. But there was enough water around here to make him think he was at sea. Jockey Sterling Young received word that his wife has presented him with a baby girl. Mother and daughter are doing well in Florida. Jockey Mike Basile, who went to New York to be examined for the Army, sent word that he made the grade and will not return here. Today's two stakes offerings here have interesting backgrounds. The Maryland Handicap dates back to 1914 and today's running will be on the 28. Numerous outstanding performers have scored in the Maryland, which is over the mile and a quarter route and limited to 3-year-olds. Among the stars which have won the stake are Sir Barton, Sarazen, Crusader, Sun Beau, Her Grace, War Glory, Discovery, Black Helen, Jacola, Challedon and in the last two seasons, True Call and Sir Alfred. Time record for the Maryland is 2:02-2-5, held jointly by Sir Barton in 1919 and Sarazen in 1924. Of the riders in action here now, Johnny Deering, Henri More and George Woolf have won previous renewals of the Maryland. The Spalding Lowe Jenkins will be run for the fifteenth time and it will be third occasion in which the mile has been run at a mile and a sixteenth, the distance having been extended from a mile for the 1940 running. It is named for a former president of the Maryland State Fair, Inc., and Mrs. Jenkins, his widow, will present a trophy to the winning owner. E. R. Bradley's Bryan Station holds the time mark for the Jenkins, having run route in 1:45 1-5. Bobby Merritt is the only jockey around who has won a previous Jenkins. Last year the stake was taken by Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab. Trainer C. M. Feltner reported to the stewards that Apprentice W. Sprigle had left his employ without Feltner's consent and he asked that other horsemen decline to employ the boy. Standing of the jockey leaders at this point in the meeting shows Ferril Zufelt on top with 19. Al Schmidl with 8, Hubert Trent and Tommy Crawford with 6, while Herb Claggett and Sterling Young have 5 apeice. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Rough Time will like the track and this opposition. I see no reason for mistakes. Weatherite has improved with leaps and bounds and will be a threat in this company. Brother Dear promises to take part of the pay.

Second race—The entry of Precarious Years and Multi Quest deserves the call in this field. Both will like this route. Stella Elliott is a fair juvenile and should be in the thick of contention. Dusit has closing ability and could be close.

Third race—Nayr was a good jumper around New York and deserves the call in this rather open affair. Kennebunk gets a fair figure and may be a keen factor. Strolling On for the show end.

Fourth race—Wheat did everything asked in his previous effort and should come right back in this company. Wise Timmy closes strongly and promises to be in the thick of contention. Naval Reserve to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Vincentive did everything asked in the Maryland Futurity and appears ready to turn back this crew. Attendant has speed and will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Uncle Billies is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Vagrancy also turned in a sweet effort here. Needs only to run her race to get home in front. Thumbs Up belongs in the first flight. Alstern is a long one with a chance.

Seventh race—Rosetown gets in with only 111 pounds and with this assignment I look for her to lead Challedon to the wire. Challedon is rounding into shape. Equifox closes strongly and likes mud.

Eighth race—Dorothy Pomp will like the deep going and I'm going to string along with her in the day's finale. Battle Won and Eight Rolls to fill out the cash circle.

Best bet—Vagrancy.

CLOCKER MIKE AT LAUREL
2—Dusit, Alfred Stuart, Sweetie Face.
4—Bunny Baby, Wheat, The Killer.
5—Vincentive, Attendant, Drudge.
6—Vagrancy, Thumbs Up, Alstern.
8—Battle Won, Butcher Boy, Supreme Flag.
Best bet—VAGRANCY.

National Boxing Body to 'Freeze' Titles of Men in Service

Move Made To Protect Champions

Association Seeks To Keep Interest In Boxing Alive For War's Duration

By the Associated Press

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 16.—Freezing of titles for champions in the armed services today was pronounced National Boxing Association policy for the duration.

"A man in the service is entitled to complete protection of his championship under all circumstances until he is able to defend; this is the N. B. A. policy announced early in the conflict," Abe J. Greene, N. B. A. head, said in commenting on a proposal by Jerry Giesler, chairman of the California Boxing Commission, that such action be taken.

In classes where champions are not in the service, Greene declared, boxing owes it to the public to keep active.

Seeking to Keep Interest Up

"Frozen titles mean frozen interest," Greene remarked. "If boxing is to continue during the war as a means or providing entertainment on the home front, then everything possible must be done to maintain it on a lively and active plane."

The civilian champion ought "to carry the ball for his comrade-champions in uniform," Greene continued. "Because, if he is a fighting champion he can keep interest in the sport alive for the day when the other fellow comes home and can fight."

Greene took up the situation in the heavyweight division, where Champion Joe Louis and leading contenders Billy Conn and Melio Bettina are soldiers.

The newspaper editor-N. B. A. head commented:

Contenders Would Contend

"All any boxing authorities could hope to do to maintain even a tepid interest in the class would be to set up the outstanding contenders and keep them fighting among themselves with the hope of extracting from the potpourri the best of the lot.

"By that time the Government authorities will have either relaxed their policy of restricting servicemen's boxing or will have tightened it so that no one in the service will be fighting except for Uncle Sam.

"Under such circumstances the best that civilian contenders could hope to attain would be some designation like subchampion or 'pretender,' but at all times it would be understood that the serviceman champion would be unquestioned titleholder with full claim to every right that goes with a title, recognition, major share of purses, etc."

How boxing can be kept active and yet not impair the rights of servicemen champions were deemed by Greene "the problem which now confronts the National Boxing Association and which is up for consideration by our executive committee. Let's look at the list:

Most Champs Serve

"Joe Louis, heavyweight champion, is in the Army; Gus Lesnevich, light heavyweight, is in the Coast Guard; Tony Zale, middleweight, is in the Navy; Freddie Cochrane, welterweight, is also in the Navy. And in a number of instances, the leading contenders are also in some branch of the service."

Discussing classes in which the champion is not in the service, Greene said:

"Sammy Angott, lightweight champion, is a married man with children. His six months' title recess has expired and we are calling upon him for a proper defense of the crown.

"The same thing goes for Jackie Wilson, the featherweight champion, on whom we have served notice he must fulfill his title contract in Providence.

"Manuel Ortiz, our bantamweight champion, was but recently crowned and has several months' leeway, while Little Dado, flyweight titleholder, is in the Philippines and a long way from the scene of boxing action in this country."

Dodgers to Feel Shetley Loss Against 'Skins

One man's loss is another man's fortune and that's the way the Redskins viewed Brooklyn's loss of Rhoten Shetley yesterday as they learned the Dodgers' master-minding quarterback and expert blocker had reported for induction into the Army at his Union (South Carolina) home.

Shetley was in the Army before, but was discharged because of dependents. His case was recently reconsidered. The former Furman College quarterback is the second Dodger signal caller lost to Coach Mike Getto. Ben Kish left the team some time ago.

Shetley, 24 years old and weighing 210 pounds, was Pug Manders' favorite blocker and much of Manders' success over the past two seasons can be laid to the front running of the South Carolinian. Shetley was an expert field general and his presence will be greatly missed by the Dodgers, particularly when Sunday's game with the Redskins in Ebbets Field looms as the game the Dodgers must win.

Wendell Butcher, a pro league veteran of four years and graduate of August Adolphus College will take over Shetley's quarter-backing post with Thurman Jones, an Allebe Christian grad, and Rookie Bob Gifford of Denver, as understudies.

Shetley, twenty-fourth member of the Brooklyn football organization to join the services, was called the "find" of the 1940 season by Lieut. Comdr. Jock Sutherland, the Dodger coach at that time.

The Dodger management was further disturbed by the swollen ankle of Bruce Kinard, who will hardly be available for full-time duty against the Redskins. The other Brooklyn players who were bothered with injuries last week against the Steelers will be ready for the 'Skins tomorrow.

According to Brooklyn reports, the Dodgers have been working against the guaranteed passing of Sammy Baugh in practice sessions of the past week and have also been warned of Dick Poillon, the 'Skins' rookie passer who has been a triple threater in appearances to date.

W.-L. High Tops Calvert Hall, 19-7

Washington-Lee High scored its fifth straight football victory this season yesterday on a sloppy Arlington field, defeating Calvert Hall of Baltimore by 19-7. It was the narrowest triumph to date for the Little Generals.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 16.—Sports writer at West Point:

If you're lucky, Capt. Don Thurman of the academy's public relations office will be down at the Gothic train shed to meet you. You ride with him up the long, winding hill to the Officers Club for lunch—which in this case was country sausage imbedded in mashed potatoes, united with gravy.

CONSIDINE

Then you ride over and see Lieut. Col. Lawrence Jones. After two minutes with the big, good-natured former coach of Army, L. S. U. and Nebraska, it's hard to call him anything but Biff. The day we were there he answered the phone most of the time. People wanted to know if the Army-Navy game was going to be moved, or altered. Some of them wanted their money back. "We've got $80,000 in the till already," Biff said, a little sadly. He is graduate manager of athletics at West Point, but the decision about the game would be made in Washington. He has 2350 of the academy's 2400 cadets in some kind of athletic competition each day.

You listen to Biff reminisce, between telephone calls. He'll say, "Did I ever tell you about the time Huey Long wanted to give a seat in the Legislature to all L. S. U. boys who scored touchdowns? . . . Hello, this's Colonel Jones. No, madam, I haven't been told of any change. You're welcome . . . Well, our L. S. U. boys started to take a ribbing about it wherever we played. We came into Washington . . . Hello, Colonel Jones . . ."

Then you ride around the grounds, which is always a thrill, especially when the leaves are turning and the cheeks of the straight young men who walk past you are teeming with color. You snake down out of the hills and are challenged momentarily at the gate, until the guard sees young Thurman in the back seat of the small, drab car. "We'll go out to Stewart Field, Joe," Thurman says to the enlisted man at the wheel.

Stewart Field is West Point's new airport. Last March it was a barren waste, lumpy with hills. It had been given to the City of Newburgh, N. Y., by an air-minded citizen. But the city turned it over to the Army. Now it is well on its way to being one of the world's finest. It is bigger than LaGuardia Field, with enormously long concrete runways. The hills were lifted bodily and toted away, two creeks were filled. Countless of the finest training planes are on the line. Of the 412 cadets who will graduate on January 19, after a speeded-up course, 208 will graduate with wings on their chests—the first time in the history of the academy.

The field is the pet of Generals Marshall, Arnold, Eichelberger and Wilby, the present superintendent. But it is the life and blood of Col. J. M. Weikert, the field's commandant. He is a smallish, rugged, grinning fighter of the Doolittle type. After Thurman introduces us, Weikert begins to talk about the field, and when he does the officers under him gather in and near his big, bright office, overlooking the field, to listen raptly to him. It is Weikert's dream to teach every West Point Cadet how to fly a plane; to blend the plane into every phase of military teaching. He is well on his way.

Before there was a Stewart Field, West Pointers had to go to school an additional, or fifth year to learn to fly. Now he can turn out a full-fledged pilot in three years, even though their many other studies take all but 13½ months of those three years.

We asked him whether the athletes in school made better pilots than nonathletes. "I'd say the medium-sized athletes do better than other medium-sized men," he says. "Flying a plane is simply a matter of coordination of the hands and feet, and those fellows have it as a rule. But the bigger athletes—the football tackles and the weight-throwers—they're tough to teach. They want to tear the plane to pieces. There are weight and height restrictions you don't hear much about, too. We don't even think of a man as a pursuit pilot if he's over 5-9 and weighs more than 160. And just to prove the rule about the athletes, one of the best pilots we've turned out is a violinist."

Record Entry Vies In Post Table Tennis

The Washington Post-Ice Palace Government Employes table tennis tourney gets under way promptly at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Connecticut Avenue courts with one of the largest draws in the history of the 3-year-old event. Preliminaries will be held not only in the afternoon but also tonight starting at 8 o'clock when those Government employes unable to make the early shift take their places at the tables.

Tournament officials are particularly anxious that Government paddle pushers learn they may enter the preliminaries as late as 8 o'clock tonight. Some of the quarter-finals may be played late this evening, with semifinals and finals scheduled for Sunday afternoon and night.

Carrying an entry fee of but 50 cents, with men and women in uniform paying half that sum, the big event is certain to attract many last minute entrants. Well over 125 players have already registered, but past experience is that many more will be present at the start of the event.

Officials are also anxious to have players of all degrees of ability understand that each is placed in his or her own class and thus inexperienced paddlers are not pitted against advanced players. Advance draws are now in course of preparation so as to cut down the waiting time to a minimum. First prize for men is a $25 War Bond with the women's queen being given $10 in War Savings Stamps.

The Washington Figure Skating Club will open its fifth season tomorrow at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace with two practice sessions, from 9 to 11 a. m. and from 11:30 to 1:30 p. m. Other workouts will be staged on Thursday and Tuesday until the start of the regular season Nov. 15.

Baltimore, Oct. 16.—St. Albans School of Washington, scored an easy 33-0 victory over Boys' Latin at Mt. Washington today. Although hampered by deep mud, the Capital school tallied in the first, second and fourth quarters.

Navy Harriers Defeat Hoyas In Debut, 23-40

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 16.—Although Georgetown's Dave Williams led 18 harriers to the finish line, Navy's cross-country squad captured its inaugural test from the Hoyas today, 23 to 40.

Williams, who had placed first in the freshman IC 4-A championships at New York last fall, covered the four-mile distance in 21:35 minutes, excellent time for the sloppy course, but hero honors went to Georgetown's Tony Passarelli, who finished fourth despite the fact he ran 3½ miles with only one shoe.

Passarelli reported that he dropped a shoe between the quarter and half-mile posts but didn't want to quit. Limping slightly at the end, he finished up only 21 seconds behind Williams and only two behind Navy's Capt. Jack Creamer and Plebe Vic Barry, who ran a dead heat for second.

Navy also grabbed fifth, sixth and seventh places before the Hoyas tallied another runner, Gene McElroy. The next Georgetown scorer was Bill O'Donnell, who, by finishing thirteenth, led the final six harriers, all Hoyas, to the tape.

The summary:

First, Williams (Georgetown), 21:35; tie for second, Creamer and Barry (Navy), 21:54; fourth, Passarelli (Georgetown), 21:56; fifth, Dempsey (Navy), 22:00; tie for sixth, Coogan and Windheim (Navy), 23:05; eighth, McElroy (Georgetown), 23:22; ninth, Dana (Navy), 23:32; tenth, Oliad (Navy), 23:38; eleventh, Brown (Navy), 23:56; twelfth, Hall (Navy), 24:36; thirteenth, O'Donnell (Georgetown), 25:07; fourteenth, Short (Georgetown), 25:08; fifteenth, Mewshaw (Georgetown); sixteenth, James (Georgetown); seventeenth, Marshal (Georgetown); eighteenth, Fish (Georgetown). (No times taken for final four runners.)

Donkey Baseball Games To Aid Children's Fund

Donkey baseball will make its initial bow at Riverside Stadium Monday night at 8:15 o'clock with two service teams, the Army Jeeps and the Navy Mosquito Boats, riding the Mexican burros for the benefit of the Anacostia Lions Club's children's charity. The first of seven performances next week, the winners in the hilarious contest will go against the Marine Solomon Islanders on Tuesday night at the same hour, with the victors of that game competing with the Army Air Corps Dive Bombers on Wednesday.

Brooklyn, Oct. 16 (AP).—Brooklyn's professional football Dodgers today signed Billy Jefferson, former Mississippi State and Philadelphia Eagle halfback. Jefferson will be used to fill the vacancy created by the departure of Rhoten Shetley to the Army.

Transportation And Floods Hit Maryland Club

Maryland's football team left here late yesterday afternoon in an attempt to reach Lexington, Va., for its game with V. M. I. there today.

A squad of 33, accompanied by Head Coach Clark Shaughnessy and Assistant Coaches Jack Manders and Al Woods, boarded a 5 o'clock Southern Railway train yesterday afternoon after keeping the phone wires busy all day in an effort to make some sort of connections.

The Old Liners were supposed to detrain at Amherst, Va., 33 miles away, and to be met there by conveyances from V. M. I. This arrangement was supposed to get them into Lexington around midnight.

There was no assurnace, however, that the players would have seats on the train as they had to stand in line to get aboard and take "pot luck." If they get to Lexington, it is a cinch that they will be far below form for the contest.

Shaughnessy made it very plain he did not want to subject his players to the hazardous trip, feeling it a foolhardy thing to do, but V. M. I. was insistent that Maryland keep the date, pointing to the fact that it was their homecoming affair.

Physically the squad was in good shape when it left and was convinced that it would come home with a victory. In fact, the ire and fire of the Old Liners was aroused by V. M. I.'s insistence they make the tedious jaunt.

Plans were to start the eleven which opened against Rutgers in Baltimore last week.

V. M. I. Frosh Beaten, 8-0, By Weeterps

University of Maryland's freshman gridders showed the way for the varsity yesterday when they outswam V. M. I.'s freshmen in a prelude to the big game today in Lexington. The score was 8 to 0.

Bob Rouletie, a Hagerstown boy, was the big noise in the Old Liner's touchdown drive, carrying the ball in successive thrusts for 22 and 8 yards to culminate a 60-yard march in the second quarter.

Maryland's other two points came in the third period as the result of a wild pass from center into the end zone. Fred Jackson fell on the Keydet's Ragunas for a safety.

Turner Offers 34 Rounds Of Boxing

Thirty-four rounds of boxing will be offered on Monday night's show at Turner's Arena in which Al Davis, the Brownsville (N. Y.) welterweight, will be pitted against Ken Stribling, the rising young District fighter, in an eight-rounder.

The card completed yesterday, offers a number of the local boys who have been clicking the last few months.

Roy Lewis, the southpaw slugger, former International Golden Gloves champion from Muncie, Ind., now living in the District, has been matched against Kid Lewis, a wild-swinging New York colored fighter. This is a six. Lewis last week bowed to Lew Hanbury, but not until he had given the Washington boy plenty of trouble with his bouncing style.

Two other four-rounders were arranged. In one match Billy Reed of Indianapolis will engage Eddie Walzek of Wilmington, Del., while in the other Bill Cady, former Golden Glover, will take on Sandy Mack of Baltimore, the lad who conquered young Buddy Thomas.

One change was made in a six-rounder. Danny Petro, who owns six pro victories in a row, will fight Pee Wee Lewis of Washington, instead of Pancho Torres of New York. Lewis is a crowd-pleasing club fighter, and has a style which is expected to make Petro step every minute of the way.

Another match finds Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, stepping into a six-rounder for the first time in his bout with Oakie Greer of Jacksonville, Fla. Latsios has two straight pro triumphs, but he is in with a tough scrapper on Monday.

Davis is expected to be a 9-5 favorite to beat Stribling, who has won his last eight straight.

Anacostia Bows, 7-3, To Patterson Parkers

50-Yard Run in Waning Minutes Accounts For Winning Touchdown in Muddy Battle

Anacostia High's eleven suffered its first setback of the season yesterday when a heavier Patterson Park Club of Baltimore, pushed over a fourth-period touchdown that accounted for a 7-3 triumph in the mud at Anacostia.

The Indians, who had victimized Coolidge and Handley (Va.) High in previous outings, put up a game scrap. They sloshed around on even terms with the invaders during the first quarter and kept it up in the second. Late in that stanza they found themselves on the Baltimoreans' 20-yard stripe with time left for one play.

Elliot Day, elongated end, dropped back into kicking position and booted a perfect field goal to give the hosts a 3-to-0 edge.

That lasted until the game was in its dying moments. Patterson Park then took advantage of an Anacostia substitution, Halfback Malone streaking through tackle for 50 yards and the winning score. Malone added the extra point rushing.

Landon Loses To St. James Eleven, 33-0

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 16.—Two minutes after play started, Drury, on an offtackle play, ran 25 yards for a touchdown which would have been sufficient for St. James School to defeat Landon School of Washington here today. St. James, however, scored four other touchdowns to win 33 to 0.

St. James completely outlayed the District eleven and at no time did the visitors threaten. St. James, however, had only six first downs to Landon's five.

Barton and Drury went over for touchdowns in the second quarter, and Barton again scored in the third quarter on mostly straight football, while Wallace caught a forward pass and ran 20 yards for the final touchdown in the last quarter.

BOTH got what they wanted PROMPTLY by advertising in The Washington Post.

MRS. MARY HALLAM says she always uses The Post and gets the finest results from Post want advertising. Mrs. H. M. K. tells us she has twice advertised for apartments—once for a friend, once for herself—and The Washington Post ads produced exactly what was wanted both times.

THE results obtained by these ladies are two good reasons for putting your own want ad in The Post. Here's a third reason—the rate is very low, only 22c per line per day. Compare the cost—think about the results Post ads produced for others—and you'll see that it pays to dial NAtional 4200 to place your want ad!

Defining his authority, Byrnes told the board composed of eight representatives of interested Government agencies and six representatives of the public that his job was "to bring them together, to settle conflicts, to integrate all of the parts into one whole."

"I shall step in only where there are conflicts or where I think economic stabilization is threatened in any field," Byrnes said.

But, he added bluntly that he would step in without hesitation when occasion demanded.

Salary Ceiling

"In most cases, common counsel should result in common agreement," the former Supreme Court justice declared. "But we are at war, and we cannot wait upon counsel of perfection. We will make mistakes. If after an adequate interchange of views, differences still persist, I shall resolve those differences and promptly communicate to you my decisions."

Byrnes also revealed that he was working on regulations to limit salaries to $25,000 a year, presumably in cooperation with the Treasury Department, and that he was setting up machinery to enable WLB and the Office of Price Administration to cooperate in cases where wages affect prices, and to enable Agriculture and OPA to cooperate in setting ceiling prices on farm commodities.

Keys to Future Action

To provide the basis for other actions affecting the national economy, he also called for reports from affected Government agencies on various subjects. The list of topics which follows may be regarded as a forecast of the fields in which future actions by Byrnes may be expected.

"Compulsory savings and other proposed measures to control excess spending power.

"Prospects as to future rationing needs.

"The spacing of military and lend-lease purchasing.

"Prospective subsidy needs and considerations which should govern or limit the use of subsidies.

The stabilization director stated that he had begun to review the authority of the various Government agencies involved in the program to see if any additional legislation to control the cost of living is required. First fruit of this review is Byrnes' request to Congress for authority to control commercial rents.

Seated on the economic stabilization board are representatives of the Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor Departments, the Office of Price Administration, the War Labor Board, the Federal Reserve Board, the Budget Director, two national farm organizations, the A. F. L. and C. I. O., the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce.

Rev. C. S. McKenzie Installed as Church Pastor

The Rev. Charles Stewart McKenzie last night was formally installed as new pastor of historic Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H Street Northwest.

Delivering the installation sermon, Dr. Henry B. Wooding, pastor of Eckington Presbyterian Church and former moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, urged that Christ be in the midst of all human relationships and at the heart of all personal lives.

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church gave the charge to the congregation; the Rev. Richard Mussen of Sherwood Presbyterian Church, the pastoral charge; the Rev. Irving W. Ketchum stated clerk of the Washington City Presbytery, the invocation; the Rev. D. Hobart Evans, pastor of Hyattsville Presbyterian Church and the Rev. J. Herbert Garner, pastor of Sixth Presbyterian Church and presbytery vice moderator, prayers, and the Rev. Lindley Cook of Aberdeen, Md., the Scripture, and Mr. McKenzie, the benediction.

Father O'Hara To Speak at Guild

The Pius XI Guild will open the season of 1942 and 1943 at their new headquarters, 1721 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, with a lecture tomorrow at 4:50 p. m. by the Rev. Albert O'Hara, S. J., of Carroll House at Catholic University.

Father O'Hara recently returned from China, where he has been engaged in work with the wounded soldiers and refugees during the war in Shanghai, Nanking and Wuhu, and the subject of his lecture will be "My Experiences During the War in China." Father O'Hara was ordained by one of the first Chinese bishops to be consecrated by the late Pope Pius XI, the Most Rev. Simon Tsu, of the Vicariate of Haimen.

There will be a discussion period and social hour following the lecture.

Text of Byrnes' Statement To Economic Board Session

The text of the statement by James F. Byrnes, Director of Economic Stabilization, to the first meeting of the Economic Stabilization Board at the White House yesterday, follows:

You are familiar by this time with Executive Order No. 9250, providing for the stabilization of the national economy. The language is plain and needs no interpretation by me. Its reading indicates fully what is expected of us.

We are a part of the machinery which must convert the peace time economy of the country to a fully-controlled wartime economy. At present we are half and half.

In peace, supply and demand is left to work. That requires time. In war the tempo changes. There is no time. Every man and woman, dollar and thing, everything must be utilized for the quickest winning of the war.

War Agencies Needs

The war-making agencies must have what they need, when they need it. At the same time the welfare of those on the home front must be given consideration. Living costs must be kept from spiraling upwards so all of us can be free to contribute our utmost to winning the war. Reductions in living standards that the war will impose must be shared equitably by all of the people, without profiteering. If we are to avert a repetition of the collapse that followed the last war, we must prevent runaway price increases now.

Each of you occupies definite spheres of activity in the carrying out of these aims. For example, the Secretary of Treasury, among other things has responsibility for the sale of Government securities, the raising of taxes, the siphoning off of excess purchasing power, and, of generally taking the profits out of war. For the control of salaries, I am looking for suggestions and guidance also to the Secretary of Treasury.

Labor and Wages

Labor, wages and working conditions are within the province of the Secretary of Labor and the National War Labor Board. The Price Administrator has control of prices, including rents, rationing, etc. To the Price Administrator, the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Agriculture, principally, I will look for advice on subsidies and related matters. To the Secretary of Agriculture I will look for guidance on the production of farm products and advice as to their prices. At times it will be necessary to invite the chairman of the War Production Board and the War Manpower Commission to meet with us.

And to all the members of the board, I will look for suggestions to keep down the cost of living. While ours is an economy based on personal incentive and the profit system, we must at this time give more attention to keeping prices down than keeping profits up.

It is my desire that the agencies and activities represented shall be increased in importance and not diminished in the least degree. It is not my intention to undertake any of the activities which lie within the province of your organizations, but rather to bring them together, to settle conflicts, to integrate all of the parts into one whole. I shall step in only where there are conflicts or where I think economic stabilization is threatened in any field.

Best For All The People

As for the representatives of labor, industry and agriculture, we shall look to them to give us in all circumsatnces their suggestions, particularly in the fields in which they have become experts and to which they have given their life efforts. I know these gentlemen will present their views not as to what is best for any paritcular group but as to what is best for all of the people.

We shall meet here every fortnight. Discussions of interest to the members of the board shall not be restricted, but I shall try in advance of meetings to note those questions on which I will want your advice.

In most cases common counsel should result in common agreement. But we are at war and we cannot wait upon the counsel of perfection. We will make mistakes. But in war, inaction is the greatest of mistakes. If after an adequate interchange of views, differences still persist, I shall resolve those differences and promptly communicate to you my decisions.

I. Let me here tell you what I have done to implement the executive order of the President:

(a) I have arranged with the War Labor Board and the Treasury Department to bring all salaries under control. All salaries under $3000 and those salaries up to $5000 which are covered in wage agreements are to be regulated by the War Labor Board. For salaries over $3000, other than those handled by the War Labor Board as part of wage agreements, the Treasury Department is preparing regulations.

Power Delegated to OPA

(b) I have delegated to the Office of Price Administration the power to intervene in cases involving proposed increases in the rates or charges of utilities. The Office of Price Administration is the agency best suited to represent the interests of the consumer in these matters.

(c) I have approved two regulations of the War Labor Board for exemptions from the wage provisions of the executive order. One regulation exempts special merit and promotion by length of service systems; the second exempts employes with not more than eight (8) employes.

Wage increases granted in such exemptions are not to be considered justification for increasing any price ceiling or cost of any Government contract; or as an argument against any decrease in a price ceiling or Government contract that might otherwise be thought necessary.

2. In addition to these regulations, I am working with the agencies concerned on regulations to cover these things:

WLB-OPA Work Together

Machinery for handling wage increases which may affect price ceilings. This necessitate close cooperation between the War Labor Board and Office of Price Administration. A liaison official has been appointed by each of these agencies.

Machinery for the control of agricultural prices. This necessitates similar cooperation between the Department of Agriculture and the Office of Price Administration.

3. I have also begun to review the situation with the various agencies to determine if there is need for additional legislation. One such omission was discovered in the matter of commercial rents. I have asked Congress to remedy this. The House with splendid cooperation has passed the bill and I hope for prompt action by the Senate.

Agencies Give Reports

4. I also have asked the different agencies to furnish me with detailed reports on some of the problems that lie ahead. The more important things of which I have requested reports are:

Compulsory savings and other proposed measures to control excess spending power.

Prospects as to future rationing needs.

The spacing of military and lend-lease purchasing.

Prospective subsidy needs and considerations which should govern or limit the use of subsidies.

If the members of the board have any information or views on these matters, of course, I will be glad to receive them.

I intend to continue this practice of asking for reports on all likely problems that may arise in the future—in advance of the necessity for action.

Nonferrous Metal Miners Win Pay Rise

The War Labor Board yesterday granted a wage increase of $1 a day to 10,000 non-ferrous metal miners in Utah and Idaho to stabilize employment in the mines over the protests of WLB's employer members who declared that the program "will lead only to chaos, economic and otherwise."

The increase will have to be approved by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes before it can take effect in accordance with terms of the President's economic stabilization order of October 3 since WLB found that metal prices might be affected.

The pay adjustment was made retroactive to May 16 with the retroactive pay to be made in war bonds and stamps.

Other Increases Ordered

Other wage adjustments of from 25 cents to $1 a day were ordered for about 4000 workers employed in copper, lead, and zinc smelters located in California, Colorado, New Jersey, Illinois, and New Mexico.

The decision which was carried by a vote of 8 to 4 with employer members dissenting provided for the setting up of a five-man "Little War Labor Board" to recommend stabilization policies for the entire copper, lead and zinc mining industry employing upward of 90,000 workers. The board will contain two representatives of labor, two of management and one of the public.

A similar board has already been created to stabilize employment in the West Coast lumber industry. Both miners and lumbermen in 12 Western States have been "frozen" to their jobs by order of the War Manpower Commission. WMC urged WLB to grant the increase as a means of implementing its freeze policy.

A special penalty provision authorized the withholding of 50 cents of the increase from workers who fail to comply with "rules and regulations as to continuity of work and standards of production, which rules and regulations shall be agreed upon by the employer and the union and shall be subject to approval of the National War Labor Board."

Maintenance Clause

The union also was awarded a maintenance of union membership clause and the checkoff of union dues.

Roger D. Lapham, employer member of WLB and spokesman for the employer group, vigorously attacked the decision in a separate statement and urged instead the adoption of a labor draft to control manpower.

"The men in the front line forces—Army, Navy, Air—are dispatched to our far-flung battle fronts as directed by our commander in chief," Lapham said.

"We believe those in the home army, men and women engaged in war production and distribution, all serving in the arsenal of democracy, are prepared and willing to submit to the orders of the same commander in chief, and where and as directed. . . .

"The time is past for half measures. Truth beckons. We ask strong wine—not milk toast."

H. L. Kaufman, One of Triplets, Joins Coast Guard

Ready to do his bit in the war effort, Henry L. Kaufman, 20, one of the Kaufman triplets, left yesterday for duty with the United States Coast Guard at Manhattan Beach, N. Y. He enlisted a week ago.

KAUFMAN

Kaufman and his triplet sisters, Ann and Lillian, are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Kaufman of 3916 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va.

Born in Washington, young Kaufman attended the District public schools, leaving Central High School in his junior year when his parents moved to Arlington. He completed his studies at Washington-Lee High School, graduating in February, 1940. He then attended George Washington University.

Devoting most of his time to his books, he took practically no interest in athletics. He was a member of the Phi Alpha fraternity.

Ann is the wife of Lester Dobschultz, who is at the Army officers training school in North Carolina. Her sister Lillian attends George Washington University.

School to Continue

The School for Christian Living at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church will be continued tomorrow, beginning at 6 p. m. with a social hour and the discussion groups at 7 o'clock. The leaders will be Mrs. N. Gould Wickey, Mrs. Nelle Van D. Smith, Miss Pauline Shoemaker and the Rev. Harry Porter of the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 16.7% In September

Net sales of the Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., totaled $2,688,542 in September, a gain of 16.7 per cent over the $2,303,894 in the same month last year.

For the nine months ended September 30, sales aggregated $22,924,472 or 16.9 per cent more than the $19,615,437 in the same period last year. Treasury W. H. Churchill in reporting the above figures said that no adjustment was made for change in number of stores during the respective periods.

Month's Building Gains

Building permit valuations in September for the entire Nation displayed a small gain over August when the volume was at the lowest level in six and a half years, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday. The aggregate, however, was still less than half the September total a year ago.

Permits last month for 215 cities amounted to $56,254,332, up 6.2 per cent from August but a drop of 52.2 per cent from the same 1941 month.

Washington building permits, the report showed, totaled $27,422,980 in the first nine months this year as compared with $38,784,410 in the same 1941 period. Comparative figures for the 20 leading cities follow for the first nine months:

Would Cut Questionnaires

The Senate education and Labor Committee voted unanimously yesterday to recommend passage of a bill reducing the number of Government questionnaires business men must answer by eliminating unnecessary duplication.

The bill, to coordinate the Federal information-collecting services under the director of the Budget Bureau, was intended, Chairman Thomas (Democrat) of Utah said, "to bring order out of chaos and relieve the small business man from making many useless reports to the Government."

The Budget Bureau's director would be authorized to determine whether or not the collection of any information by any Federal agency is necessary. Federal agencies would be forbidden to solicit information from ten or more persons without his consent.

High Court Affirms Ban on Dividend

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—An injunction restraining the American Car & Foundry Co. from paying $500,000 in common stock dividends was upheld yesterday by the Court of Errors and Appeals, New Jersey's highest tribunal of law.

Distribution of the dividends was tied up more than a year ago by Oscar B. Cintos of Havana, former Cuban Ambassador to Washington, who obtained a Chancery Court injunction on the contention that his rights as the owner of 2500 shares of preferred stock, with an aggregate par value of $250,000, would be impaired by the payment to holders of common stock.

The board of directors of the company, a New Jersey Corporation, voted a $1 a share common stock dividend, effective October 1, 1941. Chancery ruled, however, that no common stock dividend should be voted until the company had paid a dividend not exceeding $7 a share on preferred stock for 1936, and an additional preferred stock dividend of $1.29 a share for 1933.

Gasoline, Oil Demand Falls 21% in August

By the Associated Press

Demand for gasoline and motor oils during August, as measured principally by refinery sales, dropped 21 per cent below a year before, falling to 51,600,000 barrels, the Bureau of Mines reported yesterday.

Bureau officials explained, however, that this lowering of calls upon refiners was due not only to reduced consumption resulting from rationing in the East but also to the fact that retailers were able to draw upon excess stocks they accumulated before rationing began in July.

The drop in demand left the total inventory in August, usually the month of heaviest demand, virtually unchanged, the bureau said, adding that stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline on August 31 totaled 79,526,000 barrels, compared with 80,377,000 barrels a year before.

The price index for petroleum and petroleum products in August was put at 60.7, compared with 60.6 the previous month, and 61.4 in August, 1941.

Daily average productions of crude petroleum in August rose to 3,884,800 barrels, compared with 3,605,900 in July and 3,914,600 in August, 1941. This increase in production, the bureau said, offset a gain in crude runs to stills, with the result that the total crude oil stock withdrawal was reduced to only about a million barrels, compared with more than six million barrels in July.

Daily average crude runs to stills in August reached 3,682,000 barrels, the highest since February, but well below the average of 4,018,000 for August, 1941.

The bureau said that in spite of efforts by the petroleum coordinator to reduce gasoline yields so as to increase those of fuel oil, the average of gasoline yields rose again—from 38 per cent in July to 39 in August.

Bond Stores to Enter Women's Clothes Field

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Bond Stores, Inc., nationwide men's clothing chain, announced today it would enter the women's apparel field with a line of popular-priced coats and suits.

The women's line probably would be introduced next week in 22 stores, including all those in New York, the company said, and would be extended to other units in the chain if the move met with success. There are 59 stores throughout the country.

Freer Spending Mood Is Noted In Retail Trade

The Nation's department store sales during the week ending October 10 were up 25 per cent over the same period a year ago, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

Seasonal and anticipatory buying, effects of the growing national income and the sales decline of October, 1941, when the new excise tax went into effect were cited by officials as possible cause of the increase which varied from 13 per cent in the St. Louis district to 39 per cent in the Atlanta and Kansas City districts.

Richmond Area Up 36 Per Cent

Sales during the previous week showed only a 2 per cent increase over a year ago, while the sales for the four weeks ending October 10 showed an 8 per cent increase over that period for 1941.

By Federal Reserve districts, the percentages of increase during the week ending October 10 over the same period a year ago were as follows: Boston, 23; New York, 19; Philadelphia, 35; Cleveland, 24; Richmond, 36; Atlanta, 39; Chicago, 18; St. Louis, 13; Kansas City, 39; Dallas, 38, and San Francisco, 35.

Less conservatism was noted in retail trade this week than in any recent period, Dun & Bradstreet said in the weekly review of business.

"The freer spending noted recently in retail activity has reached wholesale markets," the agency said. "Retailers were more interested in extending commitments as deliveries tightened and difficulties were encountered in obtaining replacements in shortage lines.

Unit Sales Also Gain

"Overcoming the hindrance of warm weather in some sections of the country, retail trade increased during the week. More retail lines, including furniture, rugs and furs, registered gains over a year ago when buying was affected by the let-down following the pretax buying splurge."

The agency estimated unit as well as dollar sales showed a gain over 1941 levels. With prices up 8 to 10 per cent on average, retail volume was estimated 13 to 18 per cent higher than a year ago. Regionally, the increases over 1941 were: New England, 14 to 18; East, 10 to 15; Middle West, 14 to 19; Northwest, 11 to 14; Southwest, 18 to 23; Pacific Coast, 17 to 20.

Gen. Motors Reveals Details Of Billion-Dollar War Credit

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—A revolving war credit of one billion dollars, the largest such deal in history by any corporation, is being arranged for General Motors Corp., it was announced today.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the huge automobile maker which now is turning out war equipment at the rate of more than two hundred million dollars a month, said the credit was necessary for working capital to enable the company to carry inventories and accounts receivable far in excess of normal totals.

General Motors eventually will have facilities to produce at a rate of five billion dollars a year, twice its previous peak, the announcement said.

Four hundred banks throughout the country in which General Motors and its subsidiaries have had accounts, will extend the credit which will run until February 28, 1946.

Under terms of the arrangement, made under "Regulation V" of the Federal Reserve System, the corporation will be able to borrow up to the full amount of the credit in the form of 90-day notes with interest at 2½ per cent per year on the amounts borrowed. The corporation will pay a commitment fee of ⅛ of 1 per cent a year on the unused portion of the credit.

The War Department, under the Federal Reserve rule, guarantees a percentage of the loan, the percentage rising to 90 if the total credit should be used.

General Motors spokesmen said the agreements probably would be completed within two weeks and the credit would be used in part soon after, certainly before the end of the year. Only four days' notice of intent to borrow would be needed.

The huge credit means the corporation will have on call, Chairman Sloan said, "all the resources that it may need to prosecute to the maximum the war effort in which it has accepted a truly tremendous responsibility, together with the means of protecting itself against contingencies or uncertainties which cannot possibly been entirely foreseen."

The present departure from the practice of self-financing, Sloan explained, was based on the necessity for capital to cover the normal time lag between delivery of materials to the Government departments and payment for them.

Priorities System May Revolutionize Industrial Management in Postwar Era

New York, Oct. 16.—Priorities, forced on industry by the war, should channel peacetime management into the most intelligent operations it has ever known.

Now a company's effectiveness in producing war materials is largely governed by its handling of the complex problem of priorities.

When materials are plentiful management, through carelessness, is often wasteful. When materials are scarce it has to be careful. Waste costs money.

The lessons management is learning now will be carried over into postwar operations.

G. L. Murphy, priorities specialist of the management consulting firm of McKinsey & Co., says:

"The system of priorities has already done a great deal to enforce good management methods, so the by-product effects are virtually as important as the immediate objectives of the priorities system.

"General executives and supervisors, as well as purchasing agents, are gaining a more intimate knowledge of materials and manufacturing operations.

"The necessity for supplying intimate facts to the Government—answering the what, when and why of materials consumption—will revolutionize management procedures in a large number of companies.

"When management knows more accurately and intimately what supplies it is using and what it needs for profitable operations, it is likely to use less of them and thus make more money."

This is the picture as Murphy sees it developing:

The control of priorities—or any modification of the present plan to allocate materials—must be centralized so that reports can be quickly assembled.

Because of this, many companies for the first time will be able to evaluate accurately the real worth of many long-range policies, such as the value or worthlessness of centralization as opposed to decentralization.

(For instance: Whether it is better for a firm to have a number of plants scattered around the country or centered in one place.)

Priorities will force better thinking on organization for many companies are finding that priorities failures are due to defects in organization planning.

The various data which a company must collect for the Government under the priorities system will furnish the basis for fundamental corrections in manufacturing policies.

1. In the planning of production and procurement: Many medium-size and small companies have never found it necessary to set up procedures to regulate accurately the flow of production through the plant. Today, if this is not done, the manufacturer cannot state convincingly to the Government why he needs certain materials.

2. Inventory control: In the past, many companies depended upon the manufacturer to carry their inventory because fast and dependable transportation enabled them to order what was needed for a specific job at the last minute. Thus they could conduct large manufacturing operations with virtually no organized inventory control and with meager control data. Now it is essential to carry and control an important amount of inventory so that work can be scheduled in accordance with priorities. This requires sound inventory control methods.

3. Adequate statistical records: Under Government demands that facts be clearly and completely stated, management has been forced to adopt new methods to clarify the keeping of records.

"Management," Murphy says, "has not found it easy to secure the right man to put in charge of priorities. The priority manager must know his way around. He should know sales problems and be acquainted with the major phases of production as well as the purchasing and inventory departments. He must know how to assemble his facts so that the report which goes to the Government is not only accurate and concise but represents a convincing sales argument for his company."

Murphy explains that the priority managers must have the following information:

1. Data on supplies and inventories which his company has received during the previous quarter.

2. Facts on the ratings of orders which are on the books. Materials are "rated" in accordance with their "end use" or urgency. If a war manufacturer has a contract to make shell caps which require copper, for example, this allotment of copper would naturally be rated ahead for copper for repairing office fixtures.

3. With the foregoing information, estimates can be made of the amount of each type of material required; an accurate schedule of production developed, and shipments can be prepared with reasonable accuracy.

Murphy believes compliance with priority regulations would be practically hopeless if any of the above information were lacking.

Procuring materials, relatively simple in prewar days, is now a full-time job of finding where supplies are and then obtaining them.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 5 cents a bale lower to 20 cents higher today after a quiet session in which prices moved narrowly.

Price-fixing operations and hedge-selling were the main factors in the market. Under the influence of a withholding movement by producers and tightness in better grades, prices held firm at marketing centers and there was a good demand from mills for spot cotton.

Draft Board Grants 2, Denies 4 Appeals Here

The District Selective Service Board of Appeal granted two requests for reclassification from 1-A and denied four similar appeals for the week ended October 2, it was announced yesterday. Returned to the local board for additional information was another appeal for occupational deferment.

Two cases asking for deferment on grounds of conscientious objection were referred to the United States Attorney.

The board denied the request of Edwin S. Rich, 20, student at North Carolina University, to be reclassified from 1-A to 4-F.

Vetoed by the board were 11 appeals for reclassification from 1-A to 3-A, while two were granted.

Two Called Essential

Kenton C. Reynolds, 21, student at the University of Maryland, and Wallace F. Yates, 21, fingerprint technician with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, were both given reclassification from 1-A to the group of occupationally necessary.

Following are the registrants who asked for the same regrouping but who were turned down: Hosea B. Abernethy, jr., 26, chief clerk, War Department; Milan Ordnance Depot, Milan, Tenn.; Milton Provus, 34, chief of personnel classification section, Department of Labor; Frank W. Luther, 40, representative of the American Soap and Glycerine Products, Inc., and Benjamin Wermiel, 28, chief qualification analyst, National Resources Planning Board.

Sent back to the local board for additional information was the case of Milton A. Perry, 21, apprentice machinist, Naval Torpedo Station, also asking for occupational deferment.

John W. Trotter, 25, and Alfred DiSilvestro, 29, were both given draft changes from 1-A to 3-A.

Other Appeals Denied

Following are the names of those denied other appeals: Alva B. Lynn, 22; Morton F. Harris, 23; Nero Jones, 32; Raymond E. Perron, 32; William B. Watson, 29; Bernard A. Smith, 41; Charles R. Burrell, 39; Abraham Miller, 26;; Israel D. Edelstein, 21; Richard J. Latona, 27, and George H. Taylor, 45.

Referred to the United States attorney were the cases of Oliver W. Gosey, 39, assistant clerk, War Department, and Leon A. Kanegis, 28, window cleaner, both asking to be classed as conscientious objectors.

Approved by the board was the request of Benjamin F. Brown, 44, teacher of vocational education, to be reclassified from 3-A to 3-B, dependents with necessary job. Robert J. Logan, 36, accountant with the Senate, was denied a similar request.

PUC Hearing Ends on Curtailment of Petworth, Chillum and Takoma Buses; Action Undecided

Little indication of the Public Utilities Commission's action on the Office of Defense Transportation plan for curtailment of bus service on the Petworth, Chillum and Takoma lines was given as the two-day public hearings were closed last night, subject to reopening by the chairman.

If the case should be reopened, it would be for introduction by PUC Engineer Fred A. Segar of detailed statistics from the PUC's origin and destination survey, or for further testimony by Deane J. Locke, Capital Transit Co. engineer.

Locke said at the conclusion of his cross-examination yesterday that there was some point he wished to enter in the record, but that it had slipped his mind. Sager's additional testimony would be entered as a result of PUC Member Gregory Hankin's request for figures from his survey to be entered in the testimony.

Express Cars Urged

A suggestion for making all Georgia Avenue streetcar lines express between New Hampshire Avenue and some downtown point was made by Locke, as a partial compensation for the loss of those who would be forced to use this line in place of eliminated bus service.

Bus service on a parallel street would be instituted for the benefit of persons living within the express limits who would thus be deprived of streetcar service. Hankin doubted the feasibility of this plan, and Locke, while upholding his belief in it, admitted that it would be experimental and wholly without precedent.

Express service on street cars has never seriously been tried because, unlike buses, there is no way for an express streetcar to pass a slower local that might be ahead of it. Locke explained that if all cars on the line were made express between two points, this objection would be invalid.

Citizen Groups Approve

Representatives of citizen groups from the affected areas indorsed the ODT plan to conserve tires, gasoline and bus miles by cutting out parallel routes and short-routing buses that normally are required to dead-head considerable distances, but protested that this particular proposal was discriminatory against them.

Locke said that the proposed revisions would save an estimated one million bus miles or six million tire miles per year, and Sager said that short-routing already instituted has saved 1,233,000 bus miles.

Hankin repeated his inquiry into the difference between curtailment of the lines under discussion, which the company favors and the elimination of the Georgia-Alaska bus line, which the company had opposed at a previous hearing. Both of these changes, he said, were designed to force the bus riders onto the Georgia Avenue car-line.

Locke replied that the latter was a local service, while the Petworth, Chillum and Takoma lines gave preferential service because of its limited stops.

Textile Museum Gets Big Share Of Mrs. Myers' Will

The late Mrs. Mary Hewitt Myers, former president of the Washington Club, who died October 3, left almost half of her $660,400 estate to the Textile Museum of Washington, according to a petition for probate of her will filed in District Court yesterday.

In her will, dated April 24, 1940, Mrs. Myers bequeathed $50,000 to each of three granddaughters, Persis Myers Hill, Mary Myers Stone and Louise Myers Pugh. Her son, George Hewitt Myers of 2310 S Street Northwest, received the household effects and other personal property, and 10 per cent of the remaining assets. About $250,000 went to the Textile Museum, which possesses a collection presented by Myers.

Filed by Mrs. Myers' son and Russell G. Rankin of New York City, who are the executors, the petition showed that the estate consisted of securities valued at $620,000, cash bank deposits totaling $36,000 and personal effects worth about $4400.

Mrs. Myers, who died at Woodstock, Vt., at the age of 94, had lived in the District for about 60 years and was prominent as a clubwoman.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Today and every Saturday this column is turned over to Federal workers for their views and comments. Contributions, subject to condensation, must be sent to the Federal Diary.

Representative Ramspeck of Georgia, the former congressional hero of our supervisors and big bosses, is now looked upon as a bogey man. The former frend is now an enemy in the eyes of the men and women who are responsible for our mismanaged bureaus because Ramspeck has had the courage to question some of their practices.

I wish Mr. Ramspeck could have overheard a conference of our bosses the other day. I happened to accidentally. Our bosses talked over every possible means of covering up the bad conditions in our agency. I heard one of the chiefs admit that he didn't have enough work to keep all his people busy, but he was told to keep them busy eight hours a day no matter how until the investigation was over.

"We can't have our people running up to Ramspeck with stories," said another. From what I was able to hear I'm convinced that any employe from this office who, tells the truth about our conditions might as well pack up and go home.

I would be willing to testify and many more of the "little people" have the same desire but we've got to eat. If the Congress and Mr. Ramspeck would protect us from our bosses and supervisors we would gladly tell our sordid stories.

"A LITTLE PERSON."

So the bright young men dressed in officers' uniforms call the old timers who served in the last war and who are back in again "Retreads." If they do not join the real Army soon, they will not be as good as the "Retreads" when they hit the hard going on the rocky beaches and roads of Flanders, Normandy and Brittany. When it comes to real soldiering we can hold our own with the boys who blubber because they face the dangers and hardships of crossing the Potomac to reach the Pentagon Building and pass the day in a swivel chair waiting to be eligible for promotion every six months. I only wish that the greatest of the "Retreads"—John J. Pershing—could get a hold of them for a few short weeks. "RETREAD."

If the Government is going to limit office heat to 68 degrees, I suggest it start immediately. On the third floor of the Civil Service Commission main building it has been more than 80 for the past few days despite the fact that the radiators were cut off in most of the rooms. It felt like mid-July and working was difficult. Let's have some 68-degree heat. CLERK.

TO AN ALLIED VICTORY—These Tars were among 60 British sailors who were feted yesterday at the National Press Club while on a tour of the Capital. Before the party they were welcomed and addressed by British Ambassador Lord Halifax at the British Embassy. Here they raise their glasses in song and to toast an Allied victory. The American Red Cross, the Press Club, St. John's Episcopal Church and the Capital Transit Co. sponsored their visit

Senate Group Seeks Better Transportation

A Senate District Subcommittee will confer Tuesday morning with District and suburban transportation officials to see whether anything can be done to lower fares and improve service between Washington and outlying areas.

The session was scheduled yesterday by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the group, after a meeting which mapped out the course to be followed in the subcommittee's investigation of transport problems in the Metropolitan Area.

Expected to attend are transit company officials, representatives of the District and Arlington County Public Utilities Commissions, and the regional committee of the Office of Defense Transportation.

Pentagon Building Issue

A particular point to be pressed at the meeting will be the possibility of a reduced fare arrangement for workers riding to the new Pentagon Building in Arlington, though rates to the other transPotomac Federal offices—the Navy Annex and the airport—will also be discussed.

Burton devoted yesterday's session to developing four main problems which the subcommittee will examine in separate meetings as the structural basis of its probe. It was also determined to at least begin by holding closed conferences with authorities involved rather than public hearings.

The topics which will be studied, in addition to the rate question, are the high increase in streetcar and bus accidents in the city; the engineering problems involved in the transportation situation, including the possibility of further utilizing park highways; and the possibility of pressing back into service the now-abandoned Old Dominion Railroad.

Traffic Chiefs at Session

Attending the meeting were James H. Flanagan, PUC chairman; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, local highway director; William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic; Irving C. Root of the National Park Service; Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, and Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, assistant superintendent; Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the police traffic bureau; Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech; and F. W. Lovejoy, Ben G. Wilkinson and Milton Diehl, members of the local regional committee of the ODT.

Montgomery Garden Club Sets Contest

Members of the Silver Spring (Md.) Garden Club will compete in a contest on artistic arrangements of chrysanthemums on Monday at the club's regular meeting at 8 p. m. in the Parkside School. Ballots will be cast to determine the prize winner, Mrs. J. Myron Jones, president, announced.

Dr. Edwin C. Powell of Hermitage Gardens, will give an illustrated lecture on care and planting of bulbs. Plans will be completed for the club's annual garden mart benefit to be held next Saturday at 1212 Noyes Drive, Woodside Park, Md.

Nutrition Course Offered by Red Cross

A nutrition course sponsored by the Takoma Park (Md.) branch of the Montgomery County chapter, American Red Cross, will begin Monday at 10 a. m. at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church hall, Maple and Tulip Avenues. Mrs. Durward Fisher will be the instructor. Those interested in taking the course are requested to call Mrs. Fisher at Sligo 7069.

The monthly meeting of the branch's canteen unit will be held the same day and place at 2 p. m.

Gen. Patterson Named Md. U. Medical Dean

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 16.—The University of Maryland Board of Regents announced today it had appointed Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, retired, former United States Army surgeons general, dean of the University's medical school and superintendent of the University Hospital in Baltimore.

Appointment of Dr. Patterson, who has been dean of the University of Oklahoma School of Medicine, presages a reorganization of the Maryland Medical School and the University Hospital, the board said. It indicates also a closer coordination of the hospital with the medical school as a combined teaching unit.

They added it was "certain to effect a much closer coordination of the work of the school of pharmacy and school of dentistry with the school of medicine, although this will not affect the independent administrative status of these two schools."

Dr. H. Boyd Wylie, acting medical school dean for the last three years, will be assistant dean, and Dr. Patterson will select an assistant superintendent for the hospital. The superintendent will serve as dispensary manager.

Patterson is a former Baltimorean, and his wife is from Prince Georges County. The new dean is a graduate of McGill University, Montreal, Canada, and an honor gradnate of the Army Medical School, Washington.

The board of regents said Patterson chose to come to the University of Maryland in preference to accepting the vice presidency of a large Western University. He would have been in charge of the medical, pharmacy and dental schools of the Western institution.

Victory Sidelights

District's 'Most Ambitious' Blackout Set for December

The District's most ambitious test, which will "simulate as nearly as possible an actual air raid," will be held some time in December with or without advance notice, Defense Coordinator John Russell Young announced yesterday.

The mock raid will climax a two-and-one-half-month period of intensive training for civilian defense personnel, a period which began this week and will run through three training phases into December.

Young warned, however, that announcement of the super test does not preclude the possibility of other drills in the meantime—also with or without advance warning. If these are ordered, he said, separate instructions will be issued to defense heads.

The first phase of the special training program is to run until the end of this month, and will see an extra emphasis laid on warden training at weekly control center exercises, where particular attention will be given to schooling the men in preparing damage reports.

The second phase, embracing the entire month of November, is to be based on area-wide "incidents" providing field training for the various elements of the defense organization. Aimed at giving practice in the spot handling of emergency situations, this phase is not expected to involve the general public.

The final phase will see the air raid drill called some time during December, at which time "an attack on the metropolitan area will be assumed." The entire region is to be blacked out through the public warning system, and "all elements of the Citizens Defense Corps will be employed" to meet carefully staged emergency conditions.

Much Rubber Footwear Remains Unrationed

Men's rubber boots and rubber work shoes are the only types of footwear being rationed, it was emphasized yesterday by L. P. Steuart, rationing officer for the District. There is no restriction on sales of leather boots and shoes, he said.

Rubber footwear for which rationing certificates must be secured before purchase are:

Hip-height rubber boots, including all boots of hip, body and thigh heights; over-the-knee rubber boots, including Storm King height; all heavy short rubber boots; all lightweight short rubber boots; and rubber pacs and bootees and work shoes less than 10 inches in height.

Freeman Dental Society To Hear Comdr. Wells

Commander C. Raymond Wells, chief dental officer of the medical division of the Selective Service System, will address the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society at its meeting in the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., today at 9 p. m. Commander Wells' talk, on Selective Service policy in regard to induction of dentists, will be followed by an open forum.

Nelson Praises U.S. Newspapers For Role in Salvage Campaign

Donald Nelson yesterday praised American newspapers for the "magnificent and unprecedented" job they performed in carrying on the Nation-wide household scrap salvage campaign and urged them to turn increasing attention to the problems of industrial salvage.

Even as the War Production Board chairman made his statement before a group of newspaper officials, the District was going ahead with plans for the commercial and industrial phase of the campaign which will begin next Thursday and continue for a week.

After WPB officials announced that scrap-collection receipts in the newspapers' drive were estimated anywhere from one and one-half to four million tons, Nelson told members of the Newspapers United Scrap Metal Drive National Committee:

"The job that the newspapers have done is absolutely unprecedented in this country. It has been magnificent. The results have surpassed the fondest hopes that I entertained when I asked the publishers to come in a few weeks ago and discuss the problem of our materials shortages and how the newspapers could help."

Richard W. Slocum, chairman of the newspapers committee, told Nelson he was sure the Nation's press would respond gladly and effectively to his new request for help in the industrial drive.

In Washington, the campaign will be concentrated on two days—Thursday, when most downtown stores are closed in the morning, and on Sunday, when all are closed. Under the plans announced last Thursday, all money received from sale of the scrap will go to civilian defense work.

Meantime, J. H. Wood, regional director of the Farm Security Administration, urged farmers throughout Prince Georges, Anne Arundel and Calvert Counties in Maryland to pitch into the scrap campaign with disregard for sentiment—the old iron baby carriage and the 1910 vintage car, he said, should be contributed "to preserve our free way of life."

Killer Suspect Also Held on Parole Charge

Identified by five persons as the slayer of Pvt. Robert Hamner, Fort Myer soldier, Freddie Lee Thomas, Negro, 22, of 1431 Q Street Northwest, was jailed last night for violating terms of his conditional release from the Lorton Reformatory.

He was turned over to United States marshals by police shortly after noon and was taken to the District Jail. Robert Smith of the D. C. Parole Board said a warrant was issued for Thomas on August 5 and charged him with failing to adhere to requirements of the conditional release statute.

Metropolitan PJolice said that facts in the Hamner shooting will be placed before United States Attorney Edward M. Curran for his decision whether or not to strive for an indictment against the suspect.

Thomas was sentenced to serve 2 to 3 years in Lorton in January, 1940, on a conviction of a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He was released conditionally May 5 of this year.

'Demolishable' Homes for D.C. Get Approval

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved a layout plan for the construction of 500 "demolishable" homes near the Shaw Lily Ponds on the east side of the Anacostia River north of Benning Road.

These homes, to be built by the Alley Dwelling Authority with "new funds" obtained under the Lanham Act, will be for single families and will be torn down at the end of the war and sold for salvage—not demounted and put up elsewhere.

The commission also approved an ADA plan to erect 200 demountable homes on the old Shoemaker tract east of Georgia Avenue just at the District-Maryland line.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the commission, reported that the ADA's program of demountable houses for war workers now totals 2000 units—of which 1114 are in the District and 886 in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md. These homes include units already under construction and those, like the Shoemaker development, still in the process of being planned.

The commission, which was finishing up its monthly two-day meeting, approving six contracts acquiring land in the vicinity of Cabin John Bridge as an addition to the George Washington Memorial Parkway. The property, which will cost about $20,000, consists of several lots on which there are a number of residences. Present occupants will be permitted to continue living in these structures until the commission is ready to develop the park land, which will not be until after the war.

Also approved were plans submitted by the Public Buildings Administration for construction of a temporary cafeteria at Twenty-Second and B Streets Southeast to serve warworkers stationed in the District Armory.

Secretary Thomas S. Settle reported to the commission that passage of the bill permitting Washington homeowners to take in four roomers without being classed as boarding-house operators seems to be "making a considerable contribution toward solution of the housing problem here."

During its two-day meeting the commission toured Rock Creek Park inspecting roads and bridges and going over plans for straightening out roads in the Zoo area and for replacing bridges in the park area—as an aid to wartime traffic.

Fairfax Draft Classification Is Completed

Fairfax County Selective Board officials report they have completed the tentative regular classification of all registrants subject to military service who registered in the third and fourth registrations in Fairfax County, thus meeting the deadline set for classification completion on October 16.

Registrants are now being examined at the rate of more than 50 a week in order to meet the November call for more than 200 men.

Herndon Church Pastor Names Committees

Music—Mrs. Louis Jones, chairman; Mrs. Marvin W. Mann and M. Waite Wilkins. Membership—Mrs. W. W. Taylor, chairman; Mrs. Harold Sentil and Mrs. M. Waite Wilkins. Board of missions—M. Waite Wilkins, Miss Margaret Jones, Mrs. Louis Jones and Mrs. Elsie Benson.

No Billeting Law Likely, NHA Says

Response to Appeal For Buildings to House Warworkers Here Is Excellent

Initial responses to the National Housing Agency's announcement that it will lease privately-owned homes and buildings for remodeling as homes for war workers have made Washington officials "optimistic that no billeting law will have to be enforced here."

Even before the War Housing Center was ready to accept applications, calls began coming in from persons who had property they were willing to lease to the Government.

"We have had calls from persons with whole houses and from persons with just parts of houses. We will be able to start handling them next week sometime, we hope," it was declared yesterday by Theodore Larsen, housing representative for this region.

Where to File Applications

Applications can be made through the War Housing Center, housed at the United States Information Center. Acting director of the center now is Joseph P. Anderson, who has been with the FPHA in the Washington metropolitan area.

When the applications are accepted, housing technicians will examine the offer to determine whether the building is worth leasing and whether it is in a desirable area. That is, whether it is easily accessible to the places where warworkers work.

Mr. Larson said his office did not have a list of homes that might be standing empty in the District. "This whole program is supposed to be voluntary, and we believe it can be worked that way," he said.

Billeting May Come

"The plan announced by the NHA combines both profit and patriotism. Either one should make it work."

If the voluntary cooperative effort fails to work, however, John Blandford, National Housing Administrator, announced this week, "The threat of billeting and commandeering is real enough."

Under the plan, the NHA will take over property under a lease agreement, put it in shape for tenants, run it for the duration and then turn it back to the property owner with all improvements intact.

Two Traffic Death Inquests Set for Today

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 84
Deaths this date last year ... 71
District total last year 95

Inquests into two District traffic deaths, including that of a 28-year-old woman yesterday, are scheduled for hearing at the District Morgue this morning, starting at 11:30 a. m.

The latest victim, Miss Sally T. Simpainen, 28, of 508 Quintana Place Northwest, died at Emergency Hospital at 10:50 a. m. yesterday, 30 minutes after she was stuck by a bus at Tenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

An employe of the National Archives, Miss Simpainen was crossing Tenth Street, when an A. B. & W. bus, making a right turn from the Avenue, knocked her down, crushing her pelvis. Oliver C. Wilburn, 26, of 529 South Twenty-third Street, Arlington, Va., driver of the bus, will appear at the inquest.

Man, 80, Is Second Victim

The second inquest will be into the death of William R. Coon, 80, of 2414 Irving Street Northwest, a carpenter, who died at Homeopathic Hospital Thursday.

He was injured September 26, when he was hit by a car at New Hampshire Avenue and Quincy Street Northwest. The machine was driven, police said, by Lillian Johnson, Negro, 34, of Takoma Park, Md.

Miss Simpainen a native of New York City, had been in Washington since June. Her parents are dead and police notified her nearest relatives, an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Aro, of Erie, Pa.

Teacher Severely Hurt

Miss Elizabeth Summerlin, 37, of 1909 Phelps Place Northwest, a teacher at Holton Arms School, suffered severe injuries when struck by an automobile at Connecticut and Florida Avenues Northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for a broken leg and wrist and fractured pelvis. Her condition is serious, hospital attaches said.

The driver of the automobile, police said, was Chevis A. Butler, 23, of 2619 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

In a collision between two street cars at Fourteenth and G Streets Northwest, Joseph A. Hill, 25, of 2301 First Street Northwest, a passenger, was injured. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital where his condition was described as undetermined.

Man Killed In Fall After An Argument

William A. Major, 45, of 1932 First Street Northwest, was killed last night in a fall on a street car loading platform at Fourteenth and G Streets Northwest. He was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

Police said Major fell to the platform during an argument with A. B. Smith, 20, of 1252 Eleventh Street Southeast, motorman of a Capital Transit Co. street car.

D. C. Must Meet War Fund Goal, Sullivan Says

Repercussions around the world would be "unthinkable" if Washington failed in its obligation to United Nations war relief by not pushing the Community War Fund campaign over the top, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan said yesterday.

"What juicier morsel would Herr Goebbels like to spread over Europe than that America did not remember, America did not care?

"What do you think the effect would be on the Volga if German planes distributed over Stalingrad news of our failure to those men who live in the filth and muck and rubbish of a devastated town?" Sullivan asked at a rally in the Departmental Auditorium of 5000 volunteer solicitors for the War Fund in Government departments.

He urged a blitzkrieg drive, one that would put every Government unit over the top three days after the campaign opens.

Mrs. Harriman Speaks

Adding their encouragement to the Government volunteers, who will seek pledges from some 275,000 fellow employes, were Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway, and Constance Bennett, screen actress. Mrs. Claude Wickard and Mrs. Harold Ickes were on the platform, representing Cabinet wives active in the war fund drive.

"Over all our homes is the vast protective canopy of our American freedom," Mrs. Harriman said, enumerating this country's blessings. "None of us Americans knows what it is to have stool pigeons in our homes, stool pigeons who spy on every word we utter," she said.

"Perhaps as you listen to the radio tonight you may be knitting or mending a pair of socks. You won't be crouched in front of the radio with your windows sealed, fearful that a neighbor may know that you are listening to a voice you shouldn't hear.

"Scapegoat Technique"

"The scapegoat technique of arousing hatred of one group against the other is a favorite method to undermine democracy. We know it worked in France and Holland, and I saw it happen in Norway. Don't let it work in America!" she urged.

More than one-half of the campaign's entire $4,141,000 quota must come from Government employes, Sullivan said, telling volunteers, "You are the group on whom the success of the campaign depends."

With manpower an acute problem, "an extended campaign would not be fair to yourself or Uncle Sam," he said. "Remember, the boom that has helped so many people hasn't helped the blind, the infirm, the aged or the orphans. They are still with us, asking our help—depending on our help," he said.

Servicemen Gave Their All

Miss Bennett told of a base hospital she visited last week which had 3000 injured men, "293 of whom could see last November." "Those boys didn't ask whether to give or how much to give," the actress said. "They gave."

Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, chairman of the War Fund's Government unit, led the meeting, and Floyd D. Akers, war fund chairman, spoke of the saving of manpower made possible by combining the 128 agencies of the war fund into one drive.

Today will be "moving day" for all the campaign units of the war fund staff, which will transfer equipment from the present offices at 1101 M Street Northwest to the Willard Hotel. The four big soliciting units will occupy the Congressional Room on the main corridor.

Va. Bankruptcy Referee Is Dead

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Thomas Burton Snead, 64, referee in bankruptcy for the United States District Court in Richmond and the counties of Chesterfield, Powhatan, Goochland and Henrico, died at his home here last night. He had been ill for a year and a half.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at St. Paul's Episcopal Church here, with burial in Hollywood Cemetery.

Snead, an alumnus of William and Mary College and the University of Virginia Law School, was appointed referee in bankruptcy here in 1905

D.C. Day-Care Center Need Is Outlined

At Least 85 More Places, Each for 30 Children, Reported Necessary Here

Need for "at least 85 more day-care centers" equipped to care for 30 children each was outlined at a meeting of the Emergency Committee for the Day Care of the Pre-School Child yesterday by Dorothy Pearse, director of the new Day Care Administrative Office of the local OCD.

"Under the present plan of dividing Washington into 66 civilian mobilization areas," Miss Pearse said, "it is hoped that each geographical unit of the metropolitan area will have at least one center for the care of children from two to five."

As the centers are established, she pointed out, the need for volunteer aides will become greater. A new class for the training of aides will begin November 3 at headquarters of the American Women's Voluntary Services, 2701 Florida Avenue Northwest, she said—with registration on October 26, 27 and 28. The course will consist of 10 hours of lectures and 50 hours practice, all of which can be completed by Christmas.

Mrs. Richard Gilbert, 3841 Kanawha Street Northwest, was elected chairman to succeed Miss Alice Coe Mendham. The retiring president reported on work accomplished by the committee during its first year and pointed out that three of the activities started by the group had now become "official" and been taken over by the office Miss Pearse directs.

These activities are: the answering of individual inquiries for information about day care, the maintenance of an active file of nursery-school teachers, and the provision of professional advice to groups wishing to start day-care centers.

Mrs. Harry P. Chandler, chairman of the Child Care and Protection Committee, pointed out to the meeting value of coordination among the various child-care groups. Mrs. Frances Mayfarth, legislative chairman, reported that her committee is endeavoring to obtain passage by the Senate of the bill already passed by the House to permit the establishment of nursery schools in the District public school buildings.

Eviction Case Here Entering Its Third Day

The Municipal Court jury trial of Mrs. Helen Hougasian, rooming house operator of 312 E Street Northwest, who is charged with illegally evicting a family of six, was to go into its third day today as attorneys prepared to argue a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty.

Defence Attorney Jack Politz introduced the motion late yesterday at the close of the Government's case, and Judge George D. Neilson is expected to rule on it this morning.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton D. Korman closed his case with testimony of three women who live in the rooming house, Mrs. Norma Shannon, Mrs. Sally Greenan and Miss Betty Kincaid. All said that Mrs. Hougasian rented the third floor apartment to two tenants who paid a total of $20 a week, shortly after the complaining witness, Mrs. Elizabeth Joy, moved out with her family.

Mrs. Joy, who now lives at 3415 Eastern Avenue, had been paying $12.50 for the apartment.

Defense testimony by Henry Jaffe of the New York Decorating Co. was introduced to support the contention that Mrs. Hougasian had intended to use the apartment for herself. Jaffe said he wallpapered one of the rooms at Mrs. Hougasian's request. Thursday, Dr. James Whisman testified he had advised Mrs. Hougasian against taking the third-floor apartment, because, he said, walking up the stairway would aggravate her physical condition.

Mrs. Hougasian is charged with violation of the District Emergency Rent Act, which provides that a landlord may have a tenant evicted if he then uses the vacated rooms for himself or his family.

In the civil division of the court, meanwhile, Judge Brice Clagett ruled that Richard Corcoran, his wife, eight children and a grandchild must vacate their basement apartment at 468 K Street Northwest, within 10 days, because it is "unfit for human habitation."

The Corcorans were first notified in August that they would have to find other quarters. When the case came up for rehearing yesterday, Judge Clagett found Corcoran had not moved, and he ordered Doris G. Wilkins, the court's social worker, to try to find a larger apartment for the family of 11.

Corcoran, a steamfitter, paid $40 a month for the apartment, which, according to testimony by District Health Inspector Thomas E. Pilkerton, was too small for the family, and had inadequate toilet facilities.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Got Engaged to Man on Rebound, Girl Doesn't Know Whether He Is Crazy, or She Is; His Actions Fill Her With Inexplicable Fear

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I am engaged to a man who has a very strange effect upon me. I can't exactly define the trouble. When we first started going together, I enjoyed being with him—because then I was trying to outgrow an unhappy experience with another man. I think going with him was a help. His demonstrations of love were a boost to my self-esteem. That was the beginning.

Then he got very emotional in our relationship. I don't mean physically. I mean he became emotionally unstable. According to him, he just "had" to marry me, or he would "kill" himself. He resorted to highstrung capers. I guess I was impressed and flattered by his extravagant manifestations of great love; and so I agreed to marry him. Whereupon he showed a new personality. He became egotistical toward me. He asked me why I always agreed with him; why I didn't beat him down when he acted selfish and mean.

I just don't like to "beat people down;" I want everybody to be happy and free from confusion, if possible. I tried to explain this to him. Then he showed a disposition to drift away from me. My reaction to this was to tell him perhaps it would be a mistake for us to marry. Then he became excitably insistent upon marriage again. We have been around this circle several times—until now I am completely confused and constantly upset.

In case you may think his behavior is caused by sexual frustration, as I first thought and said to him—he isn't particularly interested in that aspect of marriage. In fact, he gets hurt and indignant to think (as he says), "that THAT subject has to be brought up." He told me, "I didn't think your mind ran like THAT." I tried to explain to him that my views of marriage were normal, and a reasonable evaluation of the usual aspects of that relationship—only to be told that I should never mention that subject again, unless he brought it up.

Having known many men, but none like him, until now, I am sorely puzzled, and I need your advice. Association with him has the effect of making me depressed; and almost afraid of something I can't define. I almost shiver at times, not knowing why. I wonder if I am crazy; or if he is; or what. I am fond of him; but I think I should get out of the engagement—for no definite reason, except that feeling of uncanny dread. How do you explain that feeling? Please tell me how to evaluate it; and how to know my true feelings are.

MARIE.

Irrational Actions Repel Normal People

DEAR MARIE: Far from being "crazy" yourself, you are reacting in a healthy manner to your fiance's distinctly abnormal performance. It is quite natural that a reasonable, intelligent, kindly disposed person would feel depressed and vaguely alarmed to behold someone more or less near and dear to him behaving in an irrational, willfully unkind sort of way. And what sane woman wouldn't experience occasional shivers of dread, if she knew herself to be the object of special interest to some man of morbid mind?—whose attentions veered wildly between the two extremes of frantic fervor and maliciously taunting indifference?

The icy apprehension which sometimes chills your blood, in this man's presence or at the thought of him, is simply your common sense speaking through your nerves—telling you what your affection-blinded eyes refuse to see, namely: That the man is incipiently sick-minded, a thoroughly disorganized personality, unfit for marriage in his present emotional state, and a decidedly unhealthy influence for you, as is evidenced by the fact that he has systematically reduced you to a condition of complete confusion and chronic anxiety. Ironically, there is a shred of reason in his disdainful inquiry as to why you "don't beat him down when he acts selfish and mean."

Apparently he is just rational enough to realize the extent of his irrationality; and perhaps would like to compensate for his unbalance by maintaining an emotional alliance with an imperturbably well-balanced personality. However, to lapse into the vernacular, he is, indeed, crazy—if he thinks (1) that emotional concern and objectivity of viewpoint can be simultaneously maintained by one person toward another; or (2) that any sane woman could be permanently interested in carrying on the bootless tug-o'-war type of relationship he seems to enjoy.

Fondness for Man Is Purely Symbolic

Your "true feelings" for him don't amount to much, when thoroughly sifted. You got involved with him on the rebound, as you candidly say; when you were mentally too distrait and emotionally too needful to exercise discrimination in choice of male companionship. This is usually true of persons who "fall in love on the rebound," which explains why such alliances almost invariably turn out badly. In his more ardent moods, he is a drug to your wounded self-esteem; and because you have made no worthier alliances, as a result of allowing him to preempt your time and thought, you have fallen into the habit of patiently "putting up" with his tantrums, on the mistaken theory that he is the magnetic center of your emotional scheme of things. Your fondness for him is symbolic, not genuine. You are fond of him as "the man in your life." But you don't really like—indeed, instinctively distrust—the man himself. And rightly so.

Your belief that an engaged couple might appropriately undertake a reasonable discussion of the sexual aspect of marriage is eminently wholesome and above reproach, whereas his attitude toward the subject is repellantly prurient—implying the existence of perverted tendencies or acute neurosis. Whether his coarse rejection of your tentative remarks was brutally intended to hurt; or whether it reflects involuntary distaste for the subject, it is in either case indicative of a psychopathic turn of mind. Marriage to such a man could not escape being a degrading experience.

Follow Strong Hunch To End the Alliance

So, my advice to you is to obey your strong hunch to "get out of the engagement." And once you take steps in that direction, don't be intimidated into changing your course, by any hysterical maneuvers of his. If he elects to commit suicide because your instinct for self-preservation won't permit you to marry him, don't suffer remorse. Responsibility for that gesture will be entirely his. And if he threatens your life, invoke legal protection. Report him to law enforcement authorities without delay. Regardless of what commotion he kicks up, stand firm in your determination to cut clear of his society.

Mothers With Wings

Hands That Rock the Cradle Now Wield WAF Control Sticks

By Margaret Kernodle

An Eastern Army Air Base.—Now eight American boys and girls can brag: "My mama flies Army planes, too. She's ferrying PT-19-A's and L4-B's."

I just spent a day at a ferrying division of the Air Transport Command to watch these first feminine ferry fliers fit their civilian flight experience into the precision of the Army air program.

Pioneers

They are inspiring pioneers, including their director, Mrs. Nancy Harkness Love of Boston, 28-year-old prematurely-gray-haired beauty with big blue eyes and 1,200 hours' flying time. Mothers taking the four-week ferry training (which can end whenever the Army says they're in tune) are: Mrs. Betty Huyler Gillies of Long Island, president of the "99ers," an organization of women pilots founded by Amelia Earhart in 1929; Mrs. Helen Mary Clark of Englewood, N. J., each with two children, and Mrs. Catherine Slocum of Bryn Mawr, Pa., who has four.

These are not the first women fliers in civilian war work. Already there are several squadrons of women pilots patrolling this country. Many women teach flying now, and women test pilots okay planes at factory fields.

MRS. BETTY GILLIES
She's mother of two

MRS. HELEN CLARK
She has two sons

MRS. CATHERINE SLOCUM
Her score: 600 flying hours, four children

But the sight of a slight five-foot modern matron lugging a parachute toward an Army trainer-plane inspires serious thinking.

Typical applicant for the ferry service is about 30 years old, married, with one child, 13 years of flying with about 1,400 hours in various types of planes. So says the office of the director of women pilots, Second Ferrying Group, Ferrying Division Air Transport Command, War Department, Washington. That's the place to send applications.

Although only experienced pilots, with at least 50 hours in the air in the past year and at least 500 altogether can be considered for ferrying, about 40 letters come to Washington daily from women who want to learn how to fly.

The schedule at the ferrying school is stiff. The women have their own alert room, where a record is kept of where they are all the time. It's a seven-day-a-week program starting at 6:30 a. m. daily. Roll call comes at 8 a. m. And they have drill, too. During part of their approximately 25 hours of flying here the trainees often have definite directions to follow, including forced landings.

The barracks are bare as only military barracks can be. The girls get no frills for their rooms, but some add curtains and a few conveniences. They pay 75 cents a night for a room. Lunch at the officers' mess is 50 cents, and it's good and hearty food.

A woman reports here at her own expense after an interview and physical examination by an Army flight surgeon. Here she gets an interview, flight check and a check of credentials, also by the Army.

Same Tests

The girl flying candidate takes exactly the same test a male pilot takes for the ferrying. Finally she appears before a board of three Army officers who review her records and flight check to pronounce her a WAF (member of Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron).

After her four-week training period ends she probably will spend only ten per cent of her time at this base.

Her pay is $3,000 a year—$250 the month.

She wears a G. I. flight suit for flying but other times wears a gray-green gabardine jacket with skirt or slacks which is regulation but is not called a uniform. The WAACs are the only women with the Army authorized to wear uniforms. Director Love calls these flight suits "teddy bear suits."

Already the WAFS have impressed the soldiers who've seen them drill or fly. Their regulations are fewer than the WAACs, every sign seems to say "Women Working."

A 'FLYING TIGER' TALKS ABOUT FOOD

Erickson Schilling, Washington member of the famed Flying Tigers, being interviewed by Elinor Lee of WJSV about his exploits in the sort of weirdly painted craft shown above

A man who has argued in pantomime across half the world for grilled American cheese sandwiches is Erickson Schilling, blonde member of Brig. Gen. Clair Chenault's famed Flying Tigers who has just returned to his Washington home on two months' leave.

Schilling, complete with his Flying Tiger pin designed by Walt Disney, was halted on an Alsab like schedule about the city in a corner of WJSV's studios, where he had just been interviewed on the air by Elinor Lee.

Concerning his own exploits over China and Japan he was as shy as he must have been during his school days at Eastern High, with practically nothing to say about the three Nipponese bombers he has to his credit.

But food? His eyes brightened as he described complex gestures aimed to teach Chinese cooks how to make grilled American cheese sandwiches or steaks done to a turn on armor plate salvaged from dismantled airplanes, placed over charcoal burners.

Steaks a la Chinese are "awfully tough," he reports—it seems that native cooks try to go all out for Americans by creating what they fondly imagine are American dishes. But if these imitations are culinary flops, they make up for the discrepancy by producing excellent food typical of their own land: Schilling's favorite was small pieces of pork rolled in flour, fried, and then garnished with an unindentifiable reddish, bittersweet sauce.

"But on steaks they aren't so good," he added, "because they use their cattle purely for work, such as pulling carts, and wouldn't think of killing one until he was old and tough."

As for the grilled cheese sandwiches, Schilling found that the lack of fresh butter reduced the attractiveness of his pet food—and reported a similar difficulty in South America, where he had more troubles in pantomime over the same delicacy.

The Chinese also make ice cream, but the water buffalo milk they use gives a queer, tangy taste to the product, and in addition it is too icy to please an American palate.

It is far more difficult to coax him to enlarge on his flying experiences—for example: the time he was en route to his Chinese base from Rangoon, had engine trouble, and made a crash landing high in the mountains of China.

The natives had never seen a foreigner before, and they knew that Japs were foreigners—so they took no chances with their blonde visitor. They gave him food and water, but guarded him carefully until an interpreter arrived from his air base to identify him and take him back.

When the Chinese discovered that he was an American pilot, nothing was too good for him, and they refused even to let him walk, providing him with a sedan chair and two carriers to transport him.

"And it was cold up there," he recalls; "gee, I wanted to walk but they just wouldn't let me!"

His favorite person, outside of his Army flying father (whom he met en route home, in Africa) is, like most Flying Tigers, General Chenault.

Schilling's next assignment is with the China National Aviation Corporation, for whom he will help to provide materials, via the airways, to help replace the Burma Road.

Blind Girl Finds Place in War Work for Those Who Cannot See

If the sight of attractive women working as riveters in the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. once created national interest, imagine what commotion an attractive blind woman caused when she successfully attempted the same job!

Yet Hazel Hurst, energetic young originator of the foundation for the blind at Monrovia, Calif., named for her, did precisely that, and several other tough assignments at Lockheed to prove that totally or partially blind people can be thoroughly useful in the war effort.

13 Now Working

So expert was she, in fact, that her experiment laid the groundwork for 13 of her pupils to pitch in and do man sized jobs at Lockheed, with such success that C. L. Pelton, superintendent of fabrication for the factory, told her: "My foremen are pressing me now for more of your people."

Hazel Hurst, completely at ease and capable of taking care of herself, arrived in Washington with her Belgian shepherd guide dog, Bonnie, Wednesday, and astonished the residents and staff of the Mayflower Hotel, where she is staying, by breezing through a crowded lobby, down steps, and literally wherever she wished to go without the slightest hesitation. Bonnie, a perfectly trained 3½-year-old, is the secret of her amazing whirls about the city.

She is in Washington to obtain sufficient Nation-wide recognition to convice war industries to accept the idea of blind people working side by side with people of normal sight—and to find some words of encouragement from official Washington to bolster the spirits of "my people" back in California. Not that they need bolstering, she adds, but even the most unflagging will be stimulated anew by praise from higher-ups.

Much of that encouragement has been offered by William Jeffers, rubber czar, and War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson, who are enthusiastic in their praise of the work done by those blind people at Lockheed.

"Actually, it takes courage for a blind man or woman to work in an airplane factory," Miss Hurst admits. "I tried each of the jobs myself to see if they were suitable for us, particularly in the line of safety—and for the first few days, I found the noises really terrifying. But Bonnie was calm about it, and soon we were completely at home."

Because of her experiment, 13 people—some of them receiving a monthly pension from the Government — became self-supporting, to the extent of earning $50 weekly, buying war bonds, having Social Security numbers, and generally living just as they have always dreamed: "like other people."

Miss Hurst has been without her sight all of her life, but many of her students became blind through accidents.

Went to Europe

When she is not testing the production of P-38's and Hudsons at Lockheed, Miss Hurst finds plenty of additional items to occupy her time. Before the war she made two trips to Europe, and traveled so much by motor that her first dog (which later died) never was content unless she was given frequent taxi rides.

Particularly she is grateful to the Rotary Club of her home town in New York, from whom she received her first boost in promoting education for the blind. Her own school has been in existence for four years, offering a three-month course to dogs and a month's training to dog and new master combined.

Sympathy? As Miss Hurst told a Washington official who misunderstood her motive: "I'm sorry, but I have no time for sympathy."

So well trained is Bonnie that she will work for no one but her owner, and sat firmly by Miss Hurst's sides when a Post reporter tried to lure her for a walk down a Mayflower corridor. She understands fully about steps, traffic and elevators, and even leads Miss Hurst directly to the elevator button.

Traffic lights?

"Heavens! Knowing about traffic lights wouldn't do us any good with women drivers! Bonnie knows how to judge the speed and distance of cars, and we cross streets that way."

Conversation Piece

Military Chatter—How To Keep It Rolling

BY ANNE HAGNER

With an Army of 7½ million men anticipated for next year, five tires for every car and two service men on every door step will be the design for living in '43. But how will Miss Average American accept this influx into the armed services? Will she be equipped to keep the conversational ball rolling when even her 4-F friends are rehabilitated and sent off to Camp Lee?

So, in the interests of idle chatter to bolster the morale of America's fighting men during those furloughs and sallies into the super-civilized world, we offer a brief plan for social dealing with the various ranks.

First there is the private, far from lowly, far from understood. His head daily is crammed with a thousand military terms that he is determined to try on his civilian acquaintances, and it is well to give him all the chance he needs to tell you about his corporal and his K. P. and his G. I. shoes and his shiny new 1903 rifle.

More than likely, it is unnecessary to tell him about home town gossip, as he has been in the Army for such a short time that his family still is entranced with the idea of keeping him completely posted on local goings-on, as directed by all articles on "Letters to Your Service Man."

By the time he gets to be a corporal, however, he is less eager to tell you about the pretty ditch he dug the other day, and more enthusiastic about you personally. Also, he makes more money and wants to be coaxed to dance, dine, and generally celebrate his brief freedom—so be prepared.

The corporal and his immediate superior, the sergeant, are tried and true military experts by the time they reach that advanced stage in Army life, and will be glad to clear you up on the situation in the Middle East, or the likelihood of Washington's being bombed.

Gentlemen in the Army Air Forces are as enthusiastic about flying as they would be over a double order of steak and French fried potatoes. Whether they are just enlisted men, or already are sporting their bars, they won't be completely happy unless they can relate the distance (as the pursuit plane flies) between Washington and practically every spot on the map. However, they are carefree souls who have so few furloughs that they make entertaining dates—and they won't expect you to talk much.

Naval aviators are fundamentally the same, except that it is inadvisable to refer to their branch as "Navy Air Corps" or to their vacations as "furlough." Make it "Naval Aviation" and "leave," please—and don't ask a Navy flyer why is his uniform that funny green color. Odds are that he will respond gravely that he is a patrol leader in the Boy Scouts.

Lo, the poor officer candidate; he has more worries than a full general. He is scorned, joshed, worked to a frazzle, watched like a suspected spy and ordered to study more in three months than he ever did in four years of college—but he has a sense of humor, or else he is an officer's candidate no longer. Treat him and his pocketbook gently and let him tell you all about it; remember, he'll be wearing bars in a few short weeks.

Lieutenants, particularly second lieutenants, spend few happy hours. They have to salute so many people that they bear a hunted look en route down E Street, and they suspect all men. Try to steer the conversation away from military matters or they will give forth with an alarming array of verbal tactics, just for practice.

Captains should be watched very closely. They have been in the service just long enough to become hardened to it, and a number of people (all feminine) have confided that they look simply marvelous in those handsome winter uniforms. Naturally, after a while they believe it, and no end of trouble begins. They are excellent providers, however, and can be lured away from discussions of things military, though sometimes with difficulty.

In the Navy, one must deal gently with ensigns and lieutenants that are suffering from beach jobs. Most of them would give half a stripe to see a lot more water than is afforded by the view from Memorial Bridge, and are sensitive when asked about seasickness or when referred to as "admiral."

Keeping the Blackout Outside Your Home

By Martha Ellyn

Martha Ellyn

Surprise blackouts don't give time to pull out a blanket, jerk off the bedspread, or tack newspapers to the windows. Besides the blackout is supposed to be kept outside the home and not cast gloom over the inside.

Perhaps Hitler and Hirohito would like us to sit in the dark, inactive and waiting. But that's not the general plan. The meaning of a blackout is no telltale lights showing to the enemy. No "halo" or soft glow to be seen.

Cheerful surroundings are a necessity. Children become frightened sitting in the dark. Then there are lessons to be studied or games to be played. We must go on with our Red Cross knitting, our First Aid studies, our mending and many other tasks. Besides a birthday party may be in progress. Dinner may be in the process of being served. Guests may be enjoying a game of bridge. If the home is not prepared for blackout, activity can not go on.

We need light, and adequate light, behind blackout curtains. A home without light is much like a face without a smile. The are many ways to blackout a room. Your decorative scheme as well as your budget will determine the manner in which you will blackout.

It is not necessary to blackout an entire house or apartment. First you will have to decide the room or rooms that are the simplest to blackout. Consideration should be given to rooms which will allow the family to continue living as normally as possible. A playroom, kitchen, living room may be selected. Of course, the bathroom will need blacking out too.

Don't rush out and buy material before you have had a rummage review of trunks and old boxes in the attic, basement or on closet shelves. Yesterday's finery, old portieres, bedspreads and blankets can be used with little or no expenditure of money.

But if you must purchase material there are dependable and attractive ones from which to choose. The interior decorating departments of local stores have given much consideration to blackout materials. The color doesn't matter a great deal if the material is opaque so light will not penetrate. Some black materials are so loosely woven that they transmit more light than a closely woven, light-colored fabric. Greens, wine, deep blue and brown are all effective colors and add considerably more cheer to a room than black material.

Blackout curtains as shown in this modern dining room, living room combination can be a part of the decorative scheme. When not in use the rich brown permatex draperies hang in many folds. The tape on the Venetian blinds is also brown. Yellow walls and modernistic floral patterned rug in green tones, give a suitable background for the bleached blonde mahogany furniture. For information concerning sources of blackout materials call National 4200, Ext. 242

Some stores have specially treated materials for blackout curtains. Among the other materials recommended are: twill, canton flannel, awning fabric, permatex (a ruberized specially treated material), imitation leather, chevron, double fold duvetyn, muslin and gabardine.

Roller shades even though they are opaque and black and mounted inside the window frame, will NOT meet blackout requirements. A sliver of light is clearly seen all around the sides, unless firmly anchored. Of course some of the black roller shades come complete with side-clips and hold down brackets and they are adequate. Venetian blinds alone are unsatisfactory.

If you will call us at National 4200, Extension 242, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., we will tell you the source of blackout materials.

Softener in Water Ends Wash Worries

If your water is hard, the use of a water softener will be mare than repaid by its savings in soap. Softener should always be dissolved in the water before soap is added.

You will also save soap if you measure it out in a cup before putting it into your washer. A little experimenting will tell you the approximate measurement of soap to build a good 2-inch suds in your washer.

DOS AND DON'TS FOR BLACKOUT

DO choose a room or rooms with the fewest windows.

DO cover up windows and doors so light cannot be seen from the outside. Venetian blinds and black roller shades that hang inside are not sufficient.

DO have a plan so when a blackout warning is sounded, it can be carried out with least effort, expense and time.

DO have adequate light. This may mean a shifting of lamps but it is worth it so as to have a cheeerfully and adequately lighted room to save eyesight and keep up morale.

DON'T go off on a shopping spree. Stored away materials may be the answer and so material can be conserved.

DON'T necessarily buy black materials. Other colors will fit into the color scheme and be effective and not depressing.

DON'T buy or use colored lamp bulbs. Colored bulbs waste light.

DON'T use curtains, drapes and shades of thin material that will force you to reduce light beyond the eye-safety point.

Decorator's Diary

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

MONDAY—

Did you know that you can bleach Oriental rugs? It may sound odd but it's possible now to do a bang-up job of face-lifting on old rugs and carpets—an idea that may come in handy since wool carpets will be on the "scarce" list for the duration. Carpets can be re-dyed effectively—or they can be bleached out to pastel tones. Even too-strong patterned Orientals can be faded out and used in their pale versions or else re-dyed in a soft tint. But don't make this change 'till you're sure . . . in certain rooms dark jewel-toned Orientals are lovely, whether they're "in" or "out" of style.

TUESDAY—

Nightgowns weren't always the simple washable affairs they are today . . . Queen Elizabeth went to bed in a gown of velvet with lace trim and fur lining. And Anne Boleyn had a gown of black satin with velvet trimming.

WEDNESDAY—

Recipe for a fresh crisp bedroom . . . light blue walls, curtains and chairs covered in cherry red figured chintz, a white tufted spread, white string throw rugs.

THURSDAY—

Wood, specially treated with a dry-salts preservative, will have the termites on the run when the war is over. Millions of feet of lumber thus treated is going into naval docks and other war building, taking the place of precious metals. Peace-time will find new homes built of specially prepared wood which will defeat decay and the destroying termite. It has been estimated that millions of dollars worthy of destruction was caused last year by these two enemies of permanence. If you have a rotting porch floor or outdoor stairway you might investigate this processed wood and save many a future headache.

FRIDAY—

If modern designers have their way, we very well may become a nomadic nation. Along with portable houses we now have portable demountable furniture (designed by Dan Cooper)—a houseful of plywood furnishings which can be knocked together (or apart) in 15 minutes. In future the turtle and the snail will have nothing on us—just stick your house and your furniture on your trailer and carry your shelter wherever you want to go.

SATURDAY—

Part Pompadour On the Square

Part your pompadour square in the middle, to make it look new and different. If you want to see how it's done, run quick and look at Rosalind Russell in her new R. K. O. Radio production, "Stand By to Die." Her hair is brushed back smoothly from forehead and temples on either side of the center part, each side turned back and under in a smooth pompadour roll.

Ends are brought round and under to the front, on either side of the part, there set in small, smooth ringlets just back of the hairline. Back hair is brushed down smoothly, the ends set in a thick roll all across the back.

Smelling Salts

Something new to tuck in your handbag, along with lipstick and powder: smelling salts. No, not the old-fashioned "take the-top-of-your-head-off" type, that grandmother use to have handy. It's a refreshing, spicy scent, one which will give a lift when most needed in mid-morning or afternoon, a revivifier at the end of a too-busy day.

Treasure Hunt

This bag is a veritable treasure. It's made of crisp faille folded into a gold frame. You will find it carries without bulk the incredible amount of paraphernalia most of us find indispensable—it also holds its own slim gold compact that matches the frame. It would be a good companion to any afternoon costume and could double up for evening. Comes in black or brown. Practical, pretty and all the trimmings for under $7. To find it, please call National 4200, extension 242, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

If you think you're a good cook, just ask yourself whether your family likes vegetables. If not, the reason could be you don't know how to cook them properly!

That quiz is in keeping with the findings of Dr. Theodore F. Zucker, Columbia University, whose recent research on nutrition is of special interest to the homemaker faced with meatless days.

It is Dr. Zucker's opinion that the cooking and selection of vegetables are the main things. The family must like a food before they will eat it. Also, it must be purchased with an eye to the vitamin value, and cooked so as not to lose these essentials.

"But," Dr. Zucker told me, "if soybeans, cottonseed and peanuts are skillfully used, they can be made not only to replace the protein in meat but also the B vitamins in vegetables." These B vitamins are the ones in which most diets are lacking.

For a number of years Chinese children have been getting along very well on a diet consisting mainly of curdled soy bean milk. "That," the eminent scientist observes, "is something you have to learn to like. But all of us are going to learn to like a lot of things before this war is over."

In a paper before the American Chemical Society, Dr. Zucker suggested the use of meat and flour made from soy beans, cotton seed and peanuts to offset any possible protein shortage that might be created by the shipment of huge quantities of meat to our Allies.

Laboratory experiments with mice placed on diets of the three different seeds have proved the seeds to be an exceptionally rich source of good quality protein, with a B vitamin content comparing favorably with that of the green vegetables.

Our food industries never lag very far behind science. You can buy cottonseed flour for as little as 5 cents per pound. Peanut flour is so much in demand by our military forces that there is no wide distribution among civilians but it is hoped the supplies will be increased. In the meantime, we can get peanut butter, soy bean flour and cotton seed flour.

While waiting for the new products to be made more generally available, we can take the scientist's tip and greatly improve our dietary by looking into the vegetable situation. Our next crop of Victory Gardens will help us to recognize those that are fresh. We already know how to cook them quickly, in as little water as possible, and to serve the liquid with them.

Back Shields Will Prevent Discoloration

Ugly discoloration of perspiration on the back or shoulder of valued silks and synthetics can be avoided by sewing or pinning in a lightweight back shield which will keep perspiration from soiling the dress.

Back shields may be bought in department stores and dime stores. They are made of washable cloth, sometimes of cotton, sometimes of silk, sometimes of cotton net. The last is particularly good for very sheer dresses. They can be bought ready-made or can easily be made by hand or machine. Use the back pattern of any dress or blouse to cut out the material, and hem all around. Fasten to the inside of the dress at the shoulder seams with small stitches or tiny safety pins.

Choose a soft material for shields, as a scratchy fabric will be uncomfortable. Discarded pieces of old dress slips are ideal. A picot edge is a pretty substitute for a hem, and can be done at home if the sewing machine has a picot attachment.

The back shields should be removed and washed thoroughly in soap and water after each two or three wearings.

Diaper Wiper

The Government almost "stole" baby's diapers as wipers for Army and Navy binoculars. It happened this way: A leading optical goods manufacturer with Government contracts approached a leading manufacturer of viscose rayon and asked for a soft, absorbent, and lint-free material for binocular wipers. Tests on all kinds of fabrics showed that diaper material was best. So, it was used.

Treatment of Chronic Pains in Shoulder

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

ONE OF the minor, silent revolutions, but none the less important and striking advances in medical science, has been in the study of those old afflictions of mankind—the pains around the muscles and tendons, like lumbago, sciatica, sacro-iliac, wry neck, tennis elbow, etc.

Such terms as "lumbago" or "sciatica" are now used almost exclusively by the laity and, whether they know it or not, they are nothing but labels, mere smoke screens for ignorance. A patient is all pleased with himself when he has learned to say, "I have lumbago." He thinks it shows a profound knowledge of the situation, when all it means is "I have a pain in the general region of the lumbar muscles of the back.

Now the medical profession was in exactly this blissful psychological state of mind 50 years ago, and they used the terms lumbago and sciatica as if they had definite meanings. Since then we have learned that there is always something behind these terms. A few weeks ago in this column we discussed the latest findings on sciatica—that in over half the cases it is due to protrusion of an intervertebral disk, and can be relieved by surgery.

A quiet accumulation of information has occurred around that humble but troublesome affliction, chronic pain in the shoulder. Forty years ago it was "rheumatism" (that name satisfied everybody), and the diagnosis was made when the patient made a wry face, put his opposite hand on his shoulder and rubbed and shrugged. And the treatment was to put a piece of flannel over it and apply a hot iron.

Now, according to an article I have been reading by Dr. N. C. Moseley, of Montreal, Canada, we have quite definite conceptions of the three common causes of chronic shoulder pain. They are (1) inflammation of the bursa under the acromial process of the shoulder blade; (2) calcified deposits around the tendons of the muscles, and (3) rupture of one of the shoulder tendons.

When doctors 50 years ago began to x-ray their patients with shoulder pain they often found that the bursa between the arm bone and the shoulder blade, which should be a nice oiled cushion to keep the joint sliding carefully, had become calcified. It was a piece of rock. Nowadays surgeons dissect out this calcified bursa under local anesthesia with very happy results.

Another method that has contributed to our knowledge is the development of asceptic surgery. If a shoulder pain gets unbearable and the flannel and hot iron don't work, the surgeon can cut in safely and see if there is anything he can fix. This is what he does with the ruptured short rotator tendon.

Under treatment the wider employment of massage, electric treatments such as diathermy and faradism, the injection of novocain into the tender spots, has done wonders.

Rupture of the short rotator tendon occurs usually in middle-aged people after strain from lifting or a fall. They feel a snap in the shoulder accompanied by severe pain and muscle spasm. X-ray examination is of little value in this type of case, but the history, plus the fact that the movements of the shoulder in certain directions causes pain, makes the diagnosis.

Diplomat's Wife Learns to Speak English At Democratic Americanization School

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor.

USUALLY, when a foreign diplomat's wife wants to learn English she does one of three things—hires a tutor, attends a swank language school or exchanges lessons with a Washington friend. But handsome, vivacious Senora de Brunet has chosen the more democratic way—she attends the Americanization School.

Miss Reynolds

Wife of Capt. Alberto de Brunet, delegate to International Defense Board, and Naval Attache from Argentina, the friendly senora says that she is having the time of her life learning English along with the cooks, butlers, lawyers, doctors—in fact people from all walks of life, who are learning their English, civics and United States Government at the Americanization School here.

Why did the Argentine society woman take this method of learning English? In the first place, she adores people—likes to see and hear what they think and do. Then she is eager to learn all about the customs, laws and traditions of the United States.

By the way, she is one Argentine who honestly likes the United States. And if she gets her way, the North Americans and the Argentines will get together in fact and in deed—not just words—in the good neighborly way.

Except for a little Red Cross work, the Argentine women aren't mobilized for war activities. However, two United States Red Cross nurses are on their way to that country to whip the organization's activities into wartime speed, according to Senora de Brunet.

Argentine WAACS or WAVES? When quizzed on that point the senora replied: "The idea seems remote but then there is a possibility. However, should my country enter the war, I am sure women will form some sort of motor corps, do ambulance driving or anything that needs to be done."

In the meantime, Senora de Brunet is busily learning all the ins and outs of Red Cross work in the Nation's Capital. You'll find her each Thursday rolling bandages. Then she goes over to the Belgian Embassy to help her friend, the Ambassador's wife—wrap packages to send to the Belgian prisoners. As soon as her English gets to the point where she can master the technicalities—she's going to start a course in first aid. Now she spends hours writing to her friends back home telling them about the war work of the American women in this country. And when she returns there, she's intends to see her native sisters learn and apply all the methods of defense used by the women in Washington and the rest of the United States.

A keen observer, Senora Brunet who has a piquant heart-shaped face, large, flashing brown eyes, declared: "The Argentine and United States men look very much alike. Except for accents you couldn't tell them apart. But the women of the two countries are distinguishable at first glance.

There's nothing the Brunets like better than to have their friends come to their home for dinner. Senora often plays the piano and sings for them. This she does quite well. Her teacher, she told me, was a pupil of the great Paderewski. Recently, she was appointed to the committee of the Chamber Music Guild of Washington.

Although, she's lived in many European countries, Holland, Germany, France—and travelled in practically all the others, Senora Brunet says that she has never found the same friendliness that she has in the United States. "I don't limit my friends to strictly the diplomatic set," she emphasized. "I have many friends in other groups in New York and other cities. That's why I am so eager to perfect my English—I want more friends and to make good friends, you must speak their language."

No Hobbies

Aside from her musical interests Senora Brunet says that she has no hobbies—unless you consider walking and talking, she remarked laughingly . . . and of course my family. She has two sons, both of whom are attending school here. Alberto jr., aged 12, she terms a scholar. He is first in his class and fourth in the whole school in high grades—especially in English. But Manuel, aged 9, likes to play—more the tomboy kind—that is until he gets to a piano, then he becomes serious.

Before coming to the United States in 1941 as chief of the Argentine Naval Military Mission, Captain Brunet held the number two position in his country's navy. His career in the service has been a meteoric one of promotions. Because of his expert knowledge of cartography, he was given charge of the States Island Hydrographic Commission. As head of the commission he commanded the survey ships San Juan and San Luis and spent six months photographing, sounding, and making maps of the strategic State Island, located near shipping lanes leading to the Straits of Magellan.

Was Professor

During the later part of 1937 he served as professor at the Argentine Naval War College, then was removed from the school to become Chief of Staff of the River Fleet.

Despite the pressure of work caused by the war, quiet, scholarly Captain Brunet finds time during the afternoon for a little leisurely reading. His well organized office functions throughout the day. He receives all callers personally and talks with them until they themselves terminate their stay. He knows international law—in fact has a degree in it—and discusses international affairs with great zest.

State Table Will Feature United Nations Luncheon

A State table, at which representatives of the various States will preside each Saturday is a new feature of the United Nations luncheons, the first of which will take place today at Hotel 2400.

Ohio is the first State chosen in this series of 13 luncheons. Guest of honor at the Ohio State table will be Senator Harold G. Burton, who, with Mrs. Burton, will be present at the party.

Green Light for Furs

You may have as many fur coats as you can buy. They have escaped the priority problems and the gentlemen in Washington don't care how many you buy. Even so, if you're wise, you'll choose one durable, long-wearing, smart-look coat in preference to something that is luxurious ones only the first year.

Mrs. Clapper To Address Scout Leaders

Mrs. Raymond Clapper will be the principal speaker at a Girl Scout Leaders Association dinner at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets, October 21, at the launching of the Scouts' Victory Fund campaign.

The Victory fund campaign is purely a Girl Scout affair, with no outside contributions sought, inaugurated for the double purpose of building up a fund to help alleviate war-engendered distress among children of the world and to make a timely loan to the Government.

Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant, Girl Scout commissioner, will explain to the leaders the plan worked out by the local Scout office, in which every Girl Scout and adult worker will contribute a war stamp, to be turned in to the Central Victory Fund Committee at National Girl Scout headquarters. There the stamps will be converted into bonds and held in trust until they can be used for the purpose intended.

Mrs. Milton Veldee, president of the leaders' association, has extended an invitation to all council and committee members to attend the dinner. Members of the council who have made reservations include Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, Mrs. J. H. Franklin, Mrs. H. C. Kramer, Mrs. Gertrude Bowman, Mrs. J. P. Leake, Mrs. J. J. MacGregor, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. M. R. Diggs, Mrs. C. E. Waters, Mrs. F. W. Milliken, Mrs. H. F. Niemeyer, Mrs. F. A. Heileman, Mrs. Carl Aslakson, Mrs. T. C. Alexander, Mrs. Proctor Dougherty and Mrs. Jessie Miller.

Mrs. Veldee will preside at the dinner meeting.

Palestine's War Industry Is Topic

"War Industries in Palestine Today" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Rebecca Schumann before members of the Business and Professional Women's Division of Hadassah at a meeting to be held at the Jewish Community Center on Tuesday evening, October 20.

A Halloween member-bring-a-member party at the home of Mrs. A. Lustein, 2731 Woodley Road Northwest, is scheduled for October 31. There will be a buffet supper and pupils of Rose Robison Cohen's drama school will entertain with recitations. Reservations may be made with Mary Morse, Shadyside 4977.

"Magnificent Spirit"

WAVES Lieut. Talks of Women in War Effort

Has Noticed No Complacency; Says No Sacrifice Too Great at Time Like This

By Patricia Grady

There are 34 others like her, and according to an act of Congress that is all there will ever be.

Lieut. Bernice Drake Lill of the WAVES wears the two stripes of a full naval lieutenant on the sleeves of her dark uniform and speaks of the war job she is doing with uncontrolled enthusiasm. As a procurement officer in the Fifth Naval District with headquarters in Richmond, Va., she has noticed none of the lethargy towards the war about which Washington talks.

"The women we are constantly meeting and interviewing," explains Lieutenant Lill, "are women who are interested in serving their country no matter what the sacrifice may be. And many of them are making decided sacrifices to do men's jobs so that they may be released for active combat service. The spirit is magnificent."

Up from Richmond to attend two days of intensive conferences at the Navy Department for officers from offices of Naval Officer Procurement, Lieutenant Lill had her leave extended one day so that she might stay in the Capital to address a luncheon meeting yesterday of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Club of Washington. Before receiving her naval reserve commission in August, Lieutenant Lill served as registrar of Sweet Briar College.

"At first one feels self-conscious about saluting," admits this energetic officer, "but soon you come to feel that it is a symbol of respect for the title, not the person who bears it."

'Not a Career, But a Service'

There is one point that recruiting officers seek to make clear to applicants for the WAVES. Being a member of the Women's Naval Reserve is not a career, but a service. The whole principle on which the reserve has been set up is to relieve men for active sea duty, to take over the jobs, both technical and clerical, that men are now doing.

As to the difficulty of obtaining enlisted personnel for the WAVES, Lieutenant Lill speaks from her own experience. "Our district more than filled its quota last month, but as time goes on it is going to become increasingly difficult to do so. This is NOT because women are willing to serve only as officers. It is because war industries have absorbed many women, and now governmental orders have frozen them in their jobs, and because in the Congressional Act creating the WAVES, women with husbands in the service cannot join. As you can imagine, that greatly cuts down our field."

Not only that, she points out, but to date the publicity emphasis has been put on officer candidate possibilities. When it is made clear to women the jobs they will be able to do as enlisted men, Lieutenant Lill feels that the problem will be well on its way to being solved. "They will be doing fascinating jobs," explains the lieutenant with more than a shade of envy. "They will be radio operators, decoding experts, and have a chance to learn many interesting techniques."

Feels Like a Real Southerner

After 14 years of living in Virginia when she was registrar of Sweet Briar College, Lieutenant Lill feels like a nativeSoutherner. "As a matter of fact I was really born in the South," she says with a laugh even while admitting that her birthplace was Staten Island, N. Y. "My dad was a worshiper of Robert E. Lee and in tribute to him developed a real estate section on Staten Island which he called Arlington, after Lee's home. The streets were all called Confederacy Place or Davis Boulevard. It really was just the South transplanted."

After graduating from Wellesley, Lieutenant Lill worked there for a time in the registrar's office. Then for a year she made her headquarters here in Washington at Madeira School. Sweet Briar was her next career step before the WAVES. It was through Sweet Briar President Meda Glass, who is on the advisory committee to the Women's Naval Reserve, that Miss Lill became lieutenant.

Local Girls Make Good at Mt. Holyoke

Local girls are making good in the colleges around the country this year. From Mount Holyoke comes word of several Capital lassies whose activities are giving Washington a reputation for high-grade campus contributions.

Miss Rhoda-Glenn Collins, who makes her home here at the Wardman Park Hotel, is a member of the production staff for recent laboratory theater plays, and is also a member of the Dance Club. Miss Jean Parrish of 3211 Foxhall Road is house chairman for Friends of Art, a community organization for those interested in art exhibits.

Chairman of decorations for the first formal dance, Llamarada, which was held yesterday, was Miss Marguerite Fleming of 7210 Fairfax Road, Edgemoor. The dance is given by the staff of the senior year book.

Another member of the Dance Club is Miss Jean Dieffenbach of 5615 Nebraska Avenue. Miss Lucy Chapin of 2032 Belmont Road sells junior lunch sandwiches, cakes and milk each day as member of the senior class committee to raise funds.

Party at Embassy To Honor Envoy's Son and Bride

What would a home-coming be without a fiesta? And never let it be said that a party was lacking at the Mexican Embassy when there was good reason for one.

Returning from their honeymoon today are Lieut. and Senora de Castillo Najera, jr., who have been in Canada since their wedding here several weeks ago. And tonight they will be honored at a dance at the embassy when the bridegroom's brother, Luis Castillo Najera, and Lieut. Carlos Chapoy of the military attache's office, will be hosts.

There will be music and food aplenty, and although the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera will be on hand, the guests will be mostly those from the younger Latin set. Sharing honors at the party will be Senorita Erma Castillo Najera and her fiance, Capt. Manuel Martinez Castro.

John J. Dempsey Has New Grandson

If there is one thing that can take a politician's mind off of forthcoming elections, it's a grandson.

John J. Dempsey, Democratic nominee for Governor of New Mexico, is the proud grandpapa. The baby was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. David McNeill at Columbia Hospital here. Mrs. McNeil is the former Miss Muriel Dempsey, daughter of the one-time Undersecretary of Interior and ex-Representative, Mr. Dempsey.

Unfortunately, Mr. Dempsey was not able to be in the Capital for the big event as pre-election business has kept him in New Mexico. The elections take place on November 4 and he is running against Joseph Tondre, Republican nominee.

Underwood & Underwood

The Lieutenant took a Senorita from Panama this time. Mrs. Joseph C. Bremer, pictured above, and her husband, a lieutenant, are now at Fort Bragg, N. C., where they plan to make their home. The bride, who is the former Frances E. Escoffery, formerly worked at the Panamanian Embassy here and was given in marriage several days ago by the Ambassador, Ernesto Jaen Guardia

Susan Booth Strange Becomes Bride of Charles Bewick Hall

Gordonsville, Va., Oct. 16.—Christ Church this afternoon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Susan Booth Strange, daughter of Mrs. William Benjamin Arnold and the late Edwin Burton Strange, to Charles Bewick Hall, son of Mrs. Martin Mower of Cambridge, Mass., and Lewis Hall of Detroit, Mich. The Rev. Henry Batcheller and Deacon George Bean officiated at the 3:30 afternoon ceremony.

The bride was gowned in old ivory satin, hand-embroidered with seed pearls. Her tulle veil was held to her hair by a coronet of old French thread lace belonging to her great-grandmother. Josephine Louise Pernot, and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Joseph Andreae was the matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Theodore Booth Strange of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. James Newman Andrews, jr., of Foxtrot, Barboursville, Va. Lydstron David Cady was the best man and the ushers were William O. Arnold of Gordonsville and Henry Michael of Charlottesville, Va.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the historic home of the bride's mother, Annandale, which was built in 1775 on Spotswood Trail in Orange County. Guests were received on the lawn by the Spring Garden, while a harpist in Colonial costume played old ballads and Negro spirituals. When the couple left for their wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the bride was wearing brown wool with accessories of red fox furs. The couple will make their home in Montreal, Canada, where Mr. Hall is connected with the Fairchild Aircraft Plant.

The bride attended St. Ann's school in Charlottesville and the National Cathedral School. Mr. Hall attended Harvard.

Barbara Cullen Is Among Brides-Elect Listed Today

Mr. and Mrs. William Vincent Cullen of San Antonio, Tex., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Barbara, to Lieut. William O'Neill Turney, U. S. A. A. F., son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Turney of Washington.

The bride-elect was graduated from the St. Agnes Academy in Houston and attended art courses at the University of Houston. Her fiance attended St. Albans School, was graduated from Manlius School in New York and attended Colgate University where he was a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity. A student officer at Randolph Field in March, he was graduated from the Advanced Flying School at Kelly Field. He is now stationed at Randolph Field.

The wedding will take place in San Antonio on November 7.

Dudley—Amesbury

Mrs. Charles Wyndham Clark of Leicestershire, England, and Baltimore, announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Cecelie Marguerite Dudley of New York, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Franklin J. Dudley of New York and London, to Lieut. Walter Raleigh Amesbury, jr., U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raleigh Amesbury of Newton and Waters-Edge Farm, South Duxbury, Mass.

Miss Dudley attended the Frances Shimer School for Girls and studied music in Vienna. She also studied at the Feagin School of Dramatic Art and Columbia University. Lieutenant Amesbury is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He was editor of the Crimson at Harvard and is a member of the Harvard Club of Boston. He is now stationed in Washington.

Hennings—Lewis

Fred W. Hennings of Bryans Road, Md., has announced the betrothal of his daughter, Elizabeth Kathleen, to William H. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lewis of Bluemont, Va.

Mr. Lewis is now on active duty with the Naval Reserve and is stationed in Washington.

Lynch-Clarke Rites Scheduled Today At Camp Langdon

At a ceremony today in the Army Chapel at Camp Langdon, N. H., Miss Jill Hamilton Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Clarke of The Quarries, Croydon, Surrey, England, will become the bride of Lieut. William J. Lynch, United States Army. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Lynch of Tacoma, Fla.

Miss Clarke joined the staff of the Ministry of Economic Warfare in London at the beginning of the war. Recently, however, she has been working at the British Embassy as personal assistant to British Minister Noel Hall.

Walkers Have Son

Maj. and Mrs. John E. Walker announce the birth of a son, John Ernest Walker, jr., on October 14 in Galveston, Tex. Mrs. Walker is the former Miss Libbie Moody Thompson of Galveston, and Major Walker is from Washington.

Purely Personal

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Litvinoff have issued invitations for a reception on November 7 from 5 until 7 o'clock at the embassy. The celebration will be in honor of the Twenty-firth Anniversary of the Great October Revolution.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins were hosts at a party yesterday afternoon in honor of the retiring military attache of the embassy, Brig. Gen. Amaro Soares Bittencourt and Mme. Bittencourt who are leaving next week to return to Rio. Sharing honors at the party was Capt. Kelvin Ramos Bittencourt, his son, assistant military attache, and Mme. Bittencourt, who also will be returning to Rio.

The Ambassador of the Netherlands, Alexander Loudon, was host at a dinner last evening at the embassy in honor of the commander in chief of the Netherlands Navy, Lieut. Admiral Johannes Furstner.

The Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro, will be host at a stag luncheon next Wednesday in honor of the Minister of Finance of El Salvador, Dr. Rodrigo Sanayoa.

Capt. and Mrs. Walter G. Ross have returned to Washington, after many years in Madrid, and have purchased a house at 2407 California Street. Captain Ross was in business in Spain for a number of years and was president of the American Society of Madrid.

Canadian Minister's Wife Decries Crowded Washington

'It Must Have Been Lovely City Before The War,' Says Mrs. L. B. Pearson

"Well, it must have been a lovely city before the war"—was Mrs. L. B. Pearson's comment yesterday on a very wet and crowded Washington. Mrs. Pearson came down from Ottawa only several weeks ago to join her husband who is the Minister-Counselor of the Canadian Legation.

Yesterday the couple shared honors at a party at the Canadian Legation given by the Minister, Leighton McCarthy. Mrs. McCarthy has not returned from Toronto where she has been for several months. Some 200 guests had been asked to the 5:30 till 7:30 fete which really served as a "welcome" to the Pearsons although the Minister took up his duties here in June.

Naturally Mrs. Pearson has spent the remainder of her time since she arrived "house hunting" and that is the cause of the remark in the first paragraph. "It really would be a pleasant city if it were not so crowded," she insisted. The Pearson's 13-year-old daughter, Patricia, has accompanied them here but their son, Geoffrey, just a bit older, has remained in school in Canada.

When she gets the house problem settled, Mrs. Pearson hopes to engage in some war work. She was an ardent member of the Red Cross superfluity shop in Ottawa which netted $2000 a month with all-volunteer help. The "superfluity shop sells anything and everything we can lay our hands on," said Mrs. Pearson.

Shortly before his appointment to Washington Minister Pearson served as assistant undersecretary of state for external affairs in Ottawa. A career diplomat, he was for a number of years at Canada House in London. There he was in the office of the high commissioner for Canadian affairs.

Cancel Engagements

The Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante are canceling all of their social engagements for the time being. They are in mourning for their son-in-law, Dr. Estaben Kerpel-Fronius, who passed away in New York following an illness, on October 7.

The Ambassador has returned to Washington after three weeks in New York. Senora de Escalante and Senora de Kerpel-Fronius will remain in New York for two weeks.

Plans Full Speed Ahead for Gala Fashion Show

At a preliminary meeting a few days ago plans were discussed for the dress show to be given for the British-American Ambulance Corps on November 6. The event will take place at the Shoreham Hotel, and some of the most attractive girls and young matrons in town have been selected to act as models for the latest dresses from Garfinckel's collection.

Among the women who attended the preliminary meeting where plans for the show were discussed were Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Lady Broderick, Lady Sinclair, Mrs. Thomas Riggs, Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Countess Buyer-Miniere, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. J. G. Wasserman of Philadelphia, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. Breckenridge Bayne and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, chairman.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil R. Callis of Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Elizabeth, to Edward E. Yost, son of former Judge and Mrs. Louis Yost, sr., also of Silver Spring. The wedding will take place in November. The bride-to-be is employed in the United States Public Health Service in the Bethesda Research Laboratory. Mr. Yost is an engineer in the Suburban Sanitary Commission.

Miss Mary Duff Is Bride-Elect Of L. W. Glowa

MARY COSETTE DUFF

Col. and Mrs. Robinson E. Duff announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Cosette, to Latimer William Glowa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Glowa of Elmhurst, N. Y.

Miss Duff attended Mount Vernon Seminary, Washington, D. C., and was graduated from Wellesley College. She is the daughter of Colonel Duff who until recently was on General Somervell's staff.

Mr. Glowa graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was a former aviation consultant for Queens County, New York, and is now with the Air Staff, Army Air Forces, in Washington.

Helen Bull Is Engaged

Mrs. Helen G. Bull announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen Bull, to Charles Slagle 4th, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slagle, jr., of Baltimore.

The bride-elect attended Gunston Hall School and Mr. Slagle attended Gillman School in Baltimore. He is the nephew of Russell Slagle and W. Jacob Slagle, famed Princeton football men.

Unused 'Scrap' Discovered by Noted Sculptor

Back in the Capital for a few days after a swing through the Middle West, well-known sculptor Suzanne Silvercruys is disturbed about the scrap iron and steel drive.

"I saw many dumps with rusting and useless motors and automobile parts," observes Miss Silvercruys. "There are streetcar tracks no longer used in many large and small cities. I saw several miles of steel rails, plates, and spikes alongside the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad just outside of Trenton, rusting and fast becoming unusable. Why dash about digging up old keys out of the garret when scrap in such quantities is available? It doesn't seem to me that if we are really serious about this shortage of scrap metal that we are being even 50 per cent efficient in locating it and putting it to use."

At her home on Lowell Lane for a few days, Miss Silvercruys will leave the first of the week to continue her lecture tour. She will go to New York, Chicago, Kansas City and Milwaukee before returning to Washington.

U. S. Employes' Paydays to Be Increased

In order to facilitate the payment of Washington's approximate 28,000 Government employes and to spread out more evenly the flow of cash from Federal checks, President Roosevelt directed Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's office yesterday to increase the number of Government paydays from four to 20.

The plan is scheduled to go into effect beginning November 16, and was worked out by the Treasury Department and the Bureau of the Budget.

"By greatly reducing and equalizing the number of employes paid each day to spread more evenly the flow of money into Washington commercial establishments.

"To alleviate shopping and banking inconvenience for Government employes and the public generally.

"In order that the benefits inherent in the proposal may be realized, you are requested to increase from 4 to 14 the number of semi-monthly pay periods and paydays for Federal employes in Metropolitan Washington paid by the Treasury Department beginning November 1, 1942, or as soon thereafter as possible, and to arrange, in collaboration with the heads of the agencies concerned, for the payment of these employes in accordance with the schedule worked out by your staff and the Bureau of the Budget. No change should be made in this schedule of agencies paid by the Treasury Department unless the Secretary of the Treasury feels that a change is necessary in the public interest."

The President also said that "it would be well to give consideration to the possibilities of extending the practice of paying employes in the lower grades in cash."

Child Waits for Real Daddy As Police Hold Kidnapers

Red Bluff, Calif., Oct. 16.—Brown-eyed little Vivian Miller waited impatiently in Grants Pass, Oreg., for her "real daddy" today as police at Red Bluff, Calif., held a man and his wife who confessed they kidnaped the 4-year-old girl. The man was quoted as saying he had always wanted a child of his own.

Vivian was found unharmed in a Grants Pass school yesterday. Almost simultaneously—though it did not become known for some time—Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont B. Du Bois of Portland, Oreg., were arrested near here for questioning. Several hours later Du Bois, in the presence of his wife and three officials, dictated a brief statement confessing the kidnaping, said Sheriff James N. Froome. Both he and his wife signed it.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Louise Miller, the child's mother, cried for joy when informed that Vivian had been found safe. Later she talked by telephone with Vivian in Grants Pass.

"It was wonderful to hear her voice," the mother said.

As Du Bois quietly related what he had done, his wife sat by, sobbing. Sheriff James N. Froome said Du Bois' statement gave this account:

"She asked me who the child belonged to and I said it belonged to me and my former wife."

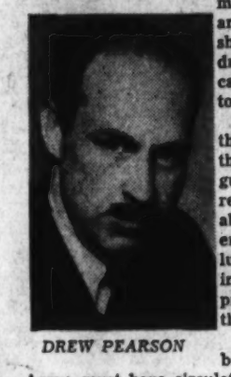
The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

The British and Rommel

HERE IS THE INSIDE reason behind British reluctance to take the offensive against Rommel in Egypt, even though they have superiority of tanks and air power—a superiority they may not have long if the Italians continue sneaking supplies across the Mediterranean.



DREW PEARSON

The explanation goes back to the loss of 300 American-made tanks in the Libyan desert, announced by Churchill after Marshal Rommel staged his spectacular drive which captured Tobruk and came so close to breaking through to Alexandria.

Military magazines published by the German Army shortly before the war, pictured 88 millimeter guns buried in the desert, their barrels protruding only a few inches above the sand, their breeches covered with brown canvas. These illustrated camouflaged artillery traps in the desert. As the enemy approached, gunners could throw off the canvas and open fire.

The German military journals had been studied by the United States Army, must have circulated among the British. They were not secret. However, gun traps such as those pictured swung the battle for Rommel.

His tanks had charged British lines, then turned back, and the British followed—straight into the camouflaged artillery traps.

United States tanks mount 75-millimeter guns and can outshoot Nazi tanks. However, when the British ran them point blank against hidden 88-millimeter guns, more than 300 tanks became desert junk.

Having put them out of commission, Rommel's fast-moving forces moved north at top speed behind the British mine fields, toward Tobruk. The British had no idea where they were heading. For part of the British force guarding Tobruk had moved south because they thought—before the 30-tank ambush—that they had Rommel on the run.

So Rommel caught Tobruk completely by surprise. Only a handful of New Zealanders were on guard outside the city.

Since then the British have been super-cautious about taking the initiative against Rommel. They have been afraid of more tank traps hidden in the desert.

NOTE—British experts agree that this was no reflection on the American tank, which has outshot German tanks when they meet in battle face to face. Official reports from Russia, despite some reports to the contrary, also are high in praise of United States tanks.

Kansas Gerrymander

IN THE POLITICAL redistricting of States following the last census, no House member got a larger dose of "Gerrymandering" than the lone Kansas Democrat, Representative Jack Houston. The G .O. P.-controlled Kansas Legislature added 11 Republican counties to his district, and Houston will have to do some powerful campaigning to overcome this handicap.

However, he doesn't let it get him down. In a recent speech to new constituents, he explained his predicament:

"Reports that the Legislature was trying to prevent my reelection because I am a Democrat are false, ladies and gentlemen. The inside fact is that Republicans in the Legislature figured I was doing such an outstanding job in Washington that they decided to give me more territory."

F. D. R. Collects Scrap

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is about to instruct Cordell Hull to pick up all the big cannons and the little cannons around the State Department and contribute them to the scrap drive.

A Presidential order is being prepared which will affect not only the State Department, but every Federal property. It will result in the collection of great quantities of decorative and undecorative old iron, steel and brass—every bit of metal which is not indispensable—from postoffices, court buildings, national parks, Army and Navy posts.

First proposal was to have the President issue a request, but it was agreed that this would run afoul of red tape and questions of title. But all doubt would be removed if the President issued an Executive Order. So an order it will be.

NOTE—Iron at the windows of Federal penitentiaries will not be classed as dispensable.

Collecting Tin Cans

One of the biggest problems in the campaign to collect tin cans is the fact that there are only two detinning plants in the area East of the Rocky Mountains, with another small one on the West Coast. Although these plants have increased their capacity, they still cannot handle all the cans which patriotic housewives collect.

This, however, will be remedied. Six new detinning plants will be established soon in New York, Chicago, Buffalo, Birmingham, Dallas and Los Angeles.

Also many shredding plants will be established throughout the country for the preparation of tin cans before shipment. These plants mangle the cans, thus reducing bulk, so they can be transported without taking up too much space. Total cost of these new shredding and detinning plants will be $12,000,000.

Meanwhile, one handicap to the program is a recent order of the American Railroad Association that gondola cars cannot be used to haul tin cans. Apparently the railroads are trying to force their box-cars into greater use; but the labor cost of loading boxcars with bales of tin cans would be almost prohibitive, whereas they can be dropped into gondola cars from loading cranes.

Highest ranking graduate of the Harvard Business School is Vice Admiral Tomokazu Mogi, chief of the Japanese Navy's Bureau of Accounts and Supplies. He is an active member of the Harvard Club of Tokyo, and his alumni dues are paid through October, 1942 . . . OPA's fuel rationing chief, Joel Dean, finds that passenger driving has been reduced in East Coast areas from an average of nine or ten thousand miles a year to an average of 5170 . . . When Maury Maverick, jr., son of the Texas former Congressman, finished his Marine Corps training course at Quantico, Va., a request came for ten replacement volunteers to go immediately to the Solomon Islands. Maury, jr., stepped up, left for the South Pacific the day after he graduated . . . Col. Lehrbas, publicity aide to Gen. MacArthur, reported to his old press cronies in the State Department pressroom that no one could buy picture postcards of kangaroos or laughing jackasses in Australia any more. The doughboys can't send postcards of Australian towns, because that would reveal their location, so postcards of animals are sold out.

Anniversary Services Hold Church Spotlight Tomorrow

St. Anthony's Will Hold Its Golden Jubilee Observance

Among highlights will be the golden jubilee observance of the founding of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast, where a Pontifical Mass will be celebrated at noon by the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, D. D. of the Marist Seminary, and in the presence of the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore and Washington.

The Rev. Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., S. T. Lr., professor of thomistic philosophy at Catholic University, will deliver the sermon. Officers of the mass will be the Rev. Thomas J. Sweeney, deacon; the Rev. Michael J. Egan, subdeacon, both former assistants at St. Anthony's, and the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S., master of ceremonies. Music will be furnished by a choir under Dr. Leo Behrendt's direction.

At 8 p. m. there will be Solemn Benediction and singing of the "Te Deum" by the Seminarian Choir of Catholic University's Theological College. The Rev. John J. Coady, S. T. D., J. U. D., St. Anthony's rector, will be celebrant; the Rev. James P. Grace, deacon; the Rev. John L. Bailey, subdeacon, and the Rev. John J. Dressel, master of ceremonies, all assistant pastors of St. Anthony's.

St. Anthony's was founded by the late Rt. Rev. Dr. Henry Hyvernat with the assistance of Miss Antoinette Margot and Miss Delareau. Dr. Hyvernat was appointed first rector in 1892 by Cardinal Gibbons. Miss Margot donated and furnished the first chapel. The Rev. Desidere De Wulf, Dr. Hyvernat's successor, built the first edifice on the present site.

MR. LIOTARD

The tenth anniversary of the beginning of the pastoral service of the Rev. Andre F. Liotard with the French Church of Washington will be celebrated with a religious service in St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow at 4 p. m. and with a "soiree familiere" in St. John's parish hall Thursday evening. The sermon tomorrow will be delivered by Mr. Liotard, whose subject will be "Le Temoignage." The Rev. Dr. Florian Vurpillot, founder and honorary pastor of the French congregation, will take part in the service.

The Thursday soiree will be featured by greetings, talks by Dr. Vurpillot representing the congregation and by spokesmen for the Foyer Francais and the young people's Franco-American club, a response by Dr. Liotard, French songs, and refreshments. A general invitation is extended to interested persons.

After graduation from the University of Paris and the archaeological school of the Louvre, Mr. Liotard came to the United States as an exchange scholar and attended the University of Chicago and the University of New York. In 1932 he began supplying the pulpit of the local French congregation while Dr. Vurpillot was abroad, and a little later he was chosen as pastor when Dr. Vurpillot wished to retire from the active pastorate. At the outbreak of the war in 1939 he responded to the mobilization of the French army, and for the greater part of a year he served under General Weygand in Syria and Turkey. On being released from the army he returned to Washington in the fall of 1940.

Tomorrow will mark the opening service of a three-week observance of the fifteenth anniversary of the dedication of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church. The building in which the congregation now worships was completed and dedicated October 30, 1927. The Rev. George K. Bowers, pastor, will speak on "The Secret of Jesus' Success!" at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow.

At the service at 8 p. m. Senator James J. Davis, member of the committee for national arrangements for the Muhlenberg Bi-Centennial Celebration will be guest speaker.

Special anniversary services will be conducted at the church on October 25, October 30 and November 1. The last service will be a consecration service launching the

The Rev. Paul W. Yinger, minister of the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, will begin his fourth year as pastor of the church tomorrow, preaching on the topic, "On Keeping On." Mr. Yinger came to Washington in October, 1939, having completed his seminary training at the Union Theological Seminary in New York the previous May. He was just 25 years of age when he was installed as minister of the Cleveland Park Church.

The Takoma Lutheran Church, of which the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer is pastor, tomorrow will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the dedication of its church building. The morning program will also celebrate the festival of harvest home. The subject of Mr. Pfeffer's sermon will be "Thank God for the Church." All of the vestrymen who have served the congregation in the past or during this current year will be honored during the morning service.

Presbyterian Choir To Sponsor Musicales

The Chancel Choir of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will again sponsor a series of musical Wednesday evenings, offering performances of choral works and recitals to the public without charge. The Bach church cantata "A Stronghold Sure" will open the third annual series on next Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. The music is based on the chorale, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," Luther's battle hymn. The soloists will be Bernice Rickman Gordon, soprano, Henrietta Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano, William Hayghe, tenor, and John Yard, baritone. The choir of 40 voices will be under the direction of Theodore Schaefer who will also play the organ accompaniments.

Church Fellowship To Launch Studies

The Youth Fellowship of Lincoln Road Methodist Church tomorrow at 6:45 p. m. will launch a series of studies on the general theme of "Understanding Ourselves," with Walter Graham, director of Baltimore Conference young adult work, as main speaker.

Crammer to Address Bagby C. E. Society

Robert Crammer, president of the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Union, will address a meeting of the Bagby Christian Endeavor Society tomorrow at 7 p. m. at Columbia Heights Christian Church, where Kenneth Kenyon, new president of the Bagby group, will preside for the first time in his new capacity.

Flag to Be Dedicated

The congregation of Christ Episcopal Church, Navy Yard Parish, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will dedicate an American Flag and honor roll to its men in America's armed forces. The Rev. Edward Gabler is rector.

Navy Seeking To Commission 400 Chaplains

Openings as commissioned officers for 400 chaplains now are available in the United States Navy, it was announced here yesterday.

Practicing clergymen may obtain commissions as lieutenants, junior grade (corresponding with first lieutenant in the Army), or full lieutenants (corresponding with captain in the Army) without previous military service.

Chaplains in the Navy not only conduct religious services but also aid officers and enlisted men with their personal problems. They may also plan athletics, take charge of libraries and entertainment programs. Chaplains in all faiths are needed, and they must be college graduates with at least three years' additional ecclesiastical training in an accredited theological institution, fully ordained and citizens of the United States. They must be indorsed by authorities of their respective denominations. Chaplains for the regular Navy are selected from eligible Naval Reserve chaplains.

The pay of chaplains corresponds with the pay for other commissioned officers of similar rank. For information write to 1320 G Street Northwest, Washington D. C., or apply at your nearest Navy recruiting station.

Hamline Church To Observe 14th Joash Chest Day

The fourteenth annual Joash Chest Day services will be held at Hamline Methodist Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. Dr. Lucius Clark will assist Dr. H. W. Burgan in the services.

Representative John Sparkman will address the Hamline "Methodist Men" at 9:45 a. m. on the subject, "Growth in Christ." At the same hour Grover L. Hartman will speak to the Hamline Young Adult Fellowship. The Mizpah and Harriet T. Lipp Womens Bible classes will be taught by Mrs. Edward Stevens and Mrs. Thomas F. Law. The Hamline Youth Fellowship will meet tomorrow at 6:45 p. m. at the church.

The Mizpah Circle will serve a chicken-pie dinner on Wednesday at 6 p. m.

At a recent meeting of the Hamline Brotherhood the following officers were elected: President, G. Raymond Wilhelm; vice presidents, Frank L. Smith, Theodore C. Lewis, Frank Heiss and Grover L. Hartman; secretary Harry Alburger, and treasurer, Hunter B. Linton.

William O. Tufts, jr., was recently elected church organist in place of Lyman McCrary, who has joined the Naval Reserve.

Dr. Poling to Address Endeavor Gathering

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, and president of the World's Christian Endeavor, will address a city-wide Endeavor gathering on November 23 at 8 p. m. at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H Street Northwest, it was announced here yesterday.

Baptist Church Honors First Member to Die in World War II

All departments of National Baptist Memorial Church, Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest, Thursday night paid tribute to Corpl. Robert G. Thomas, first member of that congregation and of its young people's society to give his life for his country in the present conflict.

Standing in the Sunday School room where "Bob" once was a familiar figure, Dr. Gove G. Johnson, the pastor, extolled him for being "faithful unto death" in his country's service, just as he was loyal and trustworthy in his church activities.

Earlier, Charles Gregory of the United States Navy and close friend of Corporal Thomas, stood near the service flag with its 25 stars—including its first gold one—and offered a prayer for his friend. A girls' trio from the Baptist Training Union and a male quartette from the Young Men's Class sang.

Corporal Thomas was active in both groups. A number of testimonials came from other people, both young and old, who had known "Bob."

Relatives attending the tribute service—which replaced the regular midweek prayer meeting—were Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Thomas of Rockville, the soldier's parents; Mrs. Mary Sullinger, his grandmother; Mrs. Kenneth Joy, his sister, and Mrs. William Price, an aunt of Youngstown, Ohio.

Daily Communion at St. John's

As a phase of its spiritual contribution to the war emergency, St. John's Episcopal Church at Lafayette Square is now sponsoring daily Communion service at 7:30 a. m., Thursdays excepted, when the services are at 7 a. m. and 12 p. m. The Rev. John G. Magee is minister in charge.

Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins, former dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, will be guest preacher on Sundays until Christmas, beginning tomorrow. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, St. John's rector, is in Navy chaplaincy service "for the duration."

Other services for the day are 8 a. m., Holy Communion 9:30 a. m., Holy Communion, the Rev. John G. Magee, preacher; 4 p. m., service in French, the Rev. Andre P. Liotard, preacher 8 p. m., evening prayer, the Rev. Florian C. J. Vurpillot, preacher.

Daniel C. Roper To Address Services

Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, prominent Methodist layman and chairman of the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will address services tomorrow at 11 a.m., marking the fifth anniversary of the occupancy of the present building of the Lewis Memorial Methodist Church, Fourth and Hamilton Streets Northwest.

The Rev. H. R. Deal, pastor of the congregation, will speak at 8 p. m. on "Surely God Cares."

Young People to Meet

Young people and young adults of Francis Asbury Methodist Church will meet there tomorrow at 6:45 p. m.

Sunday Schools Will Convene Here on Nov. 3

The annual convention of the D. C. Sunday School Association will be held November 3 at Epworth Methodist Church, Thirteenth and North Carolina Avenue Northeast, it was announced here yesterday. Dr. Charles E. Resser, paleontologist of the Smithsonian Institution, is association president.

November 8 will be a big day in the history of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, as it will mark the association's annual Armistice Day observance at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and also Bibles for Service Men Sunday, when Bible Classmen will be asked to provide 2000 Bibles for men in the service.

The Washington City Bible Society, of which Dr. W. L. Darby is president, has set a goal of 10,000 Bibles and Testaments for servicemen from October 1, 1942, until October 1, 1943, and the Bible association's goal of 2000 will be included in that number.

A chalk "songalogue," a feature that won much praise at the Westminster Bible Conference, will be given tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. before the Vaughn class at Calvary Baptist Church by Hiner Magnuson, jr., and his sister, Lorraine. "The Old Rugged Cross" will be the theme song.

The monthly meeting of the men's class of the St. Paul Methodist Church will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Howard Embrey's home.

'Youth for Christ' Broadcast to Be Heard Locally

"Juvenile Delinquency During Wartime" will be discussed by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Women's Bureau, Metropolitan Police Department, at 6:45 p. m. tomorrow before the Young People's League of Reformation Lutheran Church.

The Youth Fellowship of the St. Paul Methodist Church will hold a wiener roast today at Rock Creek Park, preceded by a meeting at the church.

Rabbi Morton Firman, associate Rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will lecture to the Woodward B. Y. P. U. of Calvary Baptist Church tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. on "Manners and Customs of the Hebrews." This is a continuation of a series on the Old Testament.

The "Word of Life Hour" under the direction of Jack Wyrtzen will be on the air every Saturday night over Station WWDC from 10:30 to 11 p. m. beginning tonight.

This "Youth for Christ" broadcast originates in New York City and is especially designed to meet the needs of youth today, with Gospel songs, testimonies, and a vital message from the Bible.

The Young Women's Club will hold its weekly dinner meeting Tuesday at 6:15 p. m. at First Congregational Church. Miss Corris Cloyes, formerly in the advertising department of Standard Brands, Inc., of New York, will speak on "Look Ahead."

Square dancing is held in the Sunday school room every Friday night from 8:30 until 10:30. This project is being carried on as a form of entertainment for defense workers and servicemen. However, everyone is invited at a cost of 25 cents each.

"SUN OF MY SOUL"
— — JOHN KEBLE — —
Sun of my soul! Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near;
Oh, may no earth-born cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servant's eyes!
Be near to bless me when I wake,
Ere thro' the world my way I take;
Abide with me till in Thy love
I live myself in heav'n above.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This poem, describing a benighted traveler, pushing on after the sun has set, appeared in 1827, and ever since has won the hearts of all people for its simple elegance and love of nature. Every line illustrates the life and character of its devout and pious author.

Dr. Burkhart To Speak at Mount Vernon

Dr. Roy A. Burkhart, pastor of the Columbus (Ohio) First Community Church, and among the Nation's outstanding clergymen, tomorrow will exchange pulpits with Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Dr. Burkhart will speak at 9 and 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. (see sermon column topics), and will address the young people's buffet supper at 6 p. m., and on Monday will address the Washington Ministerial Union at the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest.

In addition to his Sunday sermons in Columbus, Dr. Rustin will have several Monday speaking engagements.

Dr. Burkhart is well-known to Washingtonians as one of the leaders of the National Christian Mission team that came here in January, 1941. He is a noted speaker among youth groups, and sponsors eight such groups in his congregation. He directs a weekday program of religious education and adult religious education, and also a weekday religious education program in the public schools. He is the author of "Thinking About Marriage," "Understanding Youth" and other books.

God Asks Supreme Decision, Richey Says

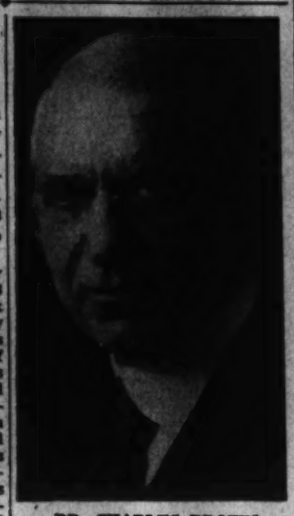
Preaching Mission Will Open At First Congregational

Dean Brown Will Address Several Services



DR. CHARLES BROWN

Dr. Charles R. Brown, dean emeritus of the Yale Divinity School, will begin a preaching mission tomorrow at First Congregational Church, speaking at 11 a. m. on "The Deeper Insight" and at 8 p. m. on "Why Do We Go to Church?"

Dean Brown headed the Divinity School of Yale University for 18 years, retiring in 1928, and in that time trebled its enrollment, saw 1000 young men pass through his classes and raised four and a half million dollars for new buildings and endowment. He has authored 30 books and holds numerous scholastic and honorary degrees. In the past 30 years he has appeared as guest preacher at 194 colleges and universities and in 83 preparatory schools. Beloved by many as the "Mr. Chips of theological education," he has also been honored with the moderatorship of the Congregational denomination.

In addition to tomorrow's services, Dean Brown will preach three evenings next week at 8 o'clock. His themes: Tuesday, "The Main Source of Happiness;" Wednesday, "Listening," and Thursday, "Dreams Come True."

Music for the Sunday services will be provided by the a capella choir, under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl.

Series of Programs Planned at Emory

The congregation of Emory Methodist Church tomorrow at 8 p. m. will launch a series of third Sunday night monthly programs for young people. Dr. Edgar C. Beery, the pastor, will be assisted in the service by Maurice Thompson, superintendent of the Youth Fellowship: Miss Elizabeth Whisner, counselor of the Young People's Department; Miss Betsy Evans, senior counselor; Miss Thelma Volland, intermediate counselor, and the young people's choir.

Tea at Baptist Home

The board of managers of the District Baptist Home for Children will hold their annual donation tea and reception on October 24, at the home, 1001 West Cedar Lane, Bethesda, Md., from 2 until 6 p. m.

Herbert Griffith, Church Ad Head, Leaving for Army

GRIFFITH

Griffith, Post employe since May, 1936, will leave on October 26 for Camp Lee, Va., as a private in the United States Army.

His first position after graduation from Washington and Lee University in 1935 was with the Washington Daily News, and nine months later he moved over to the Post classified department.

He handled real estate accounts for five years and, in March, 1941, assumed charge of a newly created direct mail unit in the classified department and, in March of 1942, took over the church advertising which has made tremendous gains under his supervision. He is single and lives with his mother, Mrs. Sara D. Griffith, at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments.

Evidence Guild To Meet in Park

The Rev. John Stafford of Catholic University faculty and assistant moderator of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild will be chairman of the guild meeting in Franklin Park tomorrow from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The Rev. William Hogan will be in charge of the Franklin Park meeting from 3 to 5 p.m. Speakers and their subjects will be Michael Lux, "Marks of the Church"; Clarence Wilson, "Prayer"; and Francis Ryan, "Our Lady."

Lay Army's Work Hailed By Dr. Reissig

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, now Federation of Churches' executive secretary, is "greatly impressed" with the manner in which laymen here are assuming their responsibilities in the various churches.

In an interview yesterday, he said, in part:

"What an army of men are in their churches each Sunday, as teachers, as ushers, as singers, as worshipers. I wish the Washington public could have the privilege of seeing all the men who make up the official boards of the churches gathered together in one place.

"Men do take time for that which they know is basic in their lives, their homes and their community. The churches need manpower, and men need the church."

Christian Science Lesson Sermon Topic Announced

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (I Corinthians 3:11).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The supremacy of Spirit was the foundation on which Jesus built. His sublime summary points to the religion of Love." (Page 138).

Chevy Chase Baptists Plan Join Banquet

A banquet will be held jointly by the Columbian Girls, the Woman's Society and the Evening Auxiliary on Monday at 6:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Baptist Church. Frank Metcalf will speak on "The History of Famous Hymns." In the religious forum hour on Wednesday evening the Rev. J. Herrick Hall of the Fifth Baptist Church will speak on "God's Plan for Financing His Kingdom."

Evangelist Here To Speak on Hell And Its Location

"Hell located! Can it be seen through a telescope? Where is it? How long will the wicked burn? Is the thrilling Bible lecture topic of Evangelist Robert L. Boothby tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in Constitution Hall. In this lecture the evangelist will show from the Bible just where Hell is located, how many are in Hell now, and whether the fires of Hell ever will burn out.

Another large crowd heard Mr. Boothby last Sunday night in his lecture in Constitution Hall, and a great interest is being shown in this series of unusual and important lectures held every Sunday night in Constitution Hall, and Tuesday through Friday nights in Continental Hall, Seventeenth and C Streets.

Leslie Mansell leads the large audience in the singing service preceding the lecture assisted by his choir of 200 voices. The Euphonic Male quartet will sing tomorrow night, and the 60-voice a cappella choir again will be featured.

The lectures are free and the public is invited.

St. Francis Order Meetings Changed

Because of the transportation difficulties in Washington, the meetings of the Third Order of St. Francis will be held on the third Sunday of each month at 3 p.m. at Capuchin College chapel, corner of Harewood Road and Taylor Street, Northeast. The first meeting adopting the new schedule will be held tomorrow.

This year's retreat will be conducted over the last week-end of October 23-25th at the Washington Retreat House, Harewood Road, Northeast. The Forty Hours' Devotion will be observed at the same time. The retreat will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Martin McCabe, O. F. M. Cap., professor of dogmatic theology at Capuchin College.

Huguenot Society's Service Tomorrow

The Huguenot Society of Washington will hold its annual service tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in the Washington Cathedral Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. Canon Smith will officiate, and as a part of the service members of the society will place a wreath on the memorial stone which was placed in the south crypt aisle of the cathedral by the society some years ago in memory of Admiral de Coligny, leader of the Huguenots in France in the sixteenth century. The service has been arranged by Miss Carolina V. Sudler, president of the Huguenot Society of Washington.

The Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, will preach at the 4 o'clock evensong service on "Christian Unity Indispensable," delivering the second in his current series of Sunday afternoon sermons. The Canon Missioner, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, will preach at the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer.

Young People to Hold Rally at Chevy Chase

Young people from 20 churches in the Chevy Chase, Bethesda and Silver Spring area will join in an interdenominational rally tomorrow at 7 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

The theme will be "The Bible Speaks to Our Young People of 1942," and speakers will be Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor of Woodside Methodist Church, and the Rev. Spence Dunbar, vicar of St. David's Episcopal Chapel. The program will be climaxed with a candlelight Communion consecration service.

'Flying Tigers,' Ace Revue Full of Action at the Earle

Screen Play Dedicated to Heroic Volunteers Scourging Japs on the Far Eastern Front; Stage Bill Designed for Dynamic Diversion

"FLYING TIGERS." Republic picturization of an original story by Kenneth Gamet, adapted to the screen by the author and Barry Trivers, costarring John Wayne, John Carroll and Anna Lee, with Paul Kelly, Gordon Jones, Mae Clarke, Addison Richards, Edmund MacDonald, Bill Shirley, Tom Neal, Malcolm "Bud" McTaggart, David Bruce, Chester Gan, James Dodd, Gregg Barton, John James and Willie Fung. Directed by David Miller. At the Earle.

"FLYING TIGERS," one of Republic's major gestures of the season, now on view at the Earle, pays the screen's first salute to the valor of the American Volunteer Group in the Far East without slowing itself down to the laggard pace of a "documentary" or assuming any of the pretentions of an important "historical document." It is, on the contrary, an interesting, well-made and at times exciting romantic melodrama, with mild overtones of comedy, that can lay claim to novelty only in the matters of time and place.

While the background of the action is the aerial fighting front on the fringes of China, the story concerns itself less with the progress of the war than with the love lives of its principal characters. There are the commanding officer, who feels a deep attachment for the post nurse; the commercial flier, who joins the fighting outfit for the money there is in it and the opportunity for feminine conquest; the airman seeking escape from a dishonored past; the second in command, grounded by failing eyesight, and the conventional allotment of contrasted temperaments to make up a unique and engrossing little force of daredevil fighters who figure everything's even when they are only outnumbered 10 to 1.

Punctuating the ground action are some aerial dog-fights that achieve new effects in realism and there is, of course, that immensely stirring climacteric episode, in which the rebellious braggart, renegade and "wolf" slips into the commander's ship and atones for all of his transgressions by executing an heroic coup at the loss of his own life.

Although less compelling in motivation and the military aspects of its story, there is much the flavor of the twice-made "Dawn Patrol" in this tribute to the efficiency of wartime aviation and the grim young heroes who man it. "Dawn Patrol" was an exceedingly fine picture.

By its very nature, "Flying Tigers" enlists the services of a preponderantly masculine cast—and a thoroughly capable one. John Wayne may seem a shade easygoing as the commander of the al fresco outpost, but his performance on the whole bears the presumable stamp of authenticity. The more colorful role of the troublemaker from the transport lines is played with fine zest by John Carroll, who comes dangerously near being the star of the picture, and Anna Lee, as the nurse, provides abundant inspiration for all the rivalry she excites. The only other feminine member of the cast is Mae Clarke, who makes an effective figure of the wife of the airman who must have another chance or be gnawed to death by his conscience and the taunts of his fellows. Edmund MacDonald assumes this unhappy role with ample equipment to do it justice. Paul Kelly is another who contributes a characterization of prime worth as Jim Gordon's No. 2 man, whose courage outmeasured his physical endurance. Gordon Jones, "Bud" McTaggart, Bill Shirley, Tom Neal, David Bruce and Gregg Barton are among numerous others who help make the scenes of battle in the clouds as thrilling as any that are apt to be encountered. Jack Marta's photography is genuinely distinguished and David Miller's direction anything but lethargic.

Cleverness and Speed on the Stage

For the Earle stage this week, Managing Director Harry Anger has whipped up a fast and flashy revue that hits top speed with Jo Lombardi's "Redskins" overture and never lets down. It is a safe bet that the Roxyettes' "Redskins" would sweep Mr. Marshall's right off the field, a mass of smouldering ruins! As soon as the autographed football has been forward-passed to the audience, Ben Beri comes on to show up all the jugglers who have preceded him on local rostrums. Here is an agile fellow who works like a streak of lightning through a dizzying routine that came within an eyelash of stopping the show. Olive White, with Roxyette backing, turns out to be not only a Grade-A songstress, but an instrumentalist who can do engaging things with both violin and saxophone, in addition. And besides that, she has a way with her. Wally Brown, back with his broken-sentence monologue—Tom Lewis used to have a name for it—and trip-hammer songs, always good for a riot, built himself a cyclone of mirth and Adriana and Charly matched all the other hits with their own on the trampoline. The act has bounce! The Roxyettes wind it all up by bringing that word "precision" back to life in their "bouncing ball" finale. From start to finish the revue is tops—top-drawer, top-hole, top-shelf.

If that doesn't sound like enough, there are the newsreel and "The Hep-Cat," a Merrie Melodie cartoon in color, to augment a bill that had them standing layers deep at yesterday's first performance, deluge or no deluge, and deserved it.

Romance Flies With the Daredevils

JOHN WAYNE AND ANNA LEE

whose romantic love story—occasionally tangled by the persistent interruptions of John Carroll—threads the exciting narrative unfolded in Republic's "Flying Tigers," now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Paul Kelly, Gordon Jones and Mae Clark are others of importance in the cast of this vivid tale of aerial combat in the Far East and the heroic American volunteers who courageously waged it

HEDDA HOPPER

'Toil and Trouble!'

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16.—There seems to be trouble brewing between Mary Martin and Paramount, and Mary may soon be asking for a release. Among other reasons, Mary wants to do the screen version of "Leave It to Me," which brought her to fame on the stage, and the price Paramount is asking for her has been holding up the deal with Gregory Ratoff, who's producing it.

MARY MARTIN

Walter Wanger is trying to get Bonita Granville for the romantic feminine lead opposite Robert Cummings in "We've Never Been Licked," the story based on Texas A. & M., and it looks as if she'll do it as soon as she completes "Hitler's Children."

Incidentally, Walter still won't lower his price for Diana Barrymore to do the lead in "Never Surrender," which must be a good role, because I just found out that Ingrid Bergman was all set to do it before she went into "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Harry Sherman is trying to lure Priscilla Lane out of retirement to do the feminine lead opposite Joel McCrea in "Buffalo Bill." Priscilla's last picture was "Silver Queen," which also was produced by Sherman, and he claims she had so much fun doing that one that he believes he can talk her into doing this.

Edmund Lowe's first picture under his new long term contract with Columbia will be "Murder in Times Square," in which he plays a triple role—including a female impersonation, of all things! But don't get excited—it's a decrepit old lady, famous Broadway character, that Lowe takes off.

Maureen O'Hara, who's still recuperating from her operation, is now doing double duty—working in "The Immortal Sergeant," at Twentieth Century, and "This Land Is Mine," at RKO.

George Montgomery is joining the merchant marine as soon as he finishes "Coney Island."

Rosalind Russell wants to fly to the Pacific war zone to entertain service men at Christmas time, and will, if she can arrange her work so as to get time off.

While George Brent was dodging photographers at the Hollywood canteen the other night, Ann Sheridan was doing the same thing at Bill Jordan's Bar of Music, where she was entertaining some friends—"and I do mean 'friends,'" said Ann, "not romance."

Bert (Mad Russian) Gordon has written up his experiences and friends in the good old vaudeville days. The book's called "Ring Up the Curtain" and will be out in January.

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (INS).—You must hand it to Joan Crawford. Just when you think things are not going too well for her, up she bobs, gets a new lease on life and retains her place as one of the top glamour girls. The interesting thing is that as Joan grows older she becomes a better actress. She has dropped a lot of her mannerisms and has learned to make up her mouth so that it doesn't look like Mr. Bones in a minstrel show. All of which is only a prelude to saying that she is soon to be teamed with Fred MacMurray in "Above Suspicion."

JOAN CRAWFORD

This is Fred's very first visit on the M. G. M. lot and he and Joan will be an interesting combination. They play man and wife in this well-known book by Helen MacInnes. Richard Thorpe is named as director and Victor Saville as producer. The MacInnes gal, by the way, also authored "Assignment in Britanny," now in production on the M. G. M. lot.

"The Fallen Sparrow," a new novel in the galley proof stage, by Dorothy B. Hughes, sounds like it might concern a lady's morals. But when I heard R. K. O. had Maureen O'Hara penciled into the top femme spot I knew better. Maureen is a gal who refuses to accept any questionable roles or pose in a bathing suit or for "leg" art.

Well, I was right—for instead of being a sobby opus about the wages of sin, Head Man Charlie Koerner tells me that "The Fallen Sparrow" is a mystery with a continental background scheduled for the 1943-44 program. When they buy them that far in advance anything can happen. But in the meantime a search is on for a male actor to costar with Maureen.

When Myrna Loy reaches here within the next 10 days, she will discuss with the M. G. M. powers-that-be the Spencer Tracy picture, "A Guy Named Joe." The femme role is said to be one of the best on the M. G. M. lot, and that is what Myrna wants and not another "Thin Man" movie.

Dalton Trumbo has written the story which, I understand, is a natural, and Everett Riskin will produce it.

The intrepid Russian sniper, Lieut. Liudmila Pavlichenko, who has really become glamorous since her ovation in the United States, is being sought for a role in "Mission to Moscow." She is under Army orders and unless the Russian consul gives his permission she cannot sign a contract. If, however, the consul feels "Mission to Moscow" is of sufficient propaganda merit for his country, it is possible he may get permission for her to make the movie.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Oct. 16.

Randolph Paul, general counsel to the Treasury Department—who is the Nation's No. 1 tax expert—is threatening to resign, because too many of his tax aides are being drafted. Paul has spent years in training them, and believes that it will be most difficult to plan the financing of a war, if the finance experts are drafted . . . The movie version of "This Is the Army" will be made next month, and then the cast will be sent to England and receive their new combat training there . . . "Colonel" Ted Lundbergh, who pleaded guilty to posing as an Army officer, was sworn in yesterday, and at last has an official Army title, Pvt. Ted Lundbergh.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

The New York Philharmonic will be conducted for two weeks by Howard Barlow, the C. B. S. conductor . . . Fritz Kuhn has sent his answer to the denaturalization proceedings brought against him. Kuhn wrote the answer himself, without benefit of counsel. In it he professed that he is a loyal American . . . Corp. Robert Hopkins, son of Harry, now is overseas. Young Hopkins resigned from Officers Candidate School for an opportunity to serve abroad . . . One of Charlie Chaplin's friends listened to his discussion of the military strategy which should be adopted, and said: "The News once gave Charlie four stars, for 'The Great Dictator.' Charlie thinks those stars made him a full general."

Recent report from Washington was that Owen Lattimore, the President's envoy to Chiang-Kai-shek, will become head of the West Coast division of the Office of War Information. . . . Mrs. Adolph A. Berle, jr., who is a professor at a medical school, now heads the Public Health division of the War Production Board. She's in charge of the health of 13,000 employes . . . Capt. Russell Swann, the magician who will be sent overseas to show the troops how to entertain themselves, has received permission to work in civilian clothes at the Army camps. "I need trick pockets for my stunts," he explained, "and, furthermore, if I should work in uniform, it would be impossible for me to make a superior officer the butt of one of my jokes."

M. G. M. will star Zero Mostel in his next picture—a Washington story wherein he'll portray a Winterbottomish character . . . Maj. Hal Roach, the film producer, is stationed at Wright Field, Ohio. The Air Corps has taken over his Hal Roach studio in Hollywood. Roach has been anxious to be transferred back to that same studio where he worked for many years, but the transfer can't be arranged . . . John Anthony, the problem-solver of radio's Goodwill Court, couldn't solve his own problem Saturday night—the problem of getting two tickets to "Show Time"

Strip-teaser Margie Hart's fiance, Sergt. Seaman Jacobs, plans to go to Officers Candidate School at the University of Mississippi. Margie wants him to remain near New York and marry her. "You have your choice," she told him, "between Mississippi or Mrs. Jacobs" . . . When Attorney General Biddle delivered, before the newsreel cameras, excerpts from his speech releasing Italians from the enemy-alien status he was nervous and fluffed his lines. "Don't be so excited," Mayor LaGuardia calmly advised Biddle "Forget you're a Latin" . . . Quentin Reynolds last week cashed a correspondent's check he had won in a poker game in Russia one year ago. The check didn't bounce.

When Pvt. Irwin Shaw, the playwright, was asked whether he's the soldier-author who signed only his serial number, in a short story in Collier's, Shaw shook his head. "I spent ten years trying to get a short story into Collier's," he explained. "And when I achieve such things, I want everyone to know it" . . . LaVie Parisienne has quickly become one of the favorites in the bigtime night club circuit here . . . The "Gulliver," the Army plane which carried Wendell Willkie around the world, wasn't used for his flight to Turkey—because Turkey is a neutral nation and armored planes of warring nations would be interned there.

Representative Elmer Holland of Pennsylvania, whose Pittsburgh constituents include Billy Conn's family, confronted Representative O'Toole of New York, who was the first to blast the Louis-Conn fight. Holland drew from O'Toole the confession that the latter at one time was a professional wrestler.

Metropolitan

The page in history which was written by a small garrison of United States Marines at Wake Island has been tranferred to the screen with realistic results. There is no romance here for those seeking escapist entertainment. "Wake Island" is a day-to-day record of the onslaught by the Japanese sea and air forces upon the numerically inferior American outpost. The picture is occasionally lightened by the comedy efforts of Robert Preston and William Bendix as a pair of belligerent Marines. The other roles are all superbly handled by Brian Donlevy, as the major in command of the island while it is under attack; MacDonald Carey, Albert Parker, Walter Abel, Damian O'Flynn and Frank Albertson.

Dear Walt Disney:

Rumor has it that "Bambi" is to be your final feature length production. Hundreds of our patrons have asked me to appeal to you to change this decision and that you will produce at least one such feature each year.

Will the fact that we are continuing "Bambi" for a THIRD WEEK sway you in this regard? We all hope so!

George Longan, Kansas City Star Head, Dies

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Oct. 16.—George Baker Longan, 63, one of the leading figures in a unique journalism experiment—employe ownership of a great newspaper—died today.

From a $4-a-week reporter, Mr. Longan rose, step by step, to president and general manager of the Kansas City Star Co., publisher of the Kansas City Star and Times. He also was a director of the Associated Press.

Subject to recurring heart attacks, Mr. Longan was stricken last night as he reached home after a day at his office. Taken to a hospital, he died at 12:30 p. m.

Mr. Longan was one of the top men in the Star organization in 1926, when the paper's employes pooled resources and purchased the Star and Times from the estate of William Rockhill Nelson. Two years later he became president of the company and was a potent factor in making the paper a force in American journalism.

Mr. Longan reached the top the hard way. From a reporter, he became a desk man, city editor, news editor and then managing editor, the job he was filling in 1926.

Only 28 when Nelson told him he was city editor, Mr. Longan, himself a tireless worker, was a hard but just taskmaster. He soon was known as "the boss" to his men and the title stuck. Fair in dealings with his staff, Mr. Longan was a terror for a slovenly reporter to face. He insisted on facts and accuracy.

While his great love was his newspaper, Mr. Longan found time for much other work. His duties as director for the Associated Press took much time; he attended a meeting in New York only last week. He was active in Kansas City charities campaigns, was a director of the Kansas City Art Institute, the Conservatory of Music and the Missouri Historical Society.

He was born in Holen, Mo., December 11, 1878. Two years later his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Longan, moved to Kansas City, where his father, a leading educator, became assistant superintendent of city schools.

As a boy in high school, Mr. Longan carried papers. So deep was his attachment to printer's ink that upon completing high school he decided to forego college and launched his journalistic career on the old Kansas City Times, later transferring to the Star.

Mr. Longan leaves his widow, and two daughters, Mrs. Dale Ashby Beronius, Kansas City, and Mrs. William L. Huggins, jr., Washington.

M. H. Rackey Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Maurice Henry Rackey, 62, Washington-born veteran of the Spanish-American War, will be buried tomorrow in St. Barnabas Cemetery, Oxon Hill, Md.

Funeral services will be conducted at his home in Camp Springs, Md., at 2 p. m., and graveside services will be held by Admiral George Dewey Naval Camp No. 7 of the United Spanish War Veterans, of which Mr. Rackey was a long-time member.

Suffering from heart trouble for several years, Mr. Rackey was found dead in bed by his wife Thursday morning. He had retired some years ago after 33 years as a pattern maker at the Navy Yard.

Mr. Rackey was a former mayor of Capitol Heights, where he lived for many years. More than 20 years ago he moved to Silver Hills, Md., where his five sons and daughters built their homes on his farm and made almost a village of their own. There were 10 grandchildren.

When the Government took the area over for the Suitland project more than a year ago, the family was scattered and Mr. Rackey moved to Camp Springs, Md. In the War with Spain Mr. Rackey had served in Cuba with the Seventh Cavalry.

His survivors are his wife, Mrs. Annie Elizabeth Rackey; and his children, Maurice F. Rackey of Camp Springs, George H. Rackey of Silver Hill, Mrs. Alice M. Downs of Camp Springs, Mrs. Elizabeth Milstead of Parkland, Md., and Lester R. Rackey, stationed at Camp Lee, Va.

Mrs. Kepner, Writer, Falls To Death Here

Losing her balance while washing windows in her seventh-floor apartment at 1812 K Street Northwest yesterday, Mrs. Sophie Poole Kepner, 46, writer and former newspaperwoman, fell to her death at 11 a. m. yesterday.

A passenger on a passing bus, James A. Phillips, of Falls Church, Va., saw the accident and jumped from the bus and called police.

Mrs. Kepner was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she died a few minutes after being admitted.

Detective Sergt. Richard Felber of the homicide squad said Mrs. Kepner was washing windows and apparently had difficulty raising a screen. A hammer and several cleaning cloths were found inside her apartment near the window.

Mrs. Kepner, first vice president of the Newspaperwomen's Club, lived alone. Her son, Arch P. Kepner, is with the Army Air Forces at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Since last summer, Mrs. Kepner had been doing free lance writing. Prior to that time, she was with the Haskin Syndicate and was editor of that organization when she resigned.

Rites Set Today For W. R. Coon, D. C. Contractor

Funeral services for William Robert Coon, 80, contractor and architect in the District for almost 50 years, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Coon, who made his home at 2414 Irving Street Northeast, died Wednesday at Homeopathic Hospital of injuries suffered September 26 when he was struck by an automobile. The son of the late Robert and Mary Coon of Roanoke, Va., he came to Washington when he was a young man and went into the building business. He retired several years ago.

A Mason for more than half a century, Mr. Coon was a charter member of East Gate Lodge and Woodridge Chapter, Royal Arch Masons. He was also a member of the Eastern Star.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Charles V. A. Smoot of Silver Spring; a son, Loyal R. Coon of Detroit, Mich., a grandson, son of Mrs. Smoot, William Harnsberger, United States Marine Corps, stationed at Parris Island, S. C.; three sisters, Mrs. John Wege of Washington, Mrs. Robert Edwards of Vero Beach, Fla., and Mrs. Daisy Brickey of Roanoke, and two brothers, Darby Coon of Washington and Ernest Coon of Roanoke.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Chester B. Peake et al., plaintiffs, vs. John C. Peake, also known as J. W. McDonald or J. W. McDonald, et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 16971. Order of publication. To John C. Peake, also known as J. W. McDonald or J. W. McDonald, and to all whom it may concern, You will take notice that your brothers, William E. Peake, Robert J. Peake and Chester B. Peake, have filed in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, a complaint in Civil Action No. 16971, pursuant to an Act of Congress approved April 8, 1935, alleging that you departed from the District of Columbia about the year 1915, that the last word received from you was in the year 1918, since which time you have not been seen or heard from, and by the complain your said brothers, as your heirs-at-law and next-of-kin, seek a judgment for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of certain moneys or funds alleged to be due you as your share of the proceeds of the rentals and of the sale of certain real estate described in said complaint and distribute the same to themselves as your heirs-at-law and next-of-kin, subject to the payment of all proper costs and expenses; and that said moneys be held for your account, in part by the clerk of said District Court, pursuant to payment in the Registry of said Court in Civil Action No. 11345, and, in part by the American Security & Trust Co., Washington, D. C., in an account designated "John C. Peake, Special." Accordingly, it is by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, this 22nd day of September, 1942, ordered, that you, John C. Peake, also known as J. W. McDonald or J. W. MacDonald, and all whom it may concern shall appear in said Court in this cause on or before NOVEMBER 7, 1942, to show cause, if any you have, why a receiver of the aforesaid funds shall not be appointed to hold and dispose of the same as provided by said Act of Congress and prayed by the said complaint; provided that a copy hereof shall be published once a week for three (3) consecutive weeks in The Washington Post newspaper and in the Washington Law Reporter; otherwise, the said Court will proceed with the disposition of said funds in the manner provided by said Act of Congress and as prayed by the said complaint. EDWARD C. EICHER, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: CHARLES P. STEWART, Clerk. By ELSIE NOR E. JOSE, Deputy Clerk. (Seal.)

Michael's Girl

By

SOPHIE KERR

Buschke Photo

In 1924 Elin Bryant first seriously questioned the stability of her marriage to Philip, whose goal was money, while hers was to make a home for their son, Van. She hired Michael Rodo as gardener and his first big problem was the garden's appearance for a house party Philip was planning. Elin finally agreed to buy plants from nurseries for the party weekend. Michael's little girl, Letty, was Van's special friend, although Philip disapproved. But his attention was centered on the party and having everything perfect for it.

CHAPTER 8

AT TABLE Elin played up skilfully his taste and judgment and he expanded in satisfaction. She learned a little more about the bond deal: apparently the firm needed heavy capital behind it and there were legal difficulties—Tench could manage those. Without a word being said in that direction she somehow felt that there was something fishy about the deal, but she couldn't tell where. She asked no troublesome questions. I'll settle this with my conscience later, she thought. Flattery's what he needs just now, in large doses. I'll simply consider it soothing syrup for his nerves.

Finally, to her great relief, he said he'd not bother about the guest rooms or the wine, but take up the evening papers and read them in bed. "Fine," said Elin. "It'll do you good—we'll be up till all hours tomorrow, I suppose."

As soon as he'd gone upstairs she went quietly out of the house and down to Michael's cottage. The windows were lit—he was back then from his crazy errand! She ran along the path excitedly and at the sound of her steps Michael's great height blocked the door. "Who's that?" he asked sharply, then seeing her, burst out with the good news: "Oh, ma'am, I got them. I got everything. The truck's 'round at the back and three more coming in the morning. The garden'll be a picture of glory!"

"Plenty! I'll be out there the minute Mr. Bryant's left for the station, ma'am. I got wild stuff and tame, big things and little things, bright and full of bloom. And I got a great parcel of lemon verbena, I hadn't seen any since I was a kid at home. I love that sweet leaf! I can keep it in the greenhouse over the winter and plant it again next year."

"How did Letty stand the trip?'

"Letty did grand, ma'm. I've given her her supper and put her to bed. I'm going to pot up some of the wild things I brought with me, against the morning. And then tomorrow'll be the big day of planting. Saturday and Sunday whatever's gone bad I'll take out and put in something fresh. Oh, ma'am, you're going to be pleased."

Elin went back to the house conscious of enormous relief. She was tired, too, from the strain and worry. Her head ached with it. Better follow Phil's example and go to bed; she'd have plenty to do tomorrow. She thought of ridiculous things—how surprised the bugs and worms would be when they were snatched up and removed with their provender and burned! Her last waking thought was that she must snip off bits of Michael's prized lemon verbana for the finger bowls.

Friday Morning Before Party

In the morning she hustled Philip off, and his car was not down the drive before Michael and his cohorts were in the garden—they must, Elin thought, have been behind the bushes ready to spring. They went at it like an invading army and Michael drove them without mercy, but spared himself the least. Elin had never seen a man work with such fierce intensity. She watched, fascinated, but did not interfere. Van was inspired to help and toiled back and forth with his express wagon, and Letty's short legs ran after him for a while, but presently they both tired and went to play in their haven by the hedge-gate. The day was clear and favorable; the exhausting heat of the past few weeks had lifted with the first light wind and pale haze of the coming autumn.

The garden grew like a painting. Michael had raided the woods and swamps for high puce ironweed and white mallow and lavender aster. Their strong stems stood up well under this late transplanting. And he had brought masses of late gladiolus and phlox and gaudy, coarse rudbeckias and zinnias to be softened by the fringes of decorative wild grasses and solid, silvery masses of sedum spectabile. He had found a quantity of spider lily somewhere and divided it into accents of shape and color, and he had not forgotten border plants, sea-lavender, alyssum, dwarf marigolds, white and yellow violas. The slender leaves and indeterminate green of lemon verbena filled spaces among the gay flowers. The men staked and tied carefully and inconspicuously as they set in the pots, shoveled the dirt on at once for coverage, so that it was completed as they went along. There was no time for trial and change.

By mid-afternoon the pattern was clear, and even Michael stopped to look at it and wipe the salt sweat out of his eyes. His shirt and overalls were as wet as if he'd lain in water, and he was gaunt with effort. The other men stopped, too, straightened stiff, aching backs. "By God, we done it," said one. "I certa'ney neyer thought we would."

They fell to again and Elin, who had been listening above on the veranda, went inside to her own work. The flowers Philip had ordered for the house had come and she made an adrangement for the dinner table and filled vases for the other rooms. They were not very inspiring, these flowers, florists' specimens, big and gaudy. Elin did her best with them, but when she was done she realized that she had nothing for veranda or entrance.

Elin Congratulates Michael On Garden

She went down to Michael and the men and almost forgot her errand in the near view of their work. "Its simply wonderful!" she said. "It's the best garden I ever had. Oh, Michael, do you think it will stand up for three days?"

"It sure will, unless we get an earthquake. I'm going to give it a soaking the very last thing. It'll stand up for weeks I think."

She walked back and forth, admiring, exclaiming. Then she remembered. "If there's any of the wild stuff left over I'd like to put it in the big jars in front and up on the porch."

"There'll be plenty and I'd fill them for you, ma'am, but I doubt I have time. If you'll have one of the maids go down back of the greenhouse she can take anything that's there."

Elin went herself and brought up asters for the entrance and a fine bouquet of mallows and wild grass and ironweed for the veranda jars. It was almost 5 o'clock when she was done, time to dress. She called Van and saw him bathed and in clean white linen and then put on her own white linen with green belt and scarf of green-and-white stripes. It was one of her new dresses and she hoped Philip would not find it too simple. She was excited, now that it was almost time for the guests to come; her color was high; she looked unusually well. The triumph of the garden had given her confidence and gaiety.

She came down quickly, running over Philip's exactions in her mind. Bill Tench would come out with him on the 5:30, White would meet them and then must go back to meet Katie Thomson on the 6:15. The Coulters and the Parks were motoring—they might arrive at any moment. Tea and stronger drinks were ready on the veranda. Elin went to the kitchen for a word with Patsy, who seemed to have everything in line, cautioned Van not to bother Michael, who was now putting the sprinklers on the garden.

The house was full of golden light of late afternoon, the garden lay beneath in its new deceptive order and beauty, and Letty was waiting for her father at the little hedge-gate, a blue blob in the green and colorful pattern. "Can I just go down and talk to Letty?" asked Van, fidgeting about. "Mayn't I take her one of the cakes?"

"Yes, and take one yourself," said Elin. She heard voices in the hall and turned back. It was the Coulters, Rosa hoo-hoogin, high-pitched and giggling. Elin had hardly spoken to them when the Parks appeared and right behind them was Philip with Tench. Elin looked at Tench with curiosity; he was rather monkey-faced, but an easy, pleasing man who didn't seem a stranger.

Listen! with Glynn

Topical dramas, showing the impact on the average person of the emotional and economic changes in a world at war, are presenting top Hollywood and Broadway talent on "Theater of Today" as this blue-ribbon program enters its second year on WJSV and the Columbia network this month. It's heard every Saturday at noon.

The program began on CBS October 4, 1941, with Elissa Landi as its first star. At the outset the program emphasized current spot news, but is now developed to reflect a broader aspect of changing world conditions.

This type of program, which requires special techniques in writing, music, production and direction, has been developed under the supervision of Cameron Hawley, from whose pen have come the bulk of the plays produced on "Theater of Today."

Each drama mirrors the effect on the average person of world news trends, and mirrors it vividly, not only through expert script preparation, but also because of the top-flight stars who portray the central character.

Important world events and national policy changes require the producers of the program to work with up-to-the-second knowledge of the news. Often a complete new drama is written to reflect national policy changes and new music fitting the mood of the drama has to be written and rehearsed.

Among the topflight stars who have appeared on the series during its year on the air are Helen Hayes, Sylvia Sidney, Gloria Swanson, Madge Evans, Fay Wray, Douglass Montgomery, Eddie Dowling, Diana Barrymore, Franchot Tone, Karen Morley, Dorothy McGuire, Jo Ann Sayers, Heather Angel, Glenda Farrell, Rosemary Lane, Ellen Drew, Vincent Price, John Boles, Luise Rainer, Otto Kruger, Madeleine Carroll, Burgess Meredith, Selena Royle, Martha Scott, Jeanne Cagney, Patricia Peardon, Jane Cowl, Ralph Bellamy, Ray Milland and Eva Le Gallienne.

"Theater of Today" opens with a report of the news from the CBS news room. One piece of news affects the program as it begins its second year. Announcer George Bryan, who has been the news reporter since the program's inception, joined the United States Army Air Force following his boardcast of October 3. His place is taken by Fielden Farrington.

Otherwise the original supporting cast—Elizabeth Reller, the Quaker Girl; Announcer Tom Shirley, Director Kenneth Webb and Conductor Harold Levey—continue.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

One of the ways to offset the handicap of poor cards is to learn to bid them skillfully, for some poor hands can be bid with safety provided the bidder never goes over the value of the game, slam or part score that the opponents may be headed toward.

To set back and let the opponents bird call happily their contract when one or even two bids can be made with your cards is to play a weak and "give up" game. Every hand that has any sort of bidding power should be bid to the hilt to harass the enemy and possibly break him. This sort of guerilla warfare if handled dexterously will enormously cut down losses due to "poor cards."

Questions on Bidding

Today we offer two questions on defensive bidding and a third question which involves a point on play.

1. Sitting South, with neither side vulnerable, you hold these cards:

3. This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a four-spade contract and West opens the king of hearts. How do you handle your cards so as to take ten tricks?

Answers

1. Although South's hand is strong in playing strength, it is practically worthless, defensively, except for the ace of spades. South would be wise to jump immediately to four hearts and attempt to block the probable game for the opponents.

2. Here again South's hand is worthless defensively, and after East's opening bid of one spade it looks as though North and South were pretty certain to reach a game or slam. Not vulnerable, South can come in with a sacrfice overcall of four diamonds, which at the worst will be set four tricks for a loss of 700 points. Risking this maximum penalty is better than passing and letting the adversaries bid unhampered to a successful slam.

3. South makes four-odd by refusing a finesse in order to set up a side suit for a discard. He wins the opening lead with dummy's heart ace and sees that he has one possible loser in every suit. He leads a small spade from the board and puts on the ace, follows with the trump king, refusing the finesse, even though this play gives him a better chance of catching the spade queen than by playing for a drop. If the suit is adversely split 3-2, the queen will usually be in the hand holding three. But now he can bring in the diamond suit before dummy's club ace is forced out. With the time element in his favor South knocks out the diamond ace, regains the lead with the club ace and discards a losing club on North's thirteenth diamond. South makes four spades, losing a heart, a diamond and the trump queen.

Now that declarer is defeated if he tries the trump finesse. West wins the queen and shifts to a club, taking out the ace. When declarer leads diamonds, the opponents win and immediately cash a club trick. South loses a trick in each suit for down one.

War Powers Act Attacked As Illegal

Charging that the War Powers Act is unconstitutional in its delegation of wide authority to the President, defense attorneys in District Court yesterday attacked an indictment accusing two former WPB officials and three machine tools dealers of conspiracy to defraud the Government by withholding vital tools from war production.

Defendants in the case are Robert Blee Rhoads, former chief of the WPB's Available Tools Section; Ralph Lamont Glaser, his assistant; Louis E. Emerman, president of a Chicago used machine tools firm, and Clarence J. O'Brien and Frank L. O'Brien, jr., of the O'Brien Machinery Co., Philadelphia.

All were indicted August 31 and specifically charged with conspiracy to prevent allocation to war contractors of 71 critically needed machine tools, with a market value of more than $150,000.

The dismissed WPB men are said to have made a profit of $30,000 as part of the alleged plot.

Attorney Warren E. Magee, representing the O'Briens, argued before Justice Bolitha J. Laws that the indictment was insufficient because it was based, he said, on a congressional act that constituted an illegal delegation of power to the President. The well-known Schechter case, in which the National Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional, was cited in support of the contention.

Justice Laws continued the hearing until Monday when Arthur B. Caldwell and George M. Fay, special assistants to the Attorney General, will reply to the objections to the true bill.

Va. Methodist Bishop Makes Pulpit Changes

Several changes in nearby Virginia pulpits were included in the pastoral assignments announced yesterday by Bishop W. W. Peele at the close of the Virginia Methodist Conference at Richmond, Va. All appointments are effective immediately.

Dr. C. C. Bell, for three years pastor of the Washington Street Methodist Church, Alexandria, Va., was appointed district superintendent of the Lynchburg district, while Dr. H. P. Clarke, superintendent of the Lynchburg district, comes to the Washington Street Church as pastor.

The Rev. Harry W. Craver, for five years pastor of Central Methodist Church, Arlington, goes to the Elm Street Methodist Church, Portsmouth, and will be succeeded by the Rev. J. H. Carroll.

The Rev. H. P. Myers, of Danville, Va., comes to Clarendon Methodist Church as successor to the Rev. George G. Oliver.

Dr. Rasmussen To Be Guest Preacher

The Rev. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen returns to Luther Place Memorial Church pulpit tomorrow morning as guest preacher. Dr. Rasmussen, after more than ten years as pastor at Luther Place, was called to the Gettysburg Lutheran Seminary as professor of Systematic Theology. He has chosen "Faith Makes a Difference" as his sermon subject, and will officiate at the sacrament of baptism preceding the sermon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Urhich, a blind couple, will be the guest speakers at the Young People's Luther League program at 7 o'clock. They will exhibit the work of "the seeing eye" dog, and will have their own dog with them. A fellowship hour will follow the service.

"WE ALL WEAR A SIZE 13"

JUNIOR MISS...A SIZE - NOT AN AGE

"Ducky" Dobbins is 16. She was christened Deborah, but her Dad thought she was such a darling "duck" . . . and now the entire Cadet Corps thinks the same. She's president of the J-Hi Dramatic Club . . . was the first Freshman to be pledged to any sorority and she swears by The Young Washingtonian Shop to keep her in "her public's" eye. As witness the outfit she's wearing combining a checked skirt with two-tone jacket. One of many to be found in The Young Washingtonian Shop....12.95

Katherine, aged 26, is "Miss Andrews" down at Security Exchange Commission where she works . . . but she's "Kate darling" to a young Lieutenant in the Navy Department. And she, too, swears by The Young Washingtonian Shop to keep her sleek and efficient looking at her desk . . . and wholly irresistible at a table for two at the Mayflower . . . so she chooses a smart, peplum suit-dress in wool with black braid trim—and there are many other styles just as smart in The Young Washingtonian Shop...16.95

Elizabeth Morrison has a boy at Prep School and a girl graduating from Junior High in June, but you'd never, NEVER dream it. Her figure's petite and she's proud as a peacock to walk into The Young Washingtonian Shop any day and find clothes like the slim-fitting dress she's wearing of wool jersey with a tri-color top (properly labeled as to wool content), one of a large collection in The Young Washingtonian Shop at the same price.....17.95
